Conferees Likely to Kill 60-Day Delay In Draft Bill

Conscription Seen Enacted This Week; Adjournment By Sept. 25 Sought

Swift conference agreement to eliminate the House-voted, 60-day delay provision in the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription Bill was predicted in Capitol Hill circles last night.

Weary, election-plagued legislators, at the same time, talked hopefully of Congressional adjournment not later than September 25.

There were numerous indications that the Senate and House conferees would drop the amendment by Representative Fish to postpone actual conscription for a final two-month trial period of voluntary enlistment. Four of the five House members appointed to compose differences between the House and Senate versions of the measure voted against the Fish provision on the floor, it was pointed out, while the Senate twice rejected similar moves.

Chairman May, Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, who heads the House conferees, remarked last night that if the House recedes on the delay amendment and the Senate yields on the House age limits, providing for registration of all men from 21 through 44, and on the House provision for conscription of industry, the resulting measure would be a "fine" one.

Sheppard to Head Group

Senate conferees are to be named today, with Chairman Sheppard, of Texas, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, heading them. Immediate sessions of the joint committee are planned and Majority Leader Rayburn predicted last night that the conference report could be acted on Wednesday or Thursday. That the completed measure could be sent to the White House by the end of this week was predicted on both sides of the Capitol.

Standing then in the way of adjournment, or at least a recess until after the November election, will be only the excess profits tax bill, a deficiency appropriations measure carrying additional funds for defense and other purposes, and a few bills of minor nature.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, last night expressed belief that the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is a member, could reach agreement on the excess profits tax legislation and turn over immediately to drafting experts the task of wording committee conclusions. Presentation of the measure to the Senate either tomorrow or Wednesday was held possible.

Funds for Naval Bases

Little time is expected to be required for the deficiency appropriations, which probably will have to include funds to finance the conscription machinery and money with which to start work on nearby naval bases for which sites have been granted this country by Great Britain.

Majority Leader Rayburn mentioned the possibility of adjournment late next week. George, how-

President Heeds His Own Call

Roosevelts and Royal Guest Join Nation's Peace Prayer

St. James' Church at Hyde Park Crowded For Service; Crown Princess Martha Accompanies Presidential Party

By International News Service

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 8.—President Roosevelt bowed his head in prayer today "for the delivery of all people from selfishness, hatred and revenge," because "we feel that we are on the brink of the greatest catastrophe of all time."

The quotations came from the sermon of the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector of Hyde Park St. James' Episcopal Church, who prayed for world peace in response to the President's proclamation setting this Sunday aside as a special day of imploration for the whole Nation.

"Can the hand of the oppressor be stayed?" asked the minister. "The President of the United States thinks it can, with God's help. That is why he has called upon us to join in prayer."

Seated beside the President in the second left-hand pew, which he occupies as senior warden of the church, were Mrs. Roosevelt, the Crown Princess Martha of Norway and the latter's lady in waiting, Countess Osigaard. Every pew was crowded with parishioners and those who had been attracted by the presence of the Roosevelts and European refugee royalty.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson's service was one of supplication for a continuance of justice and freedom throughout the world. His text came from the Book of Daniel (3:ix): "And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes."

Probing the present-day significance of this text, he said:

"'Fasting and sackcloth and ashes today may be a mere symbolism,

All of Army Found in Need Of Training

War Games Reveal Inadequate Equipment And 'Green' Officers

By Hanson W. Baldwin

Copyright by the New York Times

New York, Sept. 8.—Inadequate equipment, a high percetnage of "green" officers and raw recruits in all units of the Regular Army and National Guard, and serious deficiencies in staff and command work and even in the elementary fundamentals of "soldiering" were revealed by Army maneuvers last month.

The exercises in five different areas of the country were three weeks of intensive training for about 291,000 Regulars, National Guardsmen and Reserves from all the 48 States. The forces represented from 75 to 85 per cent of the Nation's mobile field forces, and the officers, men and equipment were a cross-section of the land power of the country.

All of the Guard's Infantry divisions, 18 in number; three of the Guard's four organized Cavalry divisions, and the five Regular Army Infantry divisions and one Cavalry division, the only fully organized divisions in the Army, took part.

Of them all, not a single division is ready for immediate action, and even the Regular Army divisions are well below peace strength, half or more of their officers are Reserve officers with little experience, and from 30 to 50 per cent of their men are recruits.

Handicapped by their shortage in officers, men and equipment and their urgent need for training, none of the Regular Army divisions could be considered qualified combat troops in less than three to six months, in the opinion of most of their commanding officers.

The Guard divisions, naturally markedly inferior to the Regular units because of their lack of op-

Roosevelt's Plan May Be 'Prelude To War,' He Warns

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 8.—Dr. Henry L. Wriston, president of Brown University, tonight announced his support of Wendell L. Willkie on the ground that President Roosevelt's conscription proposal may be "the tragic prelude to war."

In a telegram to the G. O. P. nominee, Wriston declared that Mr. Roosevelt's "fatuous promise in 1936, repeated in 1940, that American youth would never again have to fight was one of the precise factors which made conscription inevitable."

Wriston contended that America's "government of laws, not of men" is "seriously in danger."

"The controls of law upon the President," he said, "have been steadily relaxed. In each emergency he has asked for extraordinary power until he himself has said that in hands less 'liberal' such power would be dangerous. It is a complete admission that we are on the brink of a government of men, rather than law."

Willkie Tour Plans Ready

By the Associated Press

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 8.—Wendell L. Willkie completed today arrangements for the 12-car special train which will be his home on a forthcoming 15-day campaigning tour.

Accompanied by Mrs. Willkie and his son, Philip, the Republican Presidential nominee will occupy a private car. At the rear, he will have a small lounge where he can rest and chat with his family between brief stops for platform talks.

More than 100 persons will accompany the candidate, including his personal and research staff, train operators, newspapers and

Carol Arrives in Switzerland With a 'Mystery' Woman

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 8.—Carol of Rumania, a man without a country, rested tonight in free Switzerland—one of the few enduring refuges in a turbulent Europe which no longer offers a gracious living to former kings.

In flight since Friday from Bucharest, where his 18-year-old son, the former Crown Prince Mihai, is the nominal ruler while a military dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu, actually holds power, the banished monarch crossed the Swiss-Italian border at Chiasso late this afternoon.

[In Bucharest, Gen. Antonescu issued a series of decrees sequestering Carol's stock holdings, credits and titles, with an estimated value of millions of dollars.]

After a 22-minute wait during which Alexandre Guaranesco, Rumanian Minister to Switzerland, and a representative of the Swiss government, boarded the train, the ten Rumanian coaches and a dining car proceeded to the resort town of Lugano, where Carol alighted.

He was wearing civilian clothes, a soft gray hat and eyeglasses. He appeared to be in good spirits.

When Carol emerged, crossing the sidewalk to enter an automobile, the crowd cheered. Carol looked up, smiled and waved his hand, and the car rolled swiftly to the hotel where an apartment had been engaged for the night.

How long he would remain in Lugano, or in Switzerland, were matters of conjecture.

Just as puzzling was the question of whether red-haired Magda Lu-

Maine Votes Today, First Test of 1940

Republicans Nearly Ignore the Election; Democrats Are Not Boastful but Hopeful

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Portland, Me., Sept. 8.—Closely watched by the Nation, Maine voters go to the polls tomorrow to elect their State and Federal representatives—the first and only test of strength between the Republicans and Democrats at the ballot box before the Presidential vote November 5.

Republican campaigners, in an eleventh-hour attempt to overcome signs of overconfidence and apathy in their ranks, tonight called on the voters to make the election "a message to the Nation" against the third-term attempt and a forecast of victory for Wendell Willkie.

Politicians are inclined to measure Maine's result this year more by the margin of the majority it seems likely to give to the Republicans than by a strict party victory.

Democrats Hopeful

Democrats are making no boasts but are frankly hopeful. Their hopes center principally on the proven vote-getting abilities of Louis J. Brann, who won the governorship in 1932 and 1934 and is now running for United States Senator against Representative Ralph O. Brewster, a former Republican Governor.

Led by Paul V. McNutt, the social security administrator, the Democrats have waged a vigorous State-wide campaign, which continued through today, and stressed the issue of reelection of President Roosevelt. Senator Wagner, of New York, also came into the State for some speeches.

In contrast to other years the Republican national organization has almost ignored the Maine election However, at the wind-up yesterday Oren Root, jr., chairman of the Associated Willkie Clubs of America, came from New York to urge the voters to the polls as a testimonial to the Willkie campaign.

Touches National Note

Representative Brewster, hurrying home from debate on the conscription bill, again pitched the Republican drive on a national scale in concluding the campaign tonight.

"The eyes and ears of the country are turned tonight to Maine to learn our verdict on the great issues with which the Nation is now faced," he told a Young Republican rally at Long Lake this afternoon.

"Maine's message to the Nation may have a profound effect in start-

Planes Batter Docks, Shipping and Big Gun Emplacements Hour After Hour

By International News Service

A Southeast Coast Town, England (Monday), Sept. 9.—British bombers, dashing across the English Channel, delivered a new and terrific pasting to Germany's blitzkrieg invasion bases through the night and early today.

In the wake of a similar bombardment Saturday night, Royal Air Force squadrons in relays pounded German shipping, docks and gun emplacements at Boulogne, Calais and Cap Gris Nez.

The attack began at dusk Sunday and was sustained until after midnight.

Cap Gris Nez, where German Big Bertha artillery batteries are emplaced only 22 miles from Dover, appeared to have been the main target.

Reverberations of the bomb explosions rattled windows on the English side of the Channel. Flashes of the blasts and waving searchlight Fingers could be clearly seen from the Dover Cliffs. Heavy German antiaircraft fire incessantly punctuated the rumbling explosions.

[For the second night in succession, Berlin escaped a visit from the Royal Air Force, International News Service reported. In view of the shattering retaliatory raids on London, the 4,000,000 persons in the Reich capital were prepared for a large scale attack.

[But when it failed to materialize by midnight, the residents of the city went quietly to bed.]

Bombings Offset Threat of Invasion

London, Sept. 8 (AP).—The threat of invasion by sea was offset by intensive British bombing of channel ports Saturday night, the air ministry declared tonight.

"Enemy threats of invasion by the sea were countered Saturday night by a series of air attacks on Channel ports during which extensive damage to shipping and harbor installations was inflicted by aircraft of the bomber command," said the bulletin.

"Determined attacks on enemy shipping in the occupied Channel ports were pressed home by our bomber squadrons last night in spite of poor visibility in vigorous defenses."

The admiralty reported meanwhile that British dive-bombers and torpedo seaplanes of the fleet air arm had attacked two German supply ships off the coast of Norway

Italian Fliers Are Reported Over London

Fascist Circles Say Invasion by Land Will Follow Air Attacks

By the United Press

Rome, Sept. 8.—Reports circulated tonight that Italian planes are participating in the terrific aerial bombardment of London which some Fascists assert marks the start of an attempt to land soldiers in the British Isles.

According to these reports, which were not confirmed, Italian aviation is determined to avenge the recent British bombing of northern Italy.

The bombardment of the London area is regarded here as not only a reprisal for British attacks upon Berlin but also as the start of an intensified phase of the Axis push against the British Empire along all fronts.

[The air attacks on London may be intended as the prelude to an attempted invasion, the authoritative British Press Association's air correspondent said.]

According to information available here, the present air attacks against England are the second of three stages of warfare. These are described by Fascist quarters as:

1. Armed reconnaissance over England.
2. Terrific bombardments, of which this week-end marks the beginning.
3. The landing of troops.

These phases are seen by Fascist quarters as having a parallel in Africa, in the Mediterranean and Red Sea, with the Red Sea pres-

Ten-Hour Attack Is Worst On Metropolis to Date; Goering Assumes Personal Charge of Aerial Assault

The War Today

THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN blazes into full-fledged blitzkrieg as Reichsmarshal Goering takes personal command of a reinforced Nazi air force which hurls against bomb-and-fire-scarred London the biggest air raid in history—surpassing Saturday night's assault which left 400 dead, 1,400 injured, vast damage.

GERMANY'S BIGGEST bombers, carrying "super-bombs," pound London from twilight to dawn; one cluster drops close to Parliament, hundreds of others carry unestimated death and destruction throughout London.

GERMAN PILOTS admit Britain's ground-fire is "incredibly accurate," but claim British fighter-plane opposition is weakening—but Britain lists Nazi losses at over 100 planes for the week-end.

WHETHER DER TAG has arrived is still uncertain: Britons admit this raid was the worst yet but not the worst possible, but the R. A. F. concentrates its offensive power on the French Channel coast, whence invasion's main thrust might come, and Rome and Berlin both hint the week-end raids are the prelude to the "final stage."

New Weapon

By the Associated Press

Berlin, (Monday) Sept. 9.—Germany loosed on London today her biggest bombing planes laden with new "super-bombs."

Both the craft and the explosives are of the deadly types reserved exclusively for Nazi knockout blows on special objectives.

In these new smashes in a concentrated effort to give the English defenses a paralyzing shock, Germany obviously sought a quick showdown in the war.

Everything indicated that the drive now would be continued with relentless fury to the full extent of the Reich's powers.

Goering in Charge

Speculation on whether Der Tag had come centered on the fact that Reichsmarshal Goering had assumed personal direction of the attack, which seemed unlimited in time and in the number of planes participating.

It was believed Goering would not personally associate himself with anything but a major war action.

Returning German airmen agreed that the British antiaircraft fire continued vigorously, but conveyed the impression that British fighter-plane defenses were losing force.

Some German fighter pilots said they escorted bombers to and from England without having anything to do in the way of defense against British planes.

Tosses Planes About

Fragmentary reports from Nazi bases in France and the Low Countries stressed the new attacks on London Harbor and industrial regions, claiming factories, arsenals and fuel stores were destroyed.

There were occasional brief reports of attacks on Liverpool, Manchester, Southampton and other cities, but the assault on London overshadowed all else.

In mentioning the "superbombs" for the first time, authorized German sources gave no description, but it was reported one such great missile was capable of leveling anything in a radius of 500 yards, and

Blitzkrieg Steps Up

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), Sept. 9.—German bombers striking at the vital heart of Britain's Empire gouged hard at London today in the longest and most ferocious bombardment of the war—nine hours and 41 minutes of fire-streaked, bomb-blasting horror.

The raid began at 7:58 p. m. Sunday, as night closed in, shrieked on with rising intensity through the dark hours, and finally ended at 5:39 a. m., as dawn drew on.

All observers agreed that this furious onslaught was the worst in Britain's history—worse even than the 8-hour and 18-minute raid of Saturday night and Sunday morning, which was disclosed today to have killed at least 400 persons and seriously wounded 1,400.

Fire in Heart of City

Flames from a new cluster of bombs licked heavenward in the heart of the city a few moments before the all-clear signal shrilled.

Respite, however brief, had come to this sleepless capital.

Just before the end, heavy explosions reverberated in the vicinity of Parliament.

[In the closing moments of the raid, International News Service said, Nazi bombers "wheeling high above the great flame-reddened smoke clouds were dropping their lethal cargoes on Piccadilly, the Strand, newspaperdom's Fleet street—a section of the city where no possible military target could exist."]

The Associated Press building in the center of the area ringed by dropping bombs was repeatedly shaken by the heaviest shocks yet felt in the capital.

Rooftop observers saw a big cluster of heavy bombs drop in the general direction of the houses of Parliament, but there was no immediate indication where they struck.

Tactics Are Varied

A shower of bricks fell on the roof of the Associated Press Building after a heavy bomb exploded 150 yards away.

The wave-bombing came as a new broadside against London after Nazi planes had presented a variety of tactics of onslaught.

Dive-bombers strafed the outer areas of the city.

Other planes, incessantly circling, showered incendiary and explosive projectiles on both the inner and outer sections of the capital of the empire.

In the opening stages, starting at dusk Sunday, the great attack followed the same pattern as the Sat-

Northwest Europe Faces Food Lack, Wickard Asserts

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard said today that "continental Europe as a whole will not face famine this winter."

"In certain countries of northwestern Europe, however, where a large part of food supplies have been imported from overseas there will be marked shortages of food and resultant acute distress . . ." he said

"Account must be taken of the fact that armies of occupation will subsist largely if not wholly on supplies of the invaded regions and that large quantities of livestock and certain other supplies are being shipped to Germany from the former surplus producing countries such as The Netherlands and Denmark."

'Hitler Killed' Report Starts U. S. Investigation

The person who "assassinated" Hitler yesterday on the telegraph circuit linking weather stations at major airports in the East "isn't going to find it so funny" when his identity is discovered, officials of the Civil Aeronautics Board said last night.

"Hitler killed" was the faked message transmitted early in the day over wires leased by the Weather Service from the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Weather Bureau officials and investigators of the Aeronautics Board said they were making every effort to learn the point of origin of the message. One official declared it was even possible that the wire might have been tapped to send the words.

'Blackout' Halts Legion Meeting

Berlin, N. H., Sept. 8 (AP).—Five thousand persons attending an "Americanism" program fled from a park tonight when conditions became too European.

A blackout followed by a wave of gas drove the audience from the park while American Legionnaires investigated. The blackout was the result of wire trouble. The gas attack was caused by gases from a nearby pulp mill.

Two French Ships To Leave U. S. Port

San Pedro, Calif., Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Two French ships which have been anchored in the harbor here since the French collapse, tonight were preparing to leave under secret orders.

Officers of the freighters Wisconsin and Vannes said their destination was San Francisco, but members of the crews said they expected to be taken into custody by British destroyers.

Bomb Falls in Shaft

1,000,000-to-1 Shot Kills 14 Of 1,000 in Air Raid Shelter

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 8.—A huge air-raid shelter far below the surface of the ground in London's congested East End district presented a tragic picture today as a result of last night's big German bombing attack.

The shelter, which accommodated more than 1,000 people, received a direct hit in its one vulnerable spot—the ventilator shaft measuring only 1 foot by 3 feet. By a million to one chance a high-explosive bomb plummeted down through the shaft and burst amid hundreds of working-class families just as the men, women and children were about to settle down to sleep there for the night.

Splintered baby carriages, broken toys, blackened gas masks, remnants of sandwiches and tattered piles of bed clothing and pillows testified today to the scenes of almost indescribable horror that took place when the bomb exploded.

Strangely enough, although the shelter was crowded, only 14 people were killed and 40 injured. Many others, however, suffered from shock.

Survivors related pitiful stories today. Some mothers holding infants in their arms were killed and others knocked off their feet while clutching their babies. In one family three children were killed but the grief-stricken parents escaped without a scratch.

One man crawling through the wreckage in search of his wife found her—lying dead.

A woman who lapsed into unconsciousness when wounded in the

O'Mahoney Group Urges U. S. Provide Or Guarantee Funds

Two possible methods of Government aid in supplying "venture" capital to small business firms—through insured bank loans or through regional lending corporations jointly financed by the Government and private business—were advanced yesterday in a report by the Temporary Economic Committee.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, the committee chairman, said in a statement accompanying the report that "the principal obstacle to the prosperous development of small business is the difficulty experienced by small businessmen in securing venture capital with which to finance their operations."

The report was prepared by employes of the Securities Commission who studied the question of Government aid to small business under instructions from the economic committee. The committee has been investigating whether monopolies exist in the business system.

While advancing the two possible methods of aid, the report made no recommendations.

Explains Banks' Problem

Discussing the insurance of loans, O'Mahoney said that local banks had found it difficult, "if not impossible," to make the sort of loans needed. The guarantee device, he declared, "would be designed to promote the extension of needed credit which cannot now be secured because the assets which small business can offer are not as marketable as necessary to justify the ordinary commercial bank in accepting them as the basis for loans . . ."

The position adopted by the commercial banker, that the funds at his disposal belong not to him but to his depositors, and, therefore, can be loaned only to individuals and enterprises whose assets and future prospects make repayment certain, is fundamental to sound banking practice."

O'Mahoney added that while the report recognized that the making 'of capital' loans by commercial banks was open to serious question," it asserted that the practice nevertheless merits further thought in considering the entire problem of financing small business."

U. S. Would Be Guarantor

Consideration should be given, the Senator asserted, to the advisability, under suitable safeguards, for the Federal Reserve banks or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation assuming the role of guarantor in such loans."

The second possiblity—creation of regional finance corporations—was suggested some time ago by Jerome Frank, chairman of the SEC. This proposal, O'Mahoney said, would enable the Government to cooperate in the establishment of such institutions by the purchase of preferred stock, while allowing private capital to supply, through the common stock, the real venture capital and to direct the management."

Both methods, he contended, would have the effect of providing Government aid in a field which is not now served, without imposing any degree of Government control upon the private enterprise to be fostered."

The train will include a lounge car for visitors and a small lounge for Willkie's staff.

Willkie spent much of today resting and reading. He did some additional work on his Western speeches and chatted with neighbors who dropped in for a visit at his red-brick home.

The nominee's headquarters reported he had received a number of messages expressing approval of his declaration last night that he never would lead the country into any European war.

Willkie, who drove to Memorial Park here for a showing of Republican campaign movies, said in a brief address that Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, recently had charged that the Republican Party was the party of appeasement.

Declaring that "appeasement" could have various interpretations, Willkie added that if Wallace "meant working out cmpromises with the dictators then he was 100 per cent wrong."

But, Willkie continued, if Wallace meant that the Republican Party "is the party of peace" then "he spoke the truth."

Reaffirms Anti-War Stand

"I shall never lead this country into any European War," the candidate continued. "And when I say that I mean it."

He reiterated previous statements that he wanted to give Great Britain all possible aid short of war, but emphasized that such aid should not involve this country in the European conflict.

Willkie, who will leave here Thursday, will spend the intervening days resting, conferring by telephone with Republican leaders and working on speeches.

His headquarters received word that members of Cincinnati Willkie Clubs would come here in a motor caravan tomorrow. The Republican Ladies' Club, of Rush County, arranged a reception for Mrs. Willkie, a "home town girl," tomorrow afternoon.

Crowds gathered on Willkie's front lawn throughout the afternoon. Periodically, he came to the front porch waveda nd thanked them for visiting him.

The nominee's only caller was Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of Columbia University's School of Journalism.

Press to Hear Defense Roads Plan Today

$137,500,000 to Be Spent on Highways In Next Two Years

By Edward Ryan

John M. Carmody will hold his first press conference as Federal Works Administrator today to outline the workings of the new defense highway program.

The program was approved when the President Friday signed a bill allocating $137,500,00 for road construction and improvement in each of the next two fiscal years.

One section of the bill permits the Commissioner of Public Roads, Thomas H. MacDonald to give priority in highway work to projects necessary for national defense.

MacDonald's agency, the Public Roads Administration, is surveying the Nation's highway system. Its preliminary estimates call for 80,000 miles of highways and 2,000 bridges to be repaired, rebuilt, and strengthened to make the network function more smoothly.

Carmody is expected to tell about the progress of this survey, and also to clear up questions that have been coming in to Federal Works officials about the effect of the defense highway work on normal highway construction.

Officials pointed out that the legislation for the defense highway program carried permission, not a mandatory order, for the Public Roads Commissioner to do the job.

Jobs—Nearly 3,400 persons have been placed on the Civil Service Commission's registers during the past few days as candidates eligible for junior professional jobs in the Government service. They were examined for the pooitions last spring.

New civil service exams have been opened for regional agents, trade and industrial education, $4,600 a year; special agents in trade and industrial education, $3,800, and special agent for research in industrial education, $4,600, in the U. S. Office of Education.

President Roosevelt has signed an Executive order boosting the chances of former "noncivil service" Government employes to get back into the service in temporary defense agency jobs.

The order permits any employe with a good record, who was involuntarily separated from the service after June 30 and who had been in a Government job for at least six months before that, to be given temporary appointments to civil service defense jobs for the duration of the defense program.

An earlier order of the President had limited this employment chance to those who had lost their old jobs since January 1, 1940.

The technique for an employe to obtain a job under this arrangement is to have his name placed on the Civil Service Commission's replacement list. The list is used in supplying the names of job candidates in the defense agencies.

About 500 persons have landed jobs through the replacement list, out of 1,500 whose names went on it after the list was established on June 27.

A majority of the names on the list, officials said, are those of former employes of the Public Works Administration and Works Projects Administration. These two agencies alone have dropped about 3,500 employes since June 30 last year.

United on Defense

On national issues, both the Republican and Democratic candidates have championed all national defense proposals.

On the conscription bill, Representatives Brewster and Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, who is running for reelection from the Second Congressional District, supported the bill, and Representative James C. Oliver, of the First District, who also is running for reelection, opposed it.

The candidates for Governor are Sumner Sewall, Republican, of Bath, and Fulton J. Redman, Democrat, of Bar Harbor. Sewall was a World War ace and is president of the State Senate. Redman is a former lumber man and was once publisher of a Portland newspaper.

Showers Forecast

Brewster and Brann are contending for the Senate seat held for 24 years by Senator Frederick Hale, who did not stand for reelection. In 1936 Brann was defeated by only 4,000 votes for the Senate by Senator Wallace H. White, jr., the veteran Republican legislator.

Reports of probable showers for tomorrow have not helped the feelings of the Republicans much. The Republican leaders believe they must count on a large turnout, approximating 300,000 votes, to pile up any majority which might be considered impressive.

Busy Political Week

Maine's election today will inaugurate the political season's busiest campaign week.

Besides the election of a Senator, three Representatives, Governor and State officers in Maine, primaries will be held in nine other States—the largest number of primary elections in any week of this election year—and candidates will be selected by committees in Georgia.

Ten States will make nominations for 59 seats in the House. Six of the ten will select nominees for seven Senate seats.

Senate Primaries

Vermont will name candidates for two Senate seats, while candidates for one Senate seat each will be chosen in Arizona, Michigan, Minnesota, New Mexico and Washington.

Eight of the primaries will be held on Tuesday—in Arizona, Colorado, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Vermont and Washington. Georgia committees make their Congressional nominations Wednesday and New Mexico voters nominate in a Saturday primary.

The veteran Senator Ashurst is seeking renomination on the Democratic ticket in Arizona. In Michigan, Senator Vandenberg is up for renomination on the Republican ticket. Senator Louis Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, is retiring to accept a Federal judgeship, and it is a wide-open race for the Democratic nomination in his State.

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Laborite), is running for the Republican nomination in Minnesota. The other Minnesota seat was made vacant a week ago, when Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Laborite), was killed in an airplane accident. Gov. Harold E. Stassen is expected either to appoint a successor to Lundeen next week or to call for a special election to name his successor.

Chavez Opposes Dempsey

In New Mexico, Senator Chavez is opposed in the Democratic primary by Representative Jack Dempsey. This throws open the race for the Democratic nomination to the House.

Vermont is selecting nominees for two Senate seats because of the death of Senator Ernest W. Gibson and the expiration of Senator Austin's term. Gibson's son, who was appointed to fill the vacancy, is not a candidate for the G. O. P. nomination. Austin is seeking renomination as a Republican.

Official Sees Teamster Vote For Roosevelt

Union Expected to Indorse Third Term At Conclave Here

The Nation's union teamsters, 500,000 strong, will swing behind President Roosevelt's reelection campaign this week, casting aside a 40-year tradition of nonpartisanship, a high union official said last night.

The Post was informed that a resolution indorsing a third term will be submitted to the fourteenth convention of the A. F. of L.'s International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which opens at 10 a. m. today at Constitution Hall.

The Post's informant, who would not permit his name to be used, said that the resolution would be introduced sometime after the President addresses the delegates. The President's speech is scheduled for 9:30 p. m. Wednesday.

"Couldn't Be Stopped"

Thomas L. Hughes, gray-haired secretary-treasurer of the international union, said that he "couldn't tell what resolutions might be introduced," but added:

"Up to now political issues have never entered our conventions. But a third-term resolution certainly would not be ruled out of order this week. If such a resolution were introduced, there wouldn't be a chance in the world of stopping it."

Several New York locals of the union already have indorsed the third-term movement, and Daniel J. Tobin, the teamster's international president, recently resigned as administrative assistant to President Roosevelt to head the Democratic National Committee's labor bureau.

More than 1,000 burly delegates to the convention crowded through the Mayflower Hotel lobby yesterday to present their credentials at the convention headquarters in the hotel. About 1,500 are expected to arrive before this morning's opening session.

"Take Over" Hotel Lobby

Plans for the delegates to attend the Washington-Philadelphia baseball game yesterday were rained out, and hundreds of the brawny teamsters—well-dressed, but tough-looking and rough-speaking—flooded the luxurious hotel lobby, while the Mayflower's regular clientele edged carefully in and out of the Connecticut avenue entrance.

With union membership skyrocketed to 468,000, from 135,000 five years ago, when the last convention was held in Portland, Oreg., the delegates will face many serious organizational problems at this week's sessions.

Secession from the A. F. L. may also come up for discussion, one official said. Tobin, in recent years, has been a bitter critic of the A. F. L. executive council's opposition to some New Deal measures.

NLRB Assailed By 2 Republicans

Democrats Boast Of Aids to Labor On Radio Forum

While Democratic spokesmen boasted of the passage of labor laws, two Republicans sharply criticized administration of the legislation in a radio debate last night on "Which Party Offers More for the Future of Labor?"

Senator Clyde M. Reed (Republican, of Kansas, charged the National Labor Relations Board with "maladministration," and used the terms "biased, unfair, uncertain, outrageous" in referring to administration of law under its wing. He was one of four speakers on the American Forum of the Air over WOL and the Mutual network.

Senator Reed said he would throw the Board "out of the window." He added, "If Willkie doesn't, he'll disappoint me," after Representative T. V. Smith (Democrat), of Illinois, asked if that statement represented Republican sentiment. Reed said he spoke only as a senator, but that he thought he reflected a "fairly general opinion" of the Board.

Thomas Hits G. O. P.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, lead-off speaker in the debate, said:

"Democrats have their record to offer, with a promise built on past performance. The Republicans have just this to offer. They say, 'We can administer these Democratic institutions as well or better than can Democrats.' Yet the Republican Party has no record of performance of its own, and what is more shameful, not even a record of cooperation and helpfulness as a minority party."

Representative Gerald W. Landis (Republican), of Indiana, said: "What the Wage-Hour Act needs is an opportunity to prove itself. It has been hamstrung from the beginning because of inadequate funds for enforcement in administration. It should be given a chance so that thousands of underpaid workers in this country will have their chance to secure a decent living.

"As a member of the House Labor Committee, I contend the Wage-Hour Act should be preserved and strengthened.

"I know the Wagner Act is not perfect, but according to the hearings of the House Labor Committee, over 90 per cent of the trouble has been with the administration of the act and not the act itself," Landis added.

Representative Smith said: "The Wagner Act would have got nowhere fast without the National Labor Relations Board to ascertain the jurisdiction of competing unions to investigate complaints against employers and to assess penalties under the law. Of course, the board has been opposed—opposed, forsooth, by those who opposed the degrading of their noble principle into naughty law. Most of the cry against the NRLB and against its able chairman is not because they've done it wrong, but because they've done it at all."

In the discussion which followed the prepared addresses, Representative Landis said there were 5,555 strikes in the last seven years of Republican administration as compared with 17,536 in the first seven years of the present Democratic administration.

"Isn't that a double-edged ax?" asked Representative Smith. He said, "I take it that they didn't expect to get anything out of striking" during the Republican Administration, whereas in the Democratic Administration "hopes were raised."

Challenges G. O. P.

Senator Thomas said: "Labor's great gains have practically always been under Democratic auspices." He asked what the Republican Party had done to protect the technique of collective bargaining and where does it stand today in regard to the institution which guarantees that technique? It stands in favor of amending the basic law which gives collective bargaining its Magna Charta."

Senator Thomas said the 17 names connected with the great labor acts included two Republicans, four Independent Progressives and 11 Democrats. "That tells the story," he added.

Theodore Granik presided as chairman and moderator over the program, held at the Willard Hotel.

Hindsight and Foresight

Progress for Sale

BY HOLGAR J. JOHNSON
President Institute of Life Insurance

LIFE for the next twenty years will be vastly different. No matter what happens in the political field, we can be sure that new inventions will have a vital effect.

New developments like frequency-modulation radio, stratosphere flying and plastics are already well on their way into our daily lives. The main "bottle neck," however, is getting their benefits before the public and persuading people to accept them.

This is the job of selling, and no country is better equipped to do it than ours, with its tradition of American salesmanship. In the future as in the past, the selling of useful new products will create new jobs and raise the standard of living.

If it weren't for the salesman, most of us might still be reading by candles or traveling by stagecoach . . . many of our factories wouldn't be running and many of us wouldn't have jobs . . . and in life insurance we couldn't have brought security to a fraction of those who have it today.

The people of this country and Canada make up only 7% of the world's population—yet they own nearly 70% of the world's life insurance!

YOUNG people are growing up in a world which, with its new conveniences and new luxuries, will tempt them to "let tomorrow take care of itself." In this new world there is as great a need for someone to sell foresight as there is for someone to sell the newest radio set. Otherwise our progress may enrich the present only to impoverish the future.

Competing with a hundred transient influences, the life insurance agent must offer a sound and proven means for acquiring security . . . individual and family security that must be won by thrift, planned with wisdom and maintained with patience . . . the only kind of security that is worth anything.

It is this that makes his job important to all of us.

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit its President to speak to America's policy owners. Address inquiries to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

The Political Arena

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, as chairman of the Republican National Committee, yesterday announced reinforcement of the party's national campaign organization by appointment of 11 regional aides. Others are to be named soon.

SHORT

Martin said that members of the new regional staff being appointed to assist him in the campaign weer to function as close observers of developments in their regions and to act as liaison representatives. Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, was designated regional aide for the area including Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey. Others were listed as follows:

For Missouri and Arkansas, Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri; Connecticut and Rhode Island, Joseph Talbot, of Connecticut; Ohio and Tennessee, David Ingalls, of Ohio, who managed Senator Robert A. Taft's preconvention campaign; Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Indiana, Representative Leo Allen, of Illinois; Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, Harry Darby; Oklahoma and Texas, Herbert Hyde, of Oklahoma; Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida, John E. Jackson; Wyoming, Idaho and Montana, Representative Frank O. Horton, of Wyoming; California, Oregon, Washington and Nevada, Representative Harry L. Engelbright, of California; Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota, E. C. Duncanson, of Minnesota.

Without comment, the Republican National Committee made public yesterday a "record of President Roosevelt's absences from Washington," showing that he had been away from Washington 32 days and in the Capital only 19 days since he told the Democratic National Convention on July 19 that the world situation would compel him to stay close to his desk and he would "not have the time or inclination to engage in purely political debate."

Ten trips away from the Capital in the 51 days were listed including visits to Hyde Park, defense inspection journeys and dam and park dedication trips.

Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, made public plans for an aggressive campaign to insure G. O. P. control of the House next year.

Ditter said the fight would be waged in close cooperation with the Republican State and county committees.

A gain of 50 seats would give the Republicans nominal control of the next House, he pointed out, but he said that, in the light of "recent scout reports," he has aimed the Congressional campaign at a "minimum gain of 60 seats, which would insure an effective working majority."

A series of conferences with Republican leaders and Congressional candidates in the various States is being arranged, Ditter said, designed to bring about maximum coordination of the Congressional campaigns with the activities of State and local candidates.

Thousands Here Pray for Peace

All Faiths Heed President's Call In Sunday Services

Heeding President Roosevelt's proclamation, thousands of Washingtonians yesterday joined America in prayers for world peace.

Intervention of Divine Providence in bringing a righteous and enduring peace to a war-blighted universe was asked by Catholics, Jews and Protestants. Sermons and music also reflected the day's spirit.

Members of Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church, gathering for an outing and service at Dodoni Park, Md., adopted resolutions affirming that the congregation will stand squarely behind the actions of the United States Government, whatever may be its course in the present European and Asiatic wars.

Resolution Read

"It is a gratification to know that Greece still stands fast to the Democratic ideals and remains affiliated to Great Britain and America, the champions of democracy," the resolution declared. It was read by the Rev. Thomas Daniels, pastor, who conducted a special mass and doxology there, and a mass earlier in the day at his church. In his outdoor message, he called for continued loyalty to the United States, assured his congregation was 100 per cent American in ideals, with "not one fifth columnist."

Services at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, where the late President Coolidge once worshiped, drew a capacity congregation, including several legislators, who heard Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor, read the President's proclamation, and lead peace prayers.

"The Church has a mission in these days to proclaim the message of truth and love, which has in it the power to sound the death knell of all who rely on human strength alone," he said in his sermon, "and to shake to dust all the kingdoms of blood and fear."

Gospel Can Bring Peace

"The Church has as its primary task the proclamation of the gospel of Jesus Christ which can change men's lives—of which change peace is one by-product," he remarked.

Hebrew congregations of Washington last night united in prayer services at Beth Sholom Synagogue, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest, and later met at Ohev Sholom Synagogue, Fifth and I streets northwest, to hear Boris Schiffman, world noted cantor, conduct a special Mariv service, assisted by a symphonic choir from New York, under Joseph Plebow's direction. Peace supplications were offered at both services.

Members of Holy Name societies, war veteran units and other Catholic organizations received Communion in bodies in many Catholic parishes of the city, as the Day of Prayer was appropriately celebrated.

Roosevelts Join Prayer for Peace

but it is a good one.

"As we pray for peace," continued the bald, slender cleric, "we must realize that we have been a contributing factor to world conditions today. We as a Nation are partly responsible."

Although the minister's eyes from time to time encompassed the congregation, for the most part he leaned on the lectern and preached directly at the Presidential pew.

"Just as much steadiness of aim is required of us as those who are actually fighting," he said.

Calls Attention to Plea

At the outset of his sermon the Rev. Mr. Wilson called attention to the President's call upon the Nation to set this Sunday aside as a day of prayer for peace.

"We are living in a time when there are groups in the brotherhood of men who are ravishing the weaker . . . and who deny God," he said.

While all bowed, he prayed "for the wounded and sick, the bereaved and anxious, the despoiled and imprisoned," asking divine aid also for "a peace of which the fruit will be justice and righteousness." From "class warfare and hatreds, God Lord, deliver us," he intoned.

At the conclusion of the services, the congregation remained standing while Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt and their royal guests went up the aisle and out into the bright sunshine.

Tomorrow at lunch, the President will confer with Myron C. Taylor, his personal envoy to the Vatican. Taylor, who returned last week, is believed to be bearing a special and personal message to the Chief Executive from Pope Pius XII.

Attack Suspect, 16, Seized by Mob And Shot to Death

La Grange, Ga., Sept. 8 (AP).—A 16-year-old colored boy, Austin Callaway, charged with an attempted attack on a white woman, was taken from city jail here early today and lynched, Chief of Police J. E. Matthews, announced tonight.

Matthews said the masked men forced the jailer at gunpoint to open the cell door. A searching party found the boy 8 miles from town with bullet wounds in his head and arm, and took him to a hospital, where he died late this afternoon.

Hoan May Receive Defense Position

Frank Bane, defense commission director of State and local cooperation, said last night he would confer with Daniel W Hoan this week, possibly, regarding appointment of the former Milwaukee mayor to a defense post.

Defense commission spokesmen speculated that Hoan might be under consideration for appointment as coordinator of municipal activities.

Wallace Opens Drive Today For Nebraska Electoral Votes

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Nebr., Sept. 8.—Henry A. Wallace will open the Democratic drive for Nebraska's seven electoral votes when he takes off tomorrow on a two-day 500-mile tour of a dozen of the State's smaller towns. Today he conferred with party leaders.

The Democratic Vice Presidential nominee declined to comment at a press conference on the farm program of Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, or Willkie's answer last night to Wallace's acceptance speech charge the Republican Party was the party of appeasement.

The former Secretary of Agriculture indicated he would discuss both subjects in talks tomorrow and Tuesday.

He asserted the requirements of the defense program will not mean any retrogression as far as social legislation is concerned, and added the greatest economic effect of the defense program will be to increase pay rolls.

"It's an amazing thing," he commented, "but statistics show that when pay rolls go up, the amount the farmers receive for their meats and butter and eggs goes up almost exactly the same rate."

Wallace discussed party affairs briefly with Gov. R. L. Cochran, Democratic Senatorial nominee; visited Msgr. E. J. Flanagan's Boys Home at Boys Town near here and, at the last minute canceled a tennis date with his son, Robert, to work on his Nebraska speeches.

Tomorrow he will head an automobile caravan, complete with sound truck, with which he will talk to farmers and businessmen throughout the eastern half of the State. Ending the tour at Omaha Tuesday night, he will entrain for Rochester, Minn.

'Uncle' Jim Chisholm's Fiddle Strings Muted by Death

Virginia Man Famed For Old Ballads Dies After Fall

JIM CHISHOLM

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 8 (AP).—"Uncle" Jim Chisholm, 80, of Greenwood, well known fiddler, who once gave a "command" performance at the White House, died today at the University Hospital of injuries received in a fall Friday.

The mountaineer fiddler, who had resided for some years at Mirador, home of the Langhorne family, fell and struck his head on a street pavement while visiting here Friday afternoon.

"Uncle" Jim performed a number of times at the White Top Mountain music festival and once at the National Music Festival in Washington. He was sought out a number of years ago by John Powell, Virginia pianist and composer, in the latter's study of folk song. The composer found "Uncle" Jim to be a rich source of old ballad tunes. Powell's composition, "Set of Three," is based on folk songs supplied largely by Jim Chisholm.

"Uncle" Jim worked as a young man on a farm near here and was employed for some time in coal mines in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Later he returned to this section, where he spent the remainder of his life.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Emma Truslow, of Nelson County, and one daughter, Mrs. Harry Napier, of Greenwood.

Danville Preparing 11 Leaf Auction Houses

Danville, Va., Sept. 8.—Eleven auction warehouses are being prepared here for the opening of the Old Belt tobacco selling season opening September 24. About 30 per cent of the crop, harvested before the flood period, is considered of exceptionally fine quality, but the balance of the crop is said to be deficient in color and texture. The price scale here will depend largely on how active the British companies are in buying certain grades.

Almazan Junta Claimed Under Way in Texas

Mexican Presidential Contender's Aides Reported Going North

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Sept. 8.—Many prominent followers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, independent candidate for President in Mexico's turbulent July election, were reported en route north today in an attempt to escape charges of participating in "subversive activities."

Federal secret agents who visited Almazan headquarters, to seal the doors and subpena party leaders, found the place abandoned and all furniture and files removed.

Reports circulated that followers of Almazan, who claims to have won the election and has said he would take office as President December 1, were congregating in San Antonio, Tex., for a strategy meeting.

The government, which has announced the election of the administration candidate, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, kept a close watch on political activities throughout the republic, but military headquarters reported "everything quiet."

Denial Is Issued

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 8 (AP).—Edwardo de Neri, campaign manager for Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, said today there was "nothing strange" about the appearance here of several supporters of the antiadministration claimant for the presidency.

"We have not met in San Antonio for political purposes or to form any junta whatsoever," De Neri said. "The Almazanistas' leading supporters were forced to leave Mexico at this time for lack of safety guarantees."

Germany, Mexico Deny 'Red Army' Tale

By the Associated Press

The German and Mexican Embassies declared yesterday that there was no truth in a statement by Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, that Germany had financed a "red militia" of 200,000 men in Mexico.

A German Embassy spokesman said: "There is no such an undertaking in Mexico, no such an organization as a 'red militia.' The Mexican government is fully capable of managing its own affairs."

The Mexican Embassy had this to say:

"The statements are so evidently absurd that they hardly require to be corrected in detail to prevent the American public from obtaining a wrong idea about Mexico.

"Not a single one of the assertions made is correct."

The President's son said in an address Saturday night at Lawton, Okla., that "while Mexico tells us that they have an army of only 100-and-some-odd thousand men I can tell you, and I know it for a fact, that there is an army that was officered and trained by former revolutionaries from Spain, and there are 7,000 of them in Mexico today."

Herndon Youth Hurt in Fight At Dance Hall

A 16-year-old Herndon (Va.) youth was in serious condition at Emergency Hospital last night after a fight near a dance hall yesterday during which police said beer bottles were thrown.

The youth, Joseph A. Viar, 523 Elden street, Herndon, suffered a possible fractured skull and chest injuries. Herndon police were holding three youths on an open charge pending the outcome of Viar's injuries. Police said they were fighting over attentions paid to a girl.

The fight occurred outside a dance hall near Herndon on Route 50 in Loudon County, Va., police said. Viar was brought to the hospital by the Herndon Fire Department ambulance.

Four Granted Clemency in Md.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 8 (AP).—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor announced today that he had taken "favorable action" on four parole and pardon cases recommended by Herman M. Moser, director of parole and probation.

Executive clemency was granted Simon Berkson, serving an 18 months term in the house of correction on a larceny conviction in Washington County; Chester Jackson, serving two years from Howard County on conviction of unauthorized use of an automobile; Glen Mills, convicted of assault and battery in Montgomery County, and Robert Anderson.

Anderson had been fined $100 for failure to give assistance after an auto accident, but Commissioner of Motor Vehicles W. Lee Elgin said an investigation showed he had gone for help. A pardon was necessary before Elgin could restore Anderson's car license.

Gov. Price Will Speak To Winchester Men

Winchester, Va., Sept. 8.—Gov. James H. Price has accepted an invitation to address the Men's Club of the Presbyterian Church October 3, it was announced by Dr. George Snarr, chairman of the program committee.

Gov. Price is an elder in the Ginter Park Presbyterian Church at Richmond. The club, recently organized with T. Russell Cather as president; Leonard B. Sirbaugh, vice president; Sam McCarty, secretary, will hold its initial meeting on the evening of Gov. Price's visit.

Dog Near Death After Saving Her Master From Copperhead

Dog Attacks Snake In Yard as Man Is About to Step on It

Beauty may die. She tried every way a dog knows to warn her master, then leaped in to almost certain death rather than see him step on a poisonous snake which lay coiled behind him.

Beauty's master is Policeman Charles T. Williams, of the Tenth Precinct, who lives at 519 South Jefferson street, Arlington, Va. Yesterday Williams was raking leaves in his yard, walking slowly backward, when Beauty rushed to him, barking at his heels in the sharp, excited language of a collie. Williams gave her little attention because anybody who owns a 2½-year-old collie knows they are apt to make a game of most anything.

When Williams paid her no attention, Beauty dashed behind him and her fighting snarl made him turn abruptly. The collie was wrestling with a copperhead snake. Williams ran to her aid with the rake.

She had been bitten several times in the head and neck and Williams rushed her to a veterinary, her head swollen to several times its normal size. After treatment, she was given an even chance to live.

If Beauty does win her fight with death, Williams, father of three children, is going to look into the matter of medals for heroic dogs.

Mrs. Parrish, Minister's Widow, Dies

Mrs. Annetta Etz Parrish, 63, widow of the Rev. William C. Parrish and for most of her life a resident of Washington and Maryland, died suddenly yesterday at the home of her son, Neal E. Parrish, in Chippaqua, N. Y.

Born in Marietta, Ohio, Mrs. Parrish came to Washington as a child, was graduated from Eastern High School and took an atcive part in affairs of the Brookland Baptist Church until her marriage to the Rev. Mr. Parrish, a Baltimore Conference Methodist clergyman.

She leaves three sons, Edward Parrish, of Saranac Lake, N. Y.; Neal E. Parrish, of Chippaqua, and Roland Parrish, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Amelia Etz Parrish, of Baltimore, who was married to the late Rev. E. N. Parrish, her sister's brother-in-law and also a Baltimore Conference minister.

C. N. Florance To Be Buried At Warrenton

Funeral services for Clarence N. Florance, 69, of Herndon, Va., who died yesterday after a brief illness, will be held today at 2 p .m. at his home. Burial will be at Warrenton, Va.

Mr. Florance was in the banking business in Herndon for a number of years. He was former cashier of the National Bank of Herndon. In recent years he had been in the automobile business.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Florence K. Florance; a daughter, Mrs. Lewis T. Titus, of Leesburg, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Lucy Ish, of Herndon.

Canadian Destroyer Sinks Six U-Boats

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 8 (AP).—Crewmen of the Canadian destroyer Restigouche, just returned from three months of overseas action, reported today their ship had polished off a half dozen enemy submarines.

The destroyer was among those that participated in the evacuation of British troops from St. Nazaire and other French ports before France capitulated. Its sides are scarred from exploding Nazi bombs.

Dropping Gold Of Little Use, Survey Says

Monetary Policies Of New Deal Reviewed By Research Group

By the Associated Press

The American Council of Public Affairs said yesterday that an analysis of Administration monetary policies had afiled to find "conclusive evidence" that abandonment of the gold standard had produced "substantial benefits."

Likewise, the private research organization asserted, the Government's silver buying program "has had no justification except as asubsidy to the Western producing industry."

The study contended, however, that "the case of gold does not seem entirely hopeless," and that it remained "the leading monetary metal as it has for centuries." The belief that it would continue to occupy this position, the report added, was based on "an expectation of an eventual change in recent abnormal world conditions."

A major uncertainty, the council continued, lay in the threatened "extension of the power of Germany and other totalitarian nations in the future world economy." Germany, it was said, undoubtedly would "desire to carry on extensive trade with the United States and in return for a market favorable to its products may refrain from any action which would destroy or reduce the value of gold as a medium of international exchange."

The analysis, entitled "Monetary Management Under the New Deal," declares that Federal Reserve authorities had made "notable progress in the development of a technique of monetary management although restricted by inadequate powers over banking reserves." Also, the report said that the Treasury's part in promoting world stabilization of currencies between 1935 and 1939 "had borne substantial results."

A. S. Mason, 63, Telegrapher, Dies Suddenly

Victim of Stroke Employed for 21 Years At Weather Bureau

Alfred Saunders Mason, 63, a Morse code telegrapher at the Washington Weather Bureau for the last 21 years, died yesterday at his home, 1133 Twenty-fourth street northwest.

His death, which followed a stroke as he left the Weather Bureau Friday, ended 46 years in a once-exciting trade which is being rapidly forced into extinction by the teletype machine.

Born in Washington, a direct descendant of James Monroe and George Mason, Mr. Mason became a telegrapher for the Pennsylvania Railroad at the age of 17 to begin a career that took him into two wars and posts of importance.

He served in Company I, Third Regiment, in the Spanish-American War and later, transferred to the Signal Corps, was decorated for bravery during the Philippine Insurrection, when he was shot by a spy he was attempting to capture.

When former President Taft was Governor of the Philippines, Mr. Mason was his personal telegrapher.

During the World War he was acting chief of the Ordnance Department's telegraphic section.

Although born in Washington, Mr. Mason spent his childhood at Warrenton, Va., where he was educated, and since joining the Weather Bureau had made his home until recently in Alexandria.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Julia Cheshire Mason; one daughter, Mrs. Martha Mason Stanton, of Alexandria; two sisters, Mrs. Eva G. Steiner and Mrs. Abi Rudd, of Maryland; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Mrs. McLanahan Dies; Was Member of D.A.R.

Mrs. Anna Mozena Chowning McLanahan, 79, widow of Richard McLanahan, died yesterday at her home, 1851 Columbia road northwest.

She came to Washington from Tecumseh, Nebr., three years ago and was a member of Francis Scott Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Funeral services and burial will be Friday at Tecumseh.

She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Watson E. Coleman, of Washington, and one grandson, John W. Sheehan, jr., of New Orleans, La.

Hairdressers To Ask Court, Who Rules the Wave?

A current hairdressers' row over a hairdressing patent has brought research throwing light on Cleopatra's charm.

Cleopatra, it appears, may have wowed Mark Anthony and Julius Caesar with her croquignole wave.

Upon the purported historical fact that the croquignole wave was employed in Cleopatra's time, the Washington Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, Inc., is, with its national association, fighting a patent held by the Philad Company on the croquignole method.

The suit is pending in the District Court of Delaware.

The local association will meet at 9 o'clock tonight (Monday), at the Mayflower Hotel to discuss the history of the wave and the litigation over it.

Carol's Wealth Ordered 'Frozen'

Antonescu Moves To Seize Holdings Worth Millions

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Sept. 8.—Former King Carol's stock holdings, his credits and titles, with an estimated value of millions of dollars, were rodered sequestered today by Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's new military dictator.

There were two decrees. The first declared "unnegotiable" stock held "directly or indirectly" by Carol in the ten largest Rumanian companies, and ordered the shares deposited with the court within five days.

The American-managed Rumanian Telephone Co., a locomotive company, gold mining, sugar and woolen companies were included in the list. In many of them Carol was principal stockholder.

The second decree extends the sequestration to "all other credits and titles."

People Ordered to Pray

By his command, too, the populace of Rumania knelt today to pray for Mihai and to "curse those responsible for the nation's troubles."

The capital's churches were jammed. Traffic stopped for one minute throughout the city. Pedestrians even knelt in front of the palace. Mihai, guarded by steel-helmeted soldiers, went to the cathedral to join in services.

A telegram from Adolf Hitler said the German Fuehrer would follow Antonescu's "constructive work with great sympathy and interest" and predicted the new European order by which Rumania is bound to the Rome-Berlin Axis would long continue.

The Iron Guard minister of culture issued decrees requiring all subordinates to resign immediately from the Masonic organization and prohibiting Jews from "continuing their blasphemy" of selling religious art objects or having even the remotest connection with anything artistic—even serving as ushers in motion picture theaters.

Both the capital's newspapers and government offices said today Mihai's mother, Princess Helen, had not yet arrived in Rumania, but was expected tomorrow or Tuesday.

Rites Held for Slain

At Braskov, funerals were held for those killed in last week's disorders. It was disclosed that a great many more people had been slain than at first reported.

At Galati, 313 German SS troopers, the elite Black Shirt guard, arrived with hundreds of trucks and many trains, as well as the vanguard of a large fleet of 25 Nazi Danube River boats which are to remove 90,000 Germans from the province of Bessarabia, ceded by Rumania to Soviet Russia.

Although Antonescu had told the people Rumania's past would be a "closed book," he himself opened it enough to allow investigations to be made by special commissioners into what one government officer called "ten years of corruption and looting of the public treasury."

Attempts have already been started under the general's decrees to discover who got some of the huge sums of money spent for armaments, where former premiers and cabinet ministers got their wealth, who made profits out of foreign money deals, what happened to money appropriated for the youth movement and what cabinet members did with the semi-official "slush funds."

pescu, Carol's woman friend of many years, was on the train.

There was a red-haired woman in the party of 29 that followed Carol from Bucharest and she looked like pictures of Mme. Lupescu, but Erwin Clauss, one of Carol's aides, declared at Milan, when the train halted there, that this woman was a Mme. Lorenz.

She's in Another Car

At none of the stops the train made—at Milan, Cervignano di Friuli and Chiasso—and finally at Lugano did "Mme. Lorenz" appear. At Lugano the whole party remained on board while Carol was driven away to the hotel.

A railroad man said "Mme. Lorenz" traveled with her father in a different car from Carol's.

Clauss likewise denied that the bullet holes and marks on the train—about 30 were counted when the train stopped at Milan—were made in the reported attack on the train by Iron Guardists Saturday as it drew near the Rumanian-Yugoslav border.

portunity to train and their shortages of modern weapons, will fully require the year's training now provided by law before they can be considered fit for the modern battlefield, most observers of the exercises hold.

Many of the guardsmen had never before been under canvas; many had never fired a rifle; recruits in the Guard numbered in many units from 30 to 60 per cent of the total. Because of these facts and because the Guard itself is so badly in need of training, some field officers feel that the War Department's plan to utilize the Guard to train part of the drafted men to be called up if the selective service bill becomes law, would be an anachronism—like the halt leading the blind, as one officer expressed it.

Each of the maneuvers in which the four field armies of the United States took part was followed by a critique at which the lessons learned, the mistakes made and the weaknesses and strengths of the troops were reviewed.

Those who made the principal comments at these critiques were Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army from the Northeastern States, which held maneuvers in New York, and who said his maneuvers had revealed "vital major weaknesses;" Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commanding the Second Army from the Midwest, which held maneuvers in Wisconsin; Lieut. Gen. S. D. Embick, commanding the Third Army from the South, which held maneuvers in Louisiana; Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, commanding the Fourth Army from the West, which held maneuvers in two different areas, one in Washington State under Gen. DeWitt's personal supervision, the other in Minnesota, under Maj. Gen. P. P. Bishop, commanding the Seventh Corps, and the commanding generals of the major units engaged.

Most observers agreed that the morale of the troops is excellent.

The interest with which the enlisted men of the Guard anticipated the year's training which has now been ordered was tempered, in many instances, however, by worry about getting their jobs back after the year's service is over, or by worry over their families, and in some instances these considerations were slightly hurting morale.

All observers at the exercises agreed that the physical condition of the troops left something to be desired, although there were considerable differences between units. The Regulars, in general, are in rather good physical condition, but the Guardsmen are generally "soft," as is to be expected from men who normally spend only about two or three weeks a year in the field.

Equipment shortages are now well known. Most observers seemed to feel that there was sufficient equipment for training but not enough for combat.

The most obvious lack of equipment was found in tanks and planes. Only about 18 tanks and fewer than 200 combat planes took part in all of the maneuvers. Because of developments related to the expansion program, others of the Army's 500 tanks and 1,702 combat planes were not available for the maneuvers.

But the shortages are even more fundamental. Although there are generally plenty of the basic arms—rifles and field artillery, the types available in quantity are by no means the latest models. Antiaircraft guns, antitank guns, mortars, modern field artillery, signal equipment, new machine guns and semi-automatic rifles are among the items most needed.

Practically all observers agreed that the draft was required to provide the army contemplated by the present expansion plans. Practically no division, Regular or National Guard, was up to peace strength.

In the case of the Regular Army, the large number of recruits and the prevalence of large numbers of Reserve officers were explained by the expansion program.

Nazis Unloading 'Superbombs'

that the concussion tosses airplanes about like small boats in a wild sea, even at heights of several thousand feet.

(Whether these heaviest of German bombs used so far constitute the storied "secret weapon" of Adolf Hitler was not disclosed.

(But the Nazi shortwave radio in a German language broadcast heard in New York by C. B. S. said the newly used bombs would destroy everything within a radius of 1,000 feet and "even human lungs cannot resist the terrific force of their explosion.")

The midnight wave of the heaviest type bombers numbered about 35.

[Whether other waves of these giant planes followed, the dispatch did not say. The New York Times, however, spoke of "squadron after squadron" of night bombers.

[The largest German military plane of which there is any record is the Junkers JU-89. Powered with four 12-cylinder liquid cooled engines, it is rumored to have a speed of 225 miles per hour.

[Jane's All the World's Aircraft lists the JU-89's lower-powered commercial sister, the JU-90, as capable of carrying a 14,000-pound load—40 passengers and baggage. The JU-90 has a 115-foot wingspread and is more than 86 feet long.]

The "superfleet" followed masses of other planes hurled against England on a scale equaling the great assaults against London Saturday night.

Returning German fliers reported extensive fires in London and that they "apparently had spread to some extent." In some instances, they said, smoke from their own bomb-set fires obscured targets.

Pillars of fire lighting the great target of London for many miles guided German bombers directly to their mission of destruction early today, German authorities announced.

The raiders have been roaring away toward England since the early evening hours of Sunday, the Germans declared, bent on "continuing the work of destruction of the London Harbor and industrial section."

Already, many British antiaircraft batteries and searchlights have been destroyed by direct bomb hits, the Nazis related.

The British capital's famed arsenal borough of Woolwich and the southwest reaches of the city have been subjected to a concentrated, destructive scourge.

Following up their night-long crippling blows of Saturday on London and the British industrial heart, the Germans reported they bombed several large factories in southwest London, and a warehouse and railway station, starting at least two large fires.

British fighters engaged the bombing squadrons and their escorts in scattered encounters, the Germans announced, 12 British and 4 German planes being destroyed.

Directed personally by Reichsmarshal Goering, the massed waves of German bombers were reported to have poured over the British coast from bases in Denmark, France, Belgium, Holland and northwest Germany.

Goering, speaking unexpectedly by radio, presumably from his headquarters with the air force, told the nation that a "terrific attack" was in progress against London and that the Fuehrer had entrusted him with attacking "the heart of the British Empire."

"London will be blasted with millions of pounds of bombs as long as attacks of enemy pilots on nonmilitary objectives in Germany continue," declared DNB, official German news agency.

An authorized spokesman said Nazi fliers all day Sunday were repeating Saturday's attack on London—massed, rolling assaults by every type of German bomber escorted by fighter and destroyer squadrons.

Dense smoke over the British capital was said to have hampered German aerial scouts hovering above the city.

Great tongues of flame occasionally shot through the veil, they reported, indicating that fires started Saturday still were burning, and periodic explosions sometimes could be felt at 12,000 feet.

Other German reports said the glare of the London fires could be seen during the night from the French Channel coast between Calais and Cherbourg.

The relentless German attacks were cited by one Nazi military spokesman as proof that "England is not in a position to protect her capital."

"The English heretofore have always said all German attacks on London had been warded off," he said. "Actually, however, attacks such as now are in progress had not taken place before.

"The German attacks on London began yesterday and showed that German fliers are able to drop day and night any caliber bombs in any amount they choose on military objectives in London."

The brunt of the offensive fell on London. A high command communique, issued from Goering's headquarters in northern France, plainly labeled it "reprisal for night attacks on residential sections and other nonmilitary objecitves in the Reich."

urday night-Sunday morning raid.

There was a lull around midnight. Then the tireless raiders developed a stronger assault than before and the explosives became progressively heavier and more frequent.

Heavy bombs were dropped with "express train regularity," a member of the London staff of the Associated Press said in a telephone report from his apartment.

Earth-shaking explosions were felt at regular intervals in the Associated Press building. Rooftop observers there saw repeated blue-white flashes of fire-bombs.

Fourteen bombs fell within less than a minute outside the Associated Press man's apartment. While he was telephoning, a reporter on the roof of the Associated Press building heard another 15 bombs fall south of the Thames.

A photographic plate in the pocket of Lawrence Harris, photographer, on the roof of the Associated Press building, was smashed by the concussion of a nearby blast.

The massed Nazi warplanes flew against the added threat of an overnight thunderstorm to lay new horrors of demolition and fire across London today, but a British air ministry official commented, "We have not yet reached the top note of this crescendo of air attack."

Even so, the great raid was acknowledged as the equal in ferocity to that of the previous night.

The air ministry official, calling this "undoubtedly a very critical month of the war," admitted, "even if we had four times as many or an even greater proportion of fighters, it would still be impossible to prevent some of the bombers from reaching the capital."

Some French planes were used in the attack, an air ministry official said.

Authoritative quarters reported that from the types of planes shot down Saturday night, it was known that the Germans made large concentrations of airpower in northern France to carry out mass raids on London.

Some Used in Norway

For example, they said, some of the destroyed planes were known to have been operating recently in Norway. They did not disclose how they knew.

Single raiders started coming over London again as the early morning hours wore on. They made a circular, clockwise run around London from the east after approaching up the Thames Estuary. Bombs were dropped at opposite points of the compass.

The homeless and the bereaved, poor and rich, men, women and children, huddled in air raid shelters as the German bombers swept over the capital, roaring up from the Thames Estuary.

They came rst at twilight after a day of scattered fighting along the coast north of Dover.

On through the dark hours the Germans drove in, seemingly in greater numbers than the estimated 700 attackers of Saturday night.

They came through drifting clouds from which occasional forked tongues of lightning darted, and between which the wan sickle of a new moon was occasionally visible.

Two barrage balloons plummeted down in flames.

The streets of the great city were empty except for fire trucks and ambulances.

Night of Terror

Londoners, warned by the alarm sounding at 7:58 p. m. (1:58 p. m., E. S. T.), had braced themselves for another night of terror.

It was the second raid warning of a sabbath otherwise calm and peaceful after the great all-night raid that ended at dawn. The daytime first warning lasted 51 minutes.

Raiders approached the city from the east, from the northwest, then again from the east. About three-quarters of an hour after the warning sounded. Three waves had been counted.

Within a few seconds after the moan of warning sirens died away violent antiaircraft fire broke out in central London.

This was flolowed by the screech of scream bombs and the boom of explosions.

An air ministry communique said that already eight enemy planes had been destroyed during the day and revised German losses yesterday adding 11 more planes shot down, making the new total 99.

British losses Saturday were set at 22 fighter planes and of these the pilots of eight were said to be safe.

The air ministry added that 24 additional German raiders probably were so damaged they could not return to base. Last week's total, counting yesterday's 99, was announced as 342 German planes destroyed as against the R. A. F.'s loss of 128 fighting planes, from which 68 pilots escaped.

Observers in the area where the hostile planes were flying overhead described the antiaircraft fire last night as the heaviest since the great raids on London started.

Dive bombers roared down on the metropolitan area, dropped their loads and zoomed back to the clouds at dizzy speed as their bombs crunched far below.

Preceding the dive bombers were others which flew high and unloaded rack after rack of bombs in screaming clusters on the London area.

Other enemy planes were reported over southeast and southwest England, possibly heading for London.

In the eastern sky over the capital low-lying clouds reflected a pink glow. It was evident that Nazi airmen were using the smouldering fires from Saturday's twilight and all-night raids to guide them.

Their first objective was the place hit heaviest yesterday, London's dockyard.

British Communique

A communique issued just before last night's 7:58 raid said:

"Since dawn this morning enemy activity was negligible until shortly before midday when a large force of enemy aircraft approached the coast north of Dover."

"They were promptly engaged by our fighters and antiaircraft guns and only small formations were able to penetrate inland.

"These flew north to the Thames Estuary where they were dispersed and driven off."

The damage was slight, most of the bombs dropping in rural areas, although "some houses and a railway station were hit and a road temporarily blocked."

The southeast coast during Saturday night formed London's first line of antiaircraft defense.

Batteries on the high cliffs and promontories and dotting the inland reaches along the Thames put up the heaviest barrages of the war against the almost continuous waves of night raiders, 12 to 15 planes in each formation.

Even so, about 500 planes of the German armada broke through to rake London in an assault that rivaled the devastation of Warsaw and Chungking.

In the great Saturday night raid, German bombers turned this sprawling capital into an arena of havoc. They raked both sides of the Thames, with its docks and factories, and splattered bombs beyond the limits of strictly military objectives.

The Port of London Authority declared today that despite the battering "all services of the port will be maintained."

British officialdom, declaring that about one-fifth of the attacking planes, estimated at 500, either were shot down or disabled so as not to reach home, acknowledge the severity of the attack, but asserted that the damage, "judged against the background of the war, is not serious."

The major smashes were on the two banks of the Thames east of the city, causing three "extensive" dock fires and a number of lesser blazes, but, said a communique, in the latter phases the bombing "appeared to be indiscriminate."

Bombs hit a utility plant, docks of the Port of London Authority among others, a tar refinery, two schools, a church and a chapel, and houses in various districts, as listed by official reports and independent surveys.

Outside London, on the Lower Thames, an oil installation was set afire.

Many fires were still burning in the London area when the Nazi raiders returned last night. They all had been localized, however, authorities said, with no danger of spreading.

Barrels of Tar Explode

Barrels of tar in a tar distillery on the north bank of the Thames, fired during the night, exploded with a sound like bombs.

From the thickly populated East End, where the casualties were heaviest, hundreds of homeless persons began orderly movement to places where officials could provide food and shelter.

Several hundred persons, mostly women and children, bedraggled from the rigors of the night, quietly queued up at one station. They carried pitiful little bundles. Faces were grim without a trace of panic.

Sunday the humble folk of the East End surveyed the debris of the shelter—the baby carirages twisted into a mass with corrugated iron sheeting, heaps of bedclothing, blackened gas masks, toys, broken plates and remnants of food.

Bombs also fell on the West End, causing some property damage, but few casualties. Three blocks of luxury flats, two blocks occupied by 88 elderly men, women and children and the other by about 300, were in the heart of the bombed area, but were practically untouched.

One hundred and fifty bomb refugees were jammed in a shelter near a railway line when a heavy caliber bomb struck the right of way. Walls of the shelter cracked and bricks fell on the occupants. The only injuries, however, were minor cuts and bruises.

A densely peopled Jewish district of the East End was among the sections which seemed to suffer worst in the night attack. Hundreds of refugees from Germany, Austria and Poland live there.

Brigades of fire fighters whose work from Saturday dusk to Sunday dawn perhaps saved London from devastation by fire brought under control the conflagrations in the docks area.

Working in the light of a tremendous, purple-tinged glow against the sky which at the same time guided bombers for renewed attacks, they displayed the spirit of front-line soldiers. Some fell in line of duty.

Riremen came from miles around to battle the flames in the docks area, which were fed by a big lumber yard. Four thousand pieces of fire-fighting equipment were in use at one time in the Metropolitan area.

The Port of London Authority issued this statement:

While the damage by fire is considerable, the discharging and loading berths are intact and all services of the port will be maintained. Though some warehouses have been damaged, the losses of foodstuffs are relatively small."

Many people, tired from the trying night, nevertheless went to church—churches which in some areas had windows blasted out by bombs. This, being the first Sunday after the anniversary of the declaration of war, was a national day of prayer.

An incendiary bomb had started a fire in a Roman Catholic church and about a mile from it a chapel was demolished.

Transportation and utilities in most areas began functioning normally at daybreak.

The ministry of transport, however, announced that "some dislocation in transport occurred as a result of Saturday night's air raids, particularly in the area south and east of London.

"Steps already have been taken to restore the damage as quickly as possible and, as a temporary measure, alternative routes are being worked out and special bus services have been arranged."

In one district bombs directed at a power station caused slight damage. There was a failure of electrical power and lighting in parts of London at one time during the night bombardment but the current was restored within a half hour.

Associated Press men worked by candlelight at one time while the reverberations of bombs shook the tables and desks in the room.

Britain Lands Fresh Troops At Egypt Port

'Biggest Convoy' Brings Big Reinforcements To Middle East Front

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Sept. 8.—Britain reinforced her Middle East fighting forces with thousands of troops landed on the sun-baked quays of an Egyptian port today from the biggest convoy ever to reach Egypt.

A long line of big transports splashed into the harbor during the day after an uneventful voyage from England, in which they reported not a singde Italian warship sighted.

The exact number of troops disembarking from ships was not disclosed, but officials said there were "several thousand." They will be dispatched immediately to fronts "somewhere in the Middle East."

In addition to ground troops, there were many Australian airmen, hundreds of nurses from England and Scotland and several hundred reinforcements for the navy and Royal Air Force.

The troops, brought from England by the Red Sea route, moved out under full equipment aboard two 15-car trains bound for duty in Egypt and Palestine.

"We are glad to be here even though we hated to leave our families in England," said one soldier. "But we know our forces there can give Hitler more than he wants and we've come down here to clean up the Italian side of this war."

The new batch of troops is composed largely of men who fought in France and represents a cross section of the British army. There were infantrymen, large units of engineers, artillerymen and technicians.

"I'm anxious to get into a plane and take a crack at the Italians," one youthful Australian pilot said. "From what I've heard and judging from R. A. F.'s successes, it ought to be easy to bring down at least one plane every day I go up."

Another said the entire voyage was without incident. "We got a big laugh one night when we heard a Berlin broadcast that our ship had been sunk off north Ireland."

Canadian Air Arm Reported Growing Fast

Men Enlist at Rate Of 1,000 a Week; 22 Flying Schools Busy

By the Associated Press

Reporting a "spectacular expansion" of the Canadian air force in recent months, the Foreign Policy Association predicted yesterday that if the war continued it would soon become an important factor in defense of the British Empire.

"Recruitment was reported early in July to be proceeding at the rate of 1,000 men per week," James Frederick Green, a staff member, said in a study prepared for the association, a private research organization.

He added that on July 24 the Royal Canadian Air Force included 1,765 officers and 17,688 airmen, almost double, he said, the number of men in service last March.

Green said that 22 flying schools were now in operation and that "all airdromes, hangars and school buildings scheduled for 1941 will be completed by the end of 1940."

"Advanced training has been delayed, however, by the inability of Great Britain to supply airplanes and engines," the report continued. "These deficiencies were remedied in part by Canadian and American production."

Green gave the size of the Canadian army on August 21 as 154,000 of whom 40,000 were said to be serving outside Canada, including two divisions in England and small units in Iceland, Berouda and the Caribbean.

The Canadian navy was said to have 133 vessels on July 29 and 9,000 officers and men. In addition, Green said, Canadian shipyards were constructing 18 mine sweepers and 64 antisubmarine patrol vessels, two destroyers were on order and three fast passenger vessels were being converted into armed cruisers.

The author expressed the opinion that Canada's economic resources would not be fully utilized in the European war until 1941, adding that there had been serious delays in the months immediately preceding and following outbreak of hostilities.

"These delays," Green commented, "resulted partly from the inadequate war policy of the Chamberlain cabinet, and partly from its desire to benefit British factories by giving them its initial orders. During the first nine months of the conflict the total war expenditures in Canada by both the Canadian and British governments amounted to only $200,000,000."

Canadian Fliers Active

London, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force accounted for 11 Nazi raiders during last night's fighting, bringing their total "bag" past the 100 mark.

The Polish squadron attached to the R. A. F. was credited with bringing down 10 bombers and 3 fighters last night, bringing their total to 25 for four days.

Bomb Kills 14 Of 1,000 in London Air-Raid Shelter

head and arms was given first-aid treatment at the scene and revived. Her first question upon regaining consciousness was about her two children. Her friends did not know how to tell her their broken bodies lay not far away.

One woman, weeping as she spoke and obviously still suffering from shock, said "It was like hell on earth." We had just settled down for the night after a little singing and chatting and were trying to go to sleep when there was a short whistling noise and next an explosion. Just before the bomb whistled I heard one mother say to her youngster, 'Don't worry, we'll be all right here.' I never saw her again. Many but not all the lights in the shelter went out and that helped prevent a panic."

This particular shelter was strongly protected against everything except that one bomb in a million. It is deep underground and its brick roof is 3 feet thick. The top ventilator shaft on the street level is covered only by sheets of corrugated iron through which the bomb tore like a dagger through tissue paper.

This shelter has been used by families by the scores from nearby streets night after night. They have placed their own beds in selected spots. They have sung songs together, held impromptu parties, shared cups of inevitable tea and made new friends.

Last night the usual nightly scene of Bonhomie underwent a swift and tragic change when the big bomb hurtled through the airshaft, mangling men, women and children and piling others up in stunned heaps of humanity.

Emergency calls brought nine doctors, who in some cases saved lives with tourniquets improvised under the dim rays of flashlights.

Once more the so-called weaker sex came out even with the other. Comment on all sides was, "The women were magnificent."

ently emerging as one of the most important scenes of warfare as result of the fall of British Somaliland.

While it is generally believed that an overland attack against the Suez Canal is being prepared, the Italians meanwhile hve strted attack against British shipping in the Red Sea in an effort to cut the British lifeline.

Italians assert that when the third phase of attack upon England is started the Italians simultaneously will strike t severl points in Afric with Aden and Egypt being mentioned as the likeliest objectives.

Particular importance is given to the fact that Reichs Marshal Goering personally is directing the aerial attack against Britain.

Meanwhile, the high command reported that Italian bombers attacked a British convoy in the Red Sea and damaged a freighter so badly that it was abandoned by its crew.

Another squadron was reported to have heavily bombed the port of Aden. Other Italian bombers struck at Malta where, it was claimed, a submarine was hit by a bomb. Fire broke out and there was considerable damage, the high command said.

Bomb Blows In London Home Of Ex-Washington Reporter

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 8.—Two thousand residents of the London dock area were removed by pleasure steamers today from their flame-circled homes in a little Thames-side version of the dramatic removal of the British Expeditionary Force from Dunkerque last spring.

Police, air raid wardens and home guards assembled the dock workers and families in shelters while the admiralty sent little boats of the wartime emergency service to carry them to safety.

The removal was completed today amid a rain of high explosive and incendiary bombs.

False Raid Alarm

London, Sept. 8 (AP)—A false alarm signaling a parachute invasion which didn't take place sent home guards in a southwest town hustling to their posts during last night's big air raid on London.

Tolling church bells, the signal that parachutists are coming down, began the alarm, which later was taken up and spread by messenger.

During the unexplained alert, streets were cleared of all civilian traffic and throughout the night all abroad were stopped and questioned. automobile and loud speaker.

The mystery deepened when it was learned that church bells pealed out a similar false alert in a northeastern area of Wales.

Hospital Blasted

London (Monday), Sept. 9 (AP).—A time bomb exploded early today near a hospital where many of those injured in Saturday bombings were getting blood transfusions in the accident ward.

A large lump of granite was blown against a wall within a foot of a window of the ward and the lighting system was affected but first-aid work continued by candlelight.

The Blow Falls

After two years of false alarms, the dreaded blitzkrieg by air has struck London. As early as 1938, workmen were turning up the sod in Hyde Park to dig shelters, and 2,000,000 gas masks were ready for distribution in the city.

By mid-September of that year the Germans had tested on the civil population of Barcelona a new type of bomb, said to kill by concussion at a quarter of a mile; the Czech crisis was at its height; barrage balloons ringed London and the people were ready to flee underground. Then came Munich.

One year later, with war an actuality, London awaited attack with grim certainty. Hospitals were made ready for tens of thousands of anticipated casualties. Children and mothers were removed to the country. But when the attack did not come, many straggled back. Life went on and more were killed in the blackout than in the war.

The fall of France in the spring brought new expectations of the assault. But still it held off. There must have arisen in the minds of some a faint, unspoken belief that it never would occur.

Now it has happened. It is too early to judge the damage wrought on services vital to life and health. Yet comparison may be made between the destruction of life and that which had been envisioned.

In 1938 it was predicted that a single raid would kill 10,000 persons. According to some German accounts, in the first eight hours of serious attack 200 warplanes made four round trips each to leave London veiled in smoke from its center to the mouth of the Thames. Estimates from England are that 400 died in these four raids. It is a shocking slaughter, but it does not approach that forecast. Yet the outlook which the 8,000,000 people of London face as Hitler's aerial assault increases in fury is nonetheless fearful to contemplate. For what is now happening in London is total war in all its hideous ferocity and destructiveness.

On The Home Fronts

If you are looking for something to take your mind off the uncertainties of the Anglo-German bombing contests, you might give your attention to the present status of the American League pennant race, though this would certainly come under the head of a homeopathic remedy.

At the present writing, with only a couple of weeks' play remaining, three clubs are virtually deadlocked at the top of the league. If your mind has been upon other matters for the past month or so, you will doubtless be amazed to discover among these three our old friends the New York Yankees, for a month ago the Yankees were given up for lost.

Indeed, the two principal topics of speculation on those hot evenings were: (a) What went wrong with the French army and (b) what went wrong with the Yankees? The first still remains to be answered satisfactorily, but the answer to the second is now perfectly clear. Nothing went wrong with the Yankees—or, at any rate, nothing serious.

However, it is a bit startling to observe any such a neck-to-neck finish in the American League. For years the Yankees have finished the job of cleaning up the rest of the league not later than midsummer, and the remaining games have been little more than formalities.

The other league affords an equally astonishing picture. Ordinarily, the hay fever festival finds three or even four leading National League clubs so close upon one another's heels that it is almost impossible to distinguish the pursuers and pursued. This year, just to turn the whole business topsy turvy, we find Mr. MacKechnie's Cincinnati Reds out in front by the comfortable margin of six and a half games.

There is, to be sure, a slightly more than theoretic possibility that they may yet be overtaken by Mr. Durocher's Dodgers—but that is something on which we should scarcely urge you to wager your soul.

The Draft Bill

In approving the Burke-Wadsworth bill by a vote of 263 to 149, the House of Representatives wisely followed the lead given by the Senate and thus moved to plug up a dangerous gap in our defense system. The measure is now in the hands of a joint conference committee. It is to be hoped that final action on it will not long be delayed.

The version of the bill as approved by the House differs in a number of particulars from that which passed the Senate. But at least half of these differences are minor in their nature and should prove easy of adjustment.

Where the Senate and House measures diverge most sharply is in their respective provisions regarding draft age-limits, the so-called "conscription of industry," and, above all, the date when the selective service scheme is to go into force.

From the viewpoint of getting the numbers needed to meet Army requirements, it probably will make no difference whether the draftees are confined to the 21 to 30 age group, as is stipulated in the Senate bill, or are selected from those between the ages of 21 and 44, as is provided in the House bill. Only a small percentage of those even in the more restricted age group is likely to be summoned to the colors. On general principles, however, the House plan has more to recommend it. Its base is broader and thus more democratic. Furthermore, by making possible the drafting of able-bodied men in the older age categories it will give the Army a greater opportunity to select the kind of men it needs.

The House measure is also the more desirable of the two in the matter of bringing recalcitrant industries into line. Instead of giving the Government the dangerous right to take over plants by forced purchase, as is provided in the Senate bill, the House bill would vest in the Government the right to take over on a rental basis plants which refuse defense orders. That is a sounder, more practical and far less dangerous method of meeting the situation. Incidentally the House provision follows existing law.

The most objectionable aspect of the House bill is undoubtedly that providing for the postponement for 60 days of the actual going into force of the selective service system. During that period an attempt would be made to increase the Army by 400,000 volunteers enlisted on a one-year basis. Since registration under the draft would in any case go forward immediately upon passage of the bill, it may be that the Fish amendment would not seriously delay the induction of trainees into the Army. But it might do a considerable amount of damage nonetheless.

In the first place, it would create an artificial and invidious distinction between those who volunteered during the 60-day period and those who would subsequently be drafted should the number of volunteers fail to reach the requisite total in the time provided. Secondly, it would place undue emphasis upon a recruiting drive at a time when the Army's energies might far better be devoted to other purposes. Above all, it might seriously interfere with the current efforts of the Army to bring its permanent forces, recruited on a three-year basis, up to full authorized strength. As Representative Wadsworth, one of the co-sponsors of the bill, has pointed out, the Fish amendment, if enacted into law, would "throw a monkey-wrench" into Army expansion plans.

In approving the 60-day delay clause, the House was playing politics with defense. The elimination of this provision before the bill is returned to the House and Senate for final approval is urgently called for.

By Any Other Name

Now that Great Britain has got the destroyers, what names should they be given? Ordinarily it would be strictly the job of the admiralty to solve this delicate problem. But it is said that the admiralty lords are eager to do something in the way of a graceful gesture to show their delight in the successful completion of the deal.

The obvious thing would be to call the destroyers after our great American naval heroes. Such names as H. M. S. John Paul Jones, H. M. S. John Barry, or H. M. S. Oliver Hazard Perry might arouse painful memories. But that difficulty could be easily overcome. There are some very good reasons why the real names of warships need not—indeed, ought not—to be made public.

The art of double-crossing nomenclature has been curiously neglected by the modern world. The ancients set great store by it. The Romans in particular were convinced that names have magic properties useful in war as well as in peace. They would, for example, have been appalled by the prevalent British practice of openly and recklessly naming submarines after easily caught species of fish.

According to Sir James Frazer the Romans never laid siege to a town without special prayer inviting its titular deity to come over to their side. And, as for the real names of their own cities, they kept them a carefully guarded mystery. In other words, all Roman cities, including Rome itself, had both secret or real names and public or ostensible names.

It may be surmised that some such reasoning underlies the curious American practice of outwardly designating certain classes of naval vessels by numbers instead of names. As to whether or not this ancient practice is followed in the naming of Pullman cars we are not prepared to say. We do know that the real names of Pullman cars are rarely if ever uttered by either passengers or porters.

Of course, the whole thing may be nothing but rank superstition. Still this is no time to take needless risks. So we suggest that for the purpose of deceiving and confusing the enemy such names as H. M. S. Thingumbobby, H. M. S. Whachamacallit, H. M. S. Whoozis, H. M. S. Joe Doakes and so on be painted in very large letters on the prows of the respective destroyers.

Gen. Estigarribia

The airplane crash which resulted in the death late last week of Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia and his wife robbed Paraguay of a strong and able chief executive and the United States of a devoted friend.

Gen. Estigarribia was Paraguay's outstanding soldier but his accomplishments were by no means limited to the military sphere alone. Commander in chief of the Paraguayan forces in the war with Bolivia and in that capacity responsible for some major victories on the battlefield, he was later instrumental in getting his nation to accept the final Chaco border settlement. That agreement was negotiated with the aid of the United States, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay and made possible an increasingly larger measure of inter-American cooperation achieved successively at the Montevideo, Buenos Aires, Lima, Panama and Havana conferences.

It was during Gen. Estigarribia's tenure as his country's envoy to the United States in the period between 1937 and 1939 that he laid the basis for increased Paraguayan-American cooperation. After he became President of Paraguay last year, he invited many American experts in finance, agriculture and government to advise him on reconstruction problems. Brief as was Gen. Estigarribia's tenure as chief executive, it saw real progress being made in Paraguay in the restoration of order and recovery from the bloodletting of the Chaco war.

No Cause For Alarm

Nazi newspapers announce with evident pride that Prof. P. Busse-Grawitz, of the German clinic at Cordova, Spain, is discovering the secret of immortality. It is a nice thought, but what does it all add up to? While the professor is devising a method of restoring life, his friends in the Reich are busy thinking up new ways to end it.

And anyway there is some question whether, if Prof. Busse-Grawitz should succeed, mankind would be grateful to him. Physical immortality always has been considered with some misgivings, except by such incorrigible optimists as Ponce de Leon, who thought for some strange reason that the fountain of youth would make him happy. More in line with ordinary human expectations is the myth of Tantalus, condemned to the eternal task of rolling uphill a boulder which immediately rolled down again.

The professor's subjects, it appears, are certain Argentine mummies. Lest anyone fear the creation of a monster like Frankenstein's, however, it should be made clear that he experiments on only small pieces of tissue. In fact, any alarm over his experiments would be premature. He merely claims to have restored a few cells to an insensate and vegetable-like existence, in which they are incapable of seeing bombs explode, reading tax bills, or hearing jitterbug music.

"Borrowing money is the same as borrowing trouble," says an economist. Not quite the same, mister. One can still borrow trouble.

Dozens Of Them

From the Charlotte Observer

Archibald MacLeish, librarian of Congress, advances the proposition that the Federal Government should have a propaganda bureau similar to those maintained by the totalitarian countries.

The gentleman is away behind the times if he does not recognize the fact that the Federal Government not only has one propaganda agency, but dozens of them—in fact, practically one for every bureau that exists in Washington.

Whether the public is aware of the existence of such agencies, the newspapers of the country are every day brought face to face with the reality by having to pitch bundles of the stuff into the waste baskets which the janitors haul out almost by the truck load.

Loans And The Nazis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is reported that if the South Americans do not accept the five-year barter plan of the Nazis they will produce South American commodities in other countries and ruin the South Americans' export business.

This is a big bluff to frighten the people of Pan America, so as to bring extra pressure to bear on Congress for the $500,000,000 appropriation bill to loan on South and Central American commodities.

It took the English and Dutch from 10 to 30 years to produce South American products in other countries in commercial quantities.

If the Nazis win the war they will not be very much dependent on the Americas, and if they don't win they will not be able to make good the threat or buy very much either.

We loaned the Czechs $100,000,000 and the Germans got that.

We loaned the Poles $100,000,000 and they got that.

If we loan the South Americas $500,000,000 the German bankers in South America will most likely get that money, or the credits, within 12 months, so we might just as well loan the money direct to Hitler.

Jackson Monument

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In the September 5 issue of The Post, a letter appeared signed by one "V. C. H.," in which the author deplored the fact that the names of two Virginia Governors and three State senators appear on the monument recently unveiled on the Manassas Battlefield in honor of Stonewall Jackson.

Had it not been for the efforts of these prominent men, whose names are inscribed, inconspicuously enough, on the base of the monument, and which do not detract one iota from its magnificence, there would be nothing on the battlefield to perpetuate the memory of that valiant soldier and beloved Southerner, Thomas Jonathan "Stonewall" Jackson.

Lippmann's Theories

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Facts are stubborn things, but not so to Walter Lippmann. He juggles the facts of United States history into a learned "theory" to help Winston Churchill sell us the idea of getting into the war on the side of Great Britain. It is Mr. Lippmann's absurd idea that the United States and Britain ought to be in the war together because since 1776 "the fundamental line of American foreign policy . . . was shaped by such understandings with Great Britain . . ." He even drags the great name of Thomas Jefferson into the discussion to prove that America has always depended on monarchist Britain for "its safety."

The plain facts are that the American Republic had to wage two wars against Britain in order to secure its independence—1776 and then again in 1812, when the British monarchy tried to stage a counter-revolutionary intervention against the United States.

After these two wars, the United States faced constant enmity of the British monarchy until the Civil War when the British government saw a chance to use the Confederacy as a "Fifth Column" to overthrow the Republic. These are facts known to every honest student of history.

Mr. Lippmann, in his "theory" of the harmony of American and British government interests only proves that he is a political descendant of the Tories who hated the American Revolution from the beginning, and of those reactionary American circles who later never gave up the idea of some kind of "understanding" with the British Crown against the people's democracy here. These reactionaries tried to secede from the United States in the notorious Hartford Convention of 1812; later, agents of Jefferson Davis actually visited England and got aid from the British cabinet against the North.

Machiavelli's Words

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Apropos of the present national debate on defense, conscription and assistance to Great Britain, the following quotation from Machiavelli's Discourses (Modern Library Edition, p. 279) should be of interest:

". . . And if we examine into the cause of that good fortune we shall readily find it; for it is most certain that when a prince or a people attain that degree of reputation that all the neighboring princes and people fear to attack him, none of them will ever venture to do it except under the force of necessity; so that it will be, as it were, at the option of that potent prince or people to make war upon such neighboring powers as may seem advantageous, whilst adroitly keeping the others quiet. And this he can easily do, partly by the respect they have for his powers and partly because they are deceived by means employed to keep them quiet. And other powers that are more distant and have no immediate intercourse with him, will look upon this as a matter too remote for them to be concerned about, and will continue in this error until the conflagration spreads to their door, when they will have no means for extinguishing it except their own forces, which will no longer suffice when the fire has once gained the upper hand."

ARTHUR LEON HORNIKER.
Washington, Sept. 5.

Willkie's Stand

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
On August 23 the President "urged Congress to enact a conscription law within two weeks—an appeal which was echoed this week by Wendell L. Willkie." So says Newsweek, an ardent supporter of Willkie.

Several weeks before that the President declared for conscription in principle. Two weeks later Willkie echoed "Me, too!" in words sufficiently ambiguous to have been written by an artful professional politician—not Willkie, the bold and fearless amateur.

A reputation for courage and leadership in speech and action won Willkie the nomination.

Can timidity and fear to take a stand, till the President has spoken or acted, win Willkie the election? No, Certainly not in times like these. The overwhelming majority of the American people demand courageous leadership.

Willkie muffed on conscription. The President beat him to the draw. HENRY E. COLTON.
Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 1.

At The Capitol

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The words of Thomas Paine, "These are times that try men's souls," are surely applicable today. Our great American democracy seems to be on its death-bed, with the Roosevelt-Willkie combination doing its best to hurry it into the coffin.

Certainly, it is a sad commentary when patriotic men and women who gather peaceably to set up an all-night vigil, to pray that Congress defeat the Hitler-inspired Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill—as did some 900 people Thursday night in Capitol Park—are brutally attacked in the best Gestapo style by the police. While many fine phrases are mouthed about "preserving democracy" the Administration is quickly destroying democracy and attempting to eradicate the Bill of Rights from our Constitution.

GILBERT CARTER.
Washington, Sept. 6.

Fears For Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
One wonders if public opinion in the United States can be awake to the abject spectacle afforded by the politicians, the industrial magnates, organized labor, and a considerable portion of the press in confronting an unprecedented national emergency.

With the Supreme Court just taking into review cases involving alleged profiteering in the last war, the preparedness program has been held up nearly a month while the industrialists insist on higher profits.

And while both the President and Mr. Willkie pussyfooted on the vital need for universal service—the President at last, on August 23, came out unequivocally for the measure—both branches of Congress were more concerned in what has been called a "debate," with getting the gigantic appropriations spent in their respective constituencies, than with any thought of the public interest and actual national defense.

Meanwhile the Burke-Wadsworth bill for universal service—a bill that would be acknowledged in a real democracy such as Switzerland as the primary duty of every citizen worthy of his citizenship—that bill was amended beyond recognition and the statesmanlike project of its authors lost. While this was going on, as though to emphasize the dramatic unities, our so-called "maneuvers" of the National Guard in New York and Louisiana proved again, in the printed opinions of the reviewing generals, the pitiful inadequacy of our present military system to respond to the actualities of national defense. This was glaringly demonstrated as long ago as 1916 on the Mexican border, when the writer was present; again was it emphasized in 1917, but despite all the lessons of experience our authorities have persisted in their smugly complacent political expedient of spending millions of dollars annually for what is neither "National" nor in any sense a "Guard."

So much for the upper strata of our political economy. The underprivileged harp on the identical string as organized labor, made articulate through the utterances of their high-salaried dictators, ignore opportunities to go on record for the public welfare and concentrate solely on the matter of individual and union profit in a scale of wages capable of boosting because of war emergencies.

We have all seen what has happened to France, a "democracy" harboring the same degenerative influences which continue to weaken our own nationality. If we are to judge by demonstration rather than by empty words, are we not giving just grounds to the rest of the world for the epithet of "plutocracy"? A nation nominally worshiping a Deity of sacrifice bows down in idolatry to the golden calf.

Sleeping With Junior

THE APARTMENT in which our little family resides was designed, in a moment of weakness, by a man who specializes in architectural doll houses. As a consequence, when there are overnight guests, which there sometimes are despite our efforts, I am called upon to do some of what is erroneously called "sleeping" with Junior. These are occasions when I have ample opportunity for communing with my soul.

Being a firm believer in heredity, including the visitation of the father's sins upon future generations, I feel a measure of responsibility for this 6-year-old lad and have always anxiously watched his behavior and reactions to see if I can detect outcroppings of my own vices and virtues, or their results. Such study often leads me to a dilemma, wherein I am undecided whether to give up such theories or to surrender myself to the authorities.

During the stilly hours of night I observe, in the dim reflected light, the little figure beside me. What ghastly crimes, I ponder, could I or my ancestors have committed to place such a load upon his diminutive conscience? I roll over and suspiciously study the calm sleeping features of the lad's mother, in an adjoining bed. No, I cannot possibly place the blame there. She could not sleep thus if her own life and that of her forefathers had not been comparatively blameless.

Given the opportunity I usually sleep well myself. My rather elastic conscience is troubled with nothing which cannot be overcome by the aid of a couple of thousand sheep and a half-dozen sleeping tablets, so that rather effectively whitewashes my own ancestors. But Junior—ah, that is another matter! Here, it is plain to be seen, is a conscience which really has something to chew on!

As I watch and listen the lad mutters and mumbles to himself, occasionally breaking into loud and angry mouthings of gibberish in some heathenish tongue. These tirades are always accompanied by violent physical contortions, characterized by much threshing about and humping up in the middle. After considerable stroking, soothing and patting upon my part, Junior again lies quietly, the calm and beatific smile upon his features indicating that his demons have been at least temporarily subdued.

Hoping for the best, I plant a kiss upon his angelic brow and doze off into well-earned repose. I dream that a vicious circus mule stands before me, his heels drawn up well behind his ears as he prepares to let them fly. I seem to realize that I am in his direct line of fire, but am powerless to move. Suddenly the blow comes, right in the pit of my stomach and just where I have anticipated. With the rapidity of machine-gun fire there are innumerable repetitions. I gasp for breath, I groan and I writhe in agony, futilely trying to escape from my tormentor. Then I awaken to find Junior, mutteringly bracing his shoulders against the wall, while his legs work like pistons and his heels score a bull's-eye every stroke.

After a deal of heaving, accompanied by much sotto voce swearing, I manage to replace him lengthwise with the bed and tuck him in. Then, tenderly feeling the bruised portions of my anatomy, I again drop off into troubled slumber. I dream that I am an Arctic explorer, surrounded by ice, snow and wintry blasts. I am captured by savage Eskimos, who strip my fur clothing from my shivering body while I vainly plead for mercy. At last I stand nude before them, rapidly freezing to death. Just before the grim reaper gathers me in, I awake, to find that the latter portion of my dream, at least, is most literally true.

Instead of the Eskimos, however, I find myself in bed with an Egyptian mummy, than which King Tut himself could not have been more painstakingly wrapped. Beginning with the sheet, my offspring has neatly done himself up in four separate articles of bedclothing, each of which is carefully tied into a sailor's knot at the corners, with the ends fiendishly tucked in and concealed. Before he can be undone it is necessary to awaken the boy's mother and to turn on all the lights—maybe even call in outside assistance. It is impossible to undo this intricate roll and not believe in Brownies.

After the bed has been remade, the lights turned off and the house quieted down again, I doze fitfully. Sometimes I am startled into wide-awakeness to find Junior up on all fours, viciously butting the wall as plaster showers down upon us. Again I seize him by the ankle and yank him back to safety as he soars off into space. Finally, when he has exhausted all the tricks in his repertoire, we go back to the beginning and repeat them all, interminably.

The next morning the lad awakens early. Blearily I regard his bright and shining countenance. "How'd you sleep, son?" I inquire.

"Fine, daddy," he shouts, as he socks me with a pillow and leaps out of bed. "You sleep good?"

With a groan I roll over and try to snatch a few winks before the alarm clock goes off, grimly reflecting that, whatever the sins with which my past may have burdened his subconsciousness, "sleeping" with Junior should be sufficient atonement for them all.

Plane Crashes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Senator McCarran's declaration, as reported by the Associated Press, that "there will be other and more disastrous wrecks unless the CAB (Civil Aeronautics Board) is again put back in its independent status," sounds ominously, coming from the Senator who fought the President's reorganization order, placing this important board under Government supervision.

As yesterday's was the first commercial airline crash in 1940 under the Commerce Department's new supervision of CAB, compared to two wrecks in the first eight months of 1939 while CAB was still an independent organization, one questions the basis of Senator McCarran's accusation.

Armistice Buys French No Peace

WHILE THE ARMED might of Nazi Germany hammers away in a frontal assault against the British Isles, the Reich is covering its rear with a bitter radio campaign waged against conquered France. In their French-language transmissions, German-controlled stations in five countries—France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Germany itself—try to stimulate confusion and internal dissension in France, so that her achievements of independent, national unity may be delayed or rendered impossible. German spokesmen, for example, attack France's new leaders for playing "roulette politics." Threateningly, they ask: "What is becoming of the traitors?"

This use of radio to aid and abet actual warfare is reported by the Princeton Listening Center, a Rockefeller-financed project of Princeton University's School of Public and International Affairs, which since November has been studying the role of radio in the present conflict. While the great offensive in the West was raging, the Center recalls in its current report, the "traitor of Stuttgart," a native Frenchman broadcasting from Germany, urged his countrymen to surrender. "Force your government to make peace or drive it out!" he shouted. "Cease fire. Hoist the white flag! And insist on the immediate conclusion of peace with Germany! . . . Act quickly. Time presses. The existence of your nation, the existence of every one of you, is at stake. Unite, gather yourselves together and demonstrate for peace!"

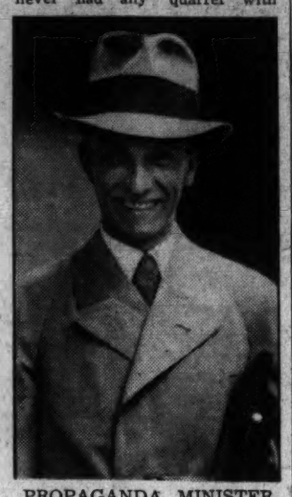
AFTER THE ARMISTICE, German broadcasts sought to demoralize the French people by filling them with a sense of crushing shame. The people of France, it was said, richly deserved their fate. A French announcer of the German-controlled "Radio Paris" blamed the war on the "mischievous diplomacy" of the French Foreign Office, and went on to tell his countrymen that their own selfishness had helped precipate the country's ruin. "Where was our solidarity?" he asked. "Under the pretext of liberalism, each was trying to live as comfortably as possible without caring what happened to his neighbor."

Now the German radio's anger is directed against the new leaders of France. Shortly after the armistice at Compeigne, a spokesman of the Reich thundered, "The crime must be avenged. Why must the parliamentary clock get out of order as soon as the hour of truth has struck? Why do its fingers never point to the hour of justice and the hour of punishment? There is always talk of righting wrongs, but never of punishing them. We require action!"

The French Parliament abolished the republican constitution of France, and Daladier and others were ordered to trial. But the German radio was not appeased. With increased bitterness, the onslaught continued. "All are responsible for the situation in which the country now finds itself!" was the new cry. To arouse confusion, while the German government frowned on the idea of French statesmen returning to the neighborhood of Paris, the German radio issued contradictory advice, "You will not find inspiration among the pals of the pals and the cronies of the cronies of the comradely republic, but here in Paris, in the midst of this sensible, brave and proud people that is so truly French. Come here, observe it living, and you will find the confidence that is required to do great things."

SIMULTANEOUSLY, an effort has been made to induce conquered Frenchmen to reconcile themselves to defeat and to imitate the German system in their new institutions. The occupation is excused on the ground that it imposes only a few small and unimportant regulations. The German army is said to be "working hard at gathering in the harvest in the north of France"—for the French. The Paris radio urges its listeners to emulate the German virtues of hard work and sobriety; business leaders are told that it is their duty to increase employment and forget about profits; workers are enjoined to forget class hatreds. Rich and poor alike are reminded of the destitute refugees who are without food, homes or decent clothing. German welfare organizations are praised and held up as an example of Germany's humane social conscience. The defeated are told to seek for "collaboration instead of revenge." The duty of all Frenchmen, the German radio reiterates, is to work, and work hard, for the construction of the Reich's new "order" in Europe.

Apparently, however, Germans still fear that continued British resistance to mass bombing attacks may encourage the French to oppose their new masters. Listeners are told that Germany never had any quarrel with



PROPAGANDA MINISTER GOEBBELS
His War Goes on in France

France, and that promises that England would stand by them—"English lies"—had led to their ruin. In the hour of need, says the German radio, England betrayed France, just as she betrayed the Czechs, Poles, Norwegians, Dutch and Belgians. "Never," says a Paris announcer, "will the continent find its natural equilibrium, its true life, its entire productive force, until English influence is entirely eliminated. England has always used Europe for non-European designs. This time, the British island people will be cleared out of the continent once and for all."

There is no chance for England to avoid defeat, the German radio incessantly asserts. Daily, Nazi-controlled stations inform the French that "the food situation in England is disastrous . . . The people of England are being asked to feed on the grass of the meadows like cows. . . . Britain's plan for coal production has gone completely bankrupt. . . . British aviators avoid combat with the Germans and escape whenever they can. . . . Britain can be completely annihilated by plane bombardments. . . . The people of England live in terror." The French are told that the English are training with "sticks and umbrellas," and that two and a half million British soldiers are without shelter because there are no camps in which to lodge them. The Nazi radio concludes: "England reminds one of a huge chicken run in which the mother hens are chasing their chicks in all directions to put them out of the reach of the hawk that is hovering above them. But the hawk may swoop down on the chicken run."

Shysteresque Deal

THE EFFECTS of the trade of destroyers with Britain and of the military protectorate over Canada may be desirable, but the manner of putting across these deals was so shysteresque that only a nation already reconciled to cunning and mocking dishonesty would accept them without protest. There will be no protest worth President Roosevelt's notice, because the people long ago wearily abandoned principle and surrendered to the what-the-hell philosophy, which holds that any crookedness short of downright criminality is all right if it is clever and if it produces results.

This attitude of resignation is the result of constant attacks on the morals of the country—first on one front, then on another—ranging in magnitude from a petty but scandalous deal in faked philatelic rarities to the advantage of a few individuals who knew very well what they were doing to a plain, defiant violation of law and the Constitution in which the Attorney General of the United States delivered a leering insult to truth.

IT WILL BE NOTICED that most of the comment on the destroyer trade recognizes the dishonesty of the transaction but accepts the results and justifies it on the ground of necessity. The spirit of the trade was the spirit of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin, and, principally, of the New Deal, and, worse luck, the prevailing spirit of the citizens of the United States.

Wendell Willkie's puny protests will be laughed off by a people who have lost their respect for honest dealing and all but repudiated Congress as a branch of the Government. Not only is Willkie making no energetic campaign as yet, but the President, with the advantage of the initiative and his reckless effrontery, is smothering him with the dust of exciting actions.

It is pathetic that the candidate of the only party of opposition can be brushed off with a raucous taunt about his street address and that his little plea for the Constitution should be derided as the whine of a confused and outclassed challenger, but that is how it is, and we are well on our way.

THE CROOKEDNESS to which the American character has adjusted itself in the years since 1932 has been exemplified no more shockingly than in the Chicago convention of the Social Democrats, in which the Kelly and Hague mobs of civic corruptioneers collaborated with the sanctimonious fakers detailed by the President to run the debauch. This alliance showed up the cynicism of the New Deal bosses and was thoroughly exposed at the time, but the people took it with a grin and went looking for reasons to suspect Willkie.

This acceptance marks a great change since 1932 and 1933, when popular indignation ran high, as the lynching stories used to say, against the cheats and burglars of finance. Up to that time the Americans still had the will and the morals to resent crookedness, but steady pressure since then has reduced them to a state of acquiescence.

THE APPOINTMENT of a member of a gang of masked, night-riding terrorists to the Supreme Court was an important test in the campaign to corrupt the people, and since then the going has been fairly easy. It used to be said that the Constitution was whatever the Supreme Court said it was, but if that ever was true it isn't any more. Today the Constitution is what the Attorney General says it is, and the President will tell him what to say.

The dealings of Jimmy and Elliott Roosevelt, the exploitation of office for financial gain, the amazingly bold program of petty larceny nepotism in Washington, the corruption of the ballot by bribery with taxes and borrowed money, the bland repudiation of every promise on which the New Deal first was elected and the swelling arrogance of the embittered failures named to power in Washington all have combined to soften up the American people for the knockout. Given another mandate in November, the New Deal will really go to town, and the Constitution will be rewritten into piglatin and double-talk.

"PARTIES CHIEFLY CONCERNED SEEM TO AGREE" says Ernest Lindley, that the neutral status of the United States is not altered by the swap of 50 overage destroyers for naval bases. As those chiefly concerned he cites President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, the Germans and the Italians. "The chief dissenters," he adds, "are a few so-called 'isolationists.'"

Keeping Out Of War

By Ernest K. Lindley

'Isolationists' Harm Peace Cause

THE PRESIDENT has formally informed Congress and the world at large that the destroyer-base trade with Great Britain does not alter our peaceful status.

Prime Minister Churchill has so informed Parliament and the world at large.

The Germans agree, having chosen to regard the "swap" as a sign of the breaking up of the British Empire and as a hard-headed business deal on the part of the United States.

The Italians, to date, have taken no contrary view.

Thus the parties chiefly concerned seem to agree unanimously. The chief dissenters are a few so-called "isolationists" who have been proclaiming to the world that the transfer of the destroyers is an act which inevitably will lead to our full participation in the war. This is a strange position for the "isolationists." Their avowed aim these several years has been to keep us out of wars across the oceans. Some of these have repeatedly accused the President of "war-mongering." (Now they have become our loudest-mouthed warmongers. Their aim seems to be to convince the American people, and the rest of the world, that we are at war or so nearly at war that nothing can stop us from becoming a full and acknowledged belligerent.

THE PRESIDENT of the United States, the Prime Minister of Great Britain and spokesmen for the German and Italian governments agree that the transfer of destroyers was not an act of war. And, whatever their hopes or fears, they have not publicly interpreted this act as one which carries us to the brink of war. In fact, the destroyer-base deal was so skillfully drawn that it can stand alone as a shrewd bargain—one so advantageous to us that we would have been foolish not to have agreed to it even if we had had no interest in the outcome of the struggle between the Axis and the British Empire. Every precaution was taken by the President to prevent the trade from being interpreted anywhere as a belligerent act.

But the "isolationists" seem suddenly to have become so eager to spill American blood that they insist nevertheless that we are already either at war or poised for the final plunge.

The cause of those who believed, and believe, that we should not go to war in Europe or Asia has been damaged repeatedly during the last year or so by the urge of a few of the most conspicuous—and most poorly informed—"isolationists" to make foolish prophecies. But I doubt that any of us expected them to become the most vocal wing of the "war party."

THERE IS ANOTHER wing to the "war party." It is not talking out loud much just now. But it is represented in the Administration, as well as in Congress, and in the rank-and-file voters of both parties. They have favored going into the war as a full belligerent, and they still favor it. Some of them, less bold, have chosen rather to foster the fatalistic idea that we cannot keep out of this war, even if we try to. Or, alternately, they now assert, at least in private, that we are so deeply committed to the Allied or British side that we might as well go the whole way now.

Nothing is more surely calculated to put us into the war as a full belligerent than the continual assertion that we are already at war, or that we can't keep out of it.

Nobody can say confidently that we will not, under any circumstances, go to war outside the Western Hemisphere. Under certain conditions it might be clearly in our national interest to do so. For example, it might be to our interest to throttle Japan if we could do so by purely naval action—which some of our experts considered entirely feasible a few years ago by long-range blockade if the British would cooperate.

OR, TO TAKE another example, what should we do if the British Isles should be conquered but the British Empire should wish to carry on the war from a new capital in Canada? This the empire could not do without aid from us on a much greater scale than we are now giving. The job of maintaining the British fleet would be chiefly up to us. And the Axis could not strike at the new seat of the empire without violating the Monroe Doctrine.

Those are situations which may arise. Obviously they should be met with as cold an appraisal of our national interest as it is possible to make. Well this side of those more extreme possibilities lie all kinds of specific problems which may crop up. As in the destroyer-base trade we can meet many, perhaps all, of them in ways which serve our national interest without going to war. But not if the war-mongers put across the idea that we already are at war, or only one tottering step away from it.

Voice From the Fleet

I'm an overage destroyer,
Not perhaps the real hot stuff,
But when I get into action,
Well, I may be hot enough.

Ima Dodo says she didn't think a destroyer, if overage, could be taken in the draft.

Ad similes: As forgotten as Gen. Gamelin.

But how do Mickey Rooney and Jack Oakie stand?

"The Government does not want to place industrialists or business people in a position where the aftermath of expansion is ruin. There are ways, however, of meeting this problem without haggling for weeks over the period of mobilization or the amount of interest which shall be earned on money invested."—Mrs. Roosevelt, in "My Day."

Attack On London

By Barnet Nover

A Nightmare Becomes A Reality

AT EIGHT minutes past ten on the night of March 16, 1938, the people of Barcelona and its surrounding suburbs heard an unpleasantly familiar screech. The air raid sirens of Spain's largest city were sounding an alarm.

That was the beginning of the most systematic and terrifying aerial assault on a civilian center which the world had ever seen up to that time. Thirteen times the sirens sounded in Barcelona during the next 39 hours. Thirteen times, as regularly as clockwork, enemy planes swarmed in over the city from the sea, raining death and destruction on its million and a half inhabitants.

The attack ended as suddenly as it began. But when the last all-clear signal was given there were 3,000 dead in Barcelona, 5,000 sufficiently wounded to be given hospital treatment, an estimated 20,000 others suffering from minor injuries.

IT IS NOW clear that the reason why the raids on Barcelona were broken off was to prevent the world from learning too many lessons from them. Carried out with not more than 30-35 planes at a time, they were a German dress rehearsal for what is happening over London and which, during the past year, has happened to Warsaw, Rotterdam and other places.

Barcelona had only primitive air defenses, indeed little more than a few antiaircraft guns with which to fight the aerial invaders and these were unable to reach the high-flying bombing planes of the Germans. London is infinitely better protected. It has balloon barrages, antiaircraft guns in great numbers and a fleet of fast and powerful fighters capable of taking their toll from the enemy. Yet this protection has availed London little against the tremendous armadas which Hitler has hurled against it during the last two days. It has not prevented the Nazi raiders from dropping tons of explosive and incendiary bombs on homes, power plants, harbor works, warehouses, factories and streets in the metropolitan area and doing untold damage thereby.

IF THE BRITISH figures are to be believed, the actual number of casualties resulting from Saturday's terrifying raids was relatively slight. The British authorities say 400 were killed, 1,500 to 2,000 seriously wounded. But, in view of the number of German bombers that participated in the raid, the tremendous numbers of bombs that were dropped and the fact that almost 8,500,000 men, women and children are crowded together in the London area the destruction of life was less than one might have expected.

This circumstance may be explained on the ground that London's population apparently carried out the A. R. P. warnings and sought refuge in underground shelters. But a contributory factor, no doubt, was the fierce British resistance by means of antiaircraft and fighter planes. Because of this resistance a great many of the invading bombers had to drop their loads from great heights, depending on sheer volume to accomplish the work of destroying military objectives while, at the same time, terrorizing the population.

ACCOUNTS from London, while making it clear that a vast amount of destruction was caused by the raids, emphasize that they did not break the morale of the people. Far from weakening the British will to resist, these raids and their consequent slaughter and destruction only infuriated the islanders, made them cry out for vengeance.

The fact must nonetheless be recognized that continuous aerial assault of the kind which the Nazis carried out Saturday and Sunday, if persisted in with the same or greater force for a long period of time, may have a very serious effect on Britain's capacity to defend herself.

The central question, therefore, in the present and it may be crucial stage in the Battle of Britain, is whether Germany is prepared to continue these giant mass raids and for how long. For regardless of the destruction they may have caused to date, unless Britain is knocked out quickly, if possible before the bad weather sets in, that long war of which Hitler warned his people last week may be more than a figure of speech. And in a long war a German victory would be no certainty.

Hitler appears to be throwing everything he has in this tremendous assault on the British metropolis. He is paying a great price for the destruction his bombers are causing. According to the British close to 100 German planes were shot down in the raids of Saturday afternoon and night and Sunday morning. That is a real loss even in terms of the German air force. Yet having gambled before and won Hitler may have decided to make a still greater gamble than any even he has attempted.

On the outcome of this gamble the fate of Great Britain, of Europe and of the world depends. In the meantime the people of London are face to face with total war in its grimmest and most tragic aspect.

Paraguay Names War Minister as Acting President

Asuncion, Paraguay, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Paraguayan Cabinet designated War Minister Gen. Higinio Morinigo provisional president today, pending selection of a successor to President Jose Felix Estigarribia, who, with Senora Estigarribia, was killed yesterday in an airplane accident.

Following an all-night cabinet session, Gen. Morinigo announced he was retaining members of the Estigarribia cabinet, and appointed Paulino Antola to succeed him as war minister.

Estigarribia and his wife were killed when their plane crashed en route to his country residence near San Bernardino, on Lake Ypagaray, 180 miles east of here.

Sweden Extends Credit and Gets Soviet Trade Pact

Stockholm, Sept. 8 (AP).—The signing of a new trade and credit agreement between Sweden and Soviet Russia in which Sweden extends a credit of 100,000,000 kronor (about $24,000,000) was announced simultaneously today here and at Moscow. The credit extends five years at 4½ per cent interest.

A total of 150,000,000 kronor (about $36,000,000) in trade and exchange is provided for in the agreement.

Russia may apply her credit over a two-year period. Sweden expects to export about $24,000,000 worth of goods to Russia and import about $18,000,000 worth of goods from her this year as against exports of some $4,000,000 and imports of around $3,000,000 in 1938.

Young DutchNazis, Opponents Battle In Hague Streets

Amsterdam (via Berlin), Sept. 8 (AP).—A street battle at The Hague between Dutch Nazis and their opponents, in which one person was killed and a number injured, was disclosed tonight with dismissal of The Hague police chief, E. Van Der Mey.

German Commissioner Arthur Seysz-Inquart said the chief took inadequate measures to prevent the clash, and replaced him with Public Security Commissioner Rauter.

The official German version of the incident said that about 200 members of the Dutch Nazi youth organization, accompanied by some members of the Dutch version of Nazi storm troopers, were parading when a cyclist rode into the procession "with provocative intent" and a fight resulted.

National Airport Nears Completion

ITS six runways now 80 per cent completed, the National Airport at Gravelly Point is almost ready for dedication and use.

Today planes could land and take off on the 4,000 linear feet of two runways completed. By November, all runways will be ready, covered with 540,000 square feet of asphalt, of which approximately 432,000 square feet already have been laid.

Construction of the huge terminal building, which will house ticket offices of the airlines, dispatchers' tower, baggage rooms, restaurant and other facilities necessary to the operation of a major airport, has reached the second floor. Soon it will be at the stage where its cornerstone may be laid. Foundations for the first hangar are down; work on the others is awaiting additional appropriations.

WHEN completed, Gravelly Point Airport will contain more landing field area than the total area of any airport in the United States, including New York's famed North Beach field. Runways already completed total more than all runways on all existing airports in the District area put together.

Of the six runways, those completed now are the long north-south lane and the northwest-southeast runway, both laid along the line of prevailing winds. When all are finished, the 740-acre field, of which 520 acres are landing area alone, will contain enough paving for a 20-foot road 75 miles long. There will be 22,400 linear feet of runways and 220 acres of plaza and parking terraces.

The land on which the airport rests is mostly "made land," dredged up from the bottom of the Potomac over the course of a year. In all, 27,450,000 tons of mud and gravel were pumped from the river to make the airport.

You came with one small grip and an overnight case, as a well-bred traveler should. And now——

Why if you could even get your clothes in your grip for the homeward journey that would be something. But there is that lovely blouse you couldn't resist on the day Cousin Mabel took you through Sailem's. And there is that extra slip you needed . . . and the hose you bought at the sale everyone was rushing to like mad . . . and the little sweater coat you had to get for the drive to the mountains . . .

Well, you'll simply have to take along Mabel's big pasteboard suit box, even if it does make you look like a hick. Still that's not a beginning. You survey the array of things spread over your bedroom . . .

The dress for Sister Alice. (Why on earth didn't you have the store mail it?)

The little suit with matching hat for Alice's Junior (why didn't you wait and buy it at home? Still it will mean so much more coming from Washington).

The table centerpiece in the form of a flower cart with a long projecting handle that you won at a bridge party given in your honor. (How proud you will be to exhibit it at home!)

The book on accountancy Mabel's hunsband is sending to your young nephew. (It weighs a ton but he'll be so thrilled getting it from Uncle Bob.)

Two boxes of kiddie candy that friends have brought for Junior. (It was so sweet of them only——)

A box of homemade fudge that Mabel is sending to your George. (He's always said nobody can make fudge like Mabel's.)

The pair of bedroom slippers Cousin Grace left behind when she visited here in the spring. (They wanted to mail them but you said you'd just get them when you came.)

Those cute little souvenir seashells with Mount Vernon on them that you bought in a moment of weakness. (Oh well, the children will love playing with them.)

The tobacco box with Mount Vernon you bought for George. (Maybe he'll keep his things off the window sill now.)

The handkerchiefs you got for Mrs. Posey, the powder box you got for Mrs. Squibb. (After all, you have to take the neighbors something.)

Well, there's simply nothing to do but send out and buy another suitcase—no maybe a hat box would be better since there's that bottle of toilet water Mabel's sister-in-law gave you. After all, that would only make four things to carry—but wait! What's all that on the lounge? You start a second survey and find. . . .

The bubble pipe set someone has gotten for Junior.

The perfectly good dress Mabel is sending to the Jitters—the poor family you both know.

A pile of souvenir booklets and picture folders of places you have visited.

Now what on earth are you going to do? What you need is a caravan of camels—The Queen of Sheba had the right idea when she went to visit Solomon. She had sense enough to know she would be taking home things.

Now of course you could wrap neatly everything that wouldn't go into the hat box . . . and then tie all the parcels together . . . and you could put a lot of things into your knitting bag and carry it on the outside. Still . . . how would you look stepping off the train? that big box in the corner? Or even on it? Well, you can't think of that—say wait! WHAT is Why—why it's that huge rubber ball with the dog's face that Mabel got for Junior! The one thing he'll be crazy about! Now what on earth . . . Oh well there's no other way out. You'll just call up a luggage store and tell them to send you the biggest steamer trunk they have.

Dressmakers Return to Paris

Paris (AP).—Lucien Lelong, head of the Paris dressmakers, says that dressmakers are returning to Paris as quickly as possible.

M. Lelong, who is president of the Chambre Syndicate de la Couture, the Paris dressmakers' association, said: "We will have conferences to decide what is the practicable course for us in the future. We are full of courage, but for the present are entirely in the air and not in position to announce any plans whatever. Our major problem is labor and the immediate necessity of finding work for the employes of the whole industry."

Button Trick for Old Frocks

Twenty-nine dozen buttons went into this striking afternoon dress. The buttons were copied by La Mode from old French ones in dull gold-surfaced filigree and served as lifesavers for the "last year's black" done over by the clever model above. Of course, sewing on all those buttons on the squared-off shoulders and patch pockets did take time but the compliments resulting were worth it

Face Powder Blending

Summer has gone and suntans are on the wane. The deep copper and cafe au lait skin tones are now in the fading process. The color of the skin will undergo a series of changes before it returns to the clear, fair, pink and white stage. Powder, lipsticks and rouge should be changed to harmonize with the changing skin tones.

Dark, beige, suntan and the yellowish and brownish powders of summer will not enhance the fairer skin of autumn. For face flattery you will need to do an expert job of powder blending. To do this you should have two basic powder shades, light and dark. Keep a small empty box on hand and blend a little at a time. However, if you know little or nothing about blending powder, it is best to seek the advice of an expert.

From now until September 16 one of the most widely known manufacturers of cosmetics has a special consultant at one of the local stores to give advice on make-up and care of the skin. She blends powder for the individual. This week this firm offers a box of individually blended powder with the purchase of any of its other products. Or you can buy your powder separately.

Baked Fish,

Celery Dressing

BAKED fish is a dish that is served too seldom in most households. When a fish is complemented with lemon celery dressing that is adding particular deliciousness.

First buy a 1½ to 2 pounds halibut or salmon steak and then fill with a celery dressing and serve with lemon sauce and parsley garnish. Here is the recipe:

Baked Fish With Dressing

Combine 6 cups bread cubes, 1 cup chopped celery, ½ cup chopped green pepper, ½ cup chopped stuffed olives, 1 tablespoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup hot water, and ¼ cup melted shortening. Place in a well greased shallow baking dish. Place fish on top, brush it with melted butter, and sprinkle with salt and paprika. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 1½ hours. Serves 4 to 6.

To make the lemon sauce, just before serving, beat 2 egg yolks and 2 tablespoons lemon juice into 1½ cups medium white sauce.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Questions Girl's 'Decency,' Since She Refused To Marry Him After Accepting His Lovemaking

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man just 30, but seem much older, due to my serious outlook on life. I haven't had much association with women, because I hadn't enough security, until recently, to risk getting seriously interested in any. Hence, I avoided them. However, I have always put women on a pedestal, which may have been a mistake.

This brings me to my problem: All last year I went with a girl who is 22. I never missed a day. She teaches Sunday school and is supposed to be very religious. Many people remark what a nice girl she is. When we began going together I tried to be affectionate with her. She resisted and said she would grant such favors only to a man she loved. I took this to mean she didn't love me, although I loved her from the first.

After two months I decided to quit her, whereupon she declared her love for me and I decided to stay. From then on she was very affectionate and granted me favors which I am sure no decent girl would permit unless she expected to marry the man. However, she went away for a vacation and on her return she said she still loved me but intended to stop seeing me, because of our different temperaments.

She holds me guilty of having a bad temper, but the trouble started when she wouldn't agree to marry me, in spite of behaving so affectionately toward me. This caused me to distrust her. I believe in monogamous behavior and the single standard. I expect to be faithful to one woman and I expect a woman to conduct herself accordingly with me.

Must I expect such trifling conduct from women? If so, here's another confirmed bachelor. I have returned her letters and pictures, although she hasn't returned mine yet. The girl baffles me. In spite of her somewhat free behavior with me, she still teaches Sunday school and attends evening services regularly. I will appreciate your comment, as I am anxious to get a right outlook on the matter. H. K.

In Judging Others, We Reveal Ourselves

DEAR H. K.: When a man who is disappointed in love peevishly questions the "decency" of the woman he professes to love, he is showing cause why the woman should get rid of him. There is something mean in his character and corrupt in his thought, which inevitably would cast a blight on their relationship. Remember, "To the pure in heart all things are pure"—and this is particularly true an affectional exchange based on a conviction of mutual love.

It is entirely conceivable that your religiously inclined former sweetheart could accept your embraces, with no sense of sullying or compromising herself, during the time she thought herself happily in love with you. Her responsiveness should be interpreted not as wantonness, but as the expression, the pledge, of her undoubtedly sincere feeling for you (as she understood you to be) during that period in her social and emotional growth.

It is perfectly possible that her decision to break off the relationship—at least, in its more intimate aspects—is an expression of integrity, rather than of lightmindedness. On closer acquaintance, she may have discovered you to be less admirable than she had at first supposed. Or it could be that in the exorable process of growing (which advances by spurts rather than by even progression) she speedily outgrew her attachment to you—for the reason that you proved to be a shallow source of mental or spiritual stimulus. Or she may even have realized, belatedly, that she had mistaken infatuation for love.

In any event, the fact that she weighed your marriage proposal carefully (instead of jumping at the offer), in spite o fthe fact that she was emotionally attracted to you, shows she has an intelligent recognition of the importance of that contract. She must have realized that emotional magnetism, of itself, is insufficient foundation upon which to build a good marriage.

In breaking off the relationship, "because of your different temperaments" she displays intuitive wisdom. Her actions imply her awareness that the finest type of love (the kind needed for marriage) is largely compounded of mutual sympathy, understanding and consideration, and reciprocal respect and trust. Obviously, such elements are lacking in your feeling for her, when you can be ready to believe and to insinuate that she is an immoral hypocrite.

Furthermore, the fact that you could entertain such a suspicion of her suggests that you must be judging her in terms of yourself—especially since you must admit that you know very little about feminine nature. My view of this matter is that your attitude does you no credit, regardless of how foolishly the girl may have behaved. It is not the attitude of a gentleman, nor of a man of the world, nor of a person with a generous, idealistic outlook. It smacks simply of the fabled "sour grapes" reaction. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Eat—Don't Starve—If You Would Reduce

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU were cast on a desert island where there was nothing to eat, you might not reduce as fast as you could at home within reach of a good, juicy steak!

In starvation, your system rapidly cuts down on the number of calories it requires to keep going. You may use 30 per cent less normally! On the other hand, the drop in your metabolism may be so slight on a low caloric diet that the deficit is likely to be greater than in actual starvation!

Of course, you have no intention of going entirely without food—but it should be comforting to know that you can lose weight faster by eating within your reducing requirements.

You may also find it helpful to know that you can reduce faster on certain foods than on others. These are the foods with a high specific dynamic action which stimulate the burning of fat in the body and help you to lose weight. Protein heads this list.

There are a few cases, such as gout and cardiovascular-renal disease, in which it is inadvisable to increase the protein. But in normay cases the protein content of the reducing diet may be as high as 75 to 100 grams daily. Since grams do not mean much to the layman, here is the list of foods which total 75 grams of protein, and which, included in the daily diet, will help you to lose weight faster.

	Protein Grams.
Meat or fish, ½ pound	25
Egg, 1	7
Bacon, 2 slices	3
Milk, 1 glass	8
Cottage cheese, ½ cup	19
Whole-wheat bread, 3 slices	9
Vegetables, 2 servings or 7 oz.	5

This list of foods contains about 800 calories. By adding two fresh fruits and a small amount of butter you have an adequate reducing diet of about 1,000 calories.

If you try to string along on a liquid diet or a faddy menu composed mainly of raw vegetables, you can't possibly get enough protein. A prolonged diet of that kind would result in undue loss of body protein and would endanger your health. Besides, you probably would not reduce as fast on it!

Women Hold Three Most Important Editorial Jobs on Greenbelt Paper

THE FEMININE touch is conspicuous in the Greenbelt Cooperator, newspaper published by residents of the Maryland community. Present editor is Dorothea Ford, a nurse employed by the Greenbelt Health Association. She gained her journalistic experience as managing editor of The New Nurse while in training at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York. News editor is Anne Dayton Hull, housewife and mother of a small daughter, who edited her high school paper in student days. And copy editor is Claire Still, Bureau of Printing & Engraving employe. All three are still in their twenties. Only males who figure importantly on the staff are the business manager, sports editor and make-up editor.

An article which caused a flurry recently among the Cooperator's women readers revealed that civil rights aren't what they might be in the Free State. Written by Mrs. Peggy Arness, it pointed out that: A Maryland woman's possessions after her marriage belong to her husband, who can dispose of them without her consent and will them to whomever he pleases; a woman"s property is liable for her husband's debts and, if he leaves no will, passes to his estate at his death even when she survives him; property acquired through the joint efforts of husband and wife belongs to the husband. Since the story appeared, Greenbelt women have had no scruples about going through their husbands' pockets.

MATERNITY FLOOR—A woman who had looked forward to her stay in the hospital as a chance to catch up on sleep was driven to distraction by a constant procession of nurses with face cloths and maids with dust mops. Catnaps between interruptions were out of the question, because she wasn't allowed to keep her door closed against corridor noises. She finally solved the problem by removing her nightgown and bedclothes. The first nurse who passed closed her door hastily, and she was left in peace until the next face-washing.

A Congressman tells this one on a Government gal who is well-known on Capitol Hill for her habit of dropping in on acquaintances as lunchtime approaches. He was on the House floor when the doorkeeper came in and announced, as on many previous occasions, "Miss Smith would like to see you." Then he added, after a moment's mental debate, "She told me she KNEW she could count on you for a free meal."

A Washington housewife who always had placed firm faith in her maid's sobriety began to have her doubts one day when the girl unexpectedly launched an oration on the subject of her employer's fine qualities, concluding, "I love you just like a sister." It developed that the source of her mellow mood was not a bottle but a revival meeting she had attended the night before.

Peggy Townsend Now Modeling in New York

Lovely Washington Postdeb Fulfilling Photographic Assignments; Is Staying With Her Mother at the Barbizon Plaza

Washington is about to lose one of its leading glamour girls—Miss Peggy Townsend. It's been rumored for some time that she would become a model in New York this winter, but Peggy refused to discuss plans until they reached a definite stage. Now it can be told that she has already gone to Manhattan to fulfill some photographic assignments.

Her mother, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, is with her, and they are at the Barbizon Plaza. Mrs. Townsend will return to her apartment at the Cordova the end of the week.

The many people who consider Miss Townsend one of the prettiest girls in Washington will not be surprised that she has been offered these opportunities in New York. Slender, blue-eyed, with curly chestnut hair which she wears in a shoulder-length bob, the attractive postdeb is extremely photogenic.

Several From D. C. New York Hits

It begins to look as though New York would owe some of its loveliest models and night club singers to Washington. Several years ago Mrs. Vivian Linke decided to have a try at modeling, and now is one of those most in demand by Manhattan photographers. Her pretty face peers from dozens of magazine covers and advertisements. Mrs. Linke, who had been married several years before she launched her career, recently obtained a divorce from Commander Linke.

Another Washingtonian to achieve success amid Broadway's bright lights is Miss Ann Keiss. She has been singing in well-known New York and Saratoga spots for several seasons.

Miss Townsend has done some modeling in Washington, at fashion shows and benefits. She is the great-niece of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, the Capital's leading patron of music, whose "Monday musicales" have been famous for a great many years. Mrs. Townsend has been spending the summer at Schroon Lake, N. Y., where there is a sizable music colony.

Miss Claude To Make Debut

To turn from a postdeb to a deb—a newcomer to the group this season will be Miss Kitty Claude, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Abram Claude. Kitty has just returned after a month in Connecticut and is looking forward to joining in the debutante festivities. She was graduated last June from Holton Arms, which has given Washington most of its current crop of debs this season.

Capt. and Mrs. Claude haven't yet sea a date for their daughter's party, but are definitely decided to make it an informal one. Miss Claude is sports minded, particularly fond of tennis, and also adores music and dancing.

Her older sister, the former Miss Anne Claude, was married last year to Thomas S. Willets, jr., of Essex, Conn. Her family took a cottage in Saybrook, near there, this summer.

Miss Gill Wed To Mr. Jacobs

In a setting of early autumn flowers, Miss Flora Berenice Gill was married at 3 o'clock yesterday to Ephraim Jacobs, of Huntington, W. Va., and Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jacobs, of Canton, Ohio. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morriss Hilliard Gill, of Cleveland Park, with the Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown made with a Chantilly lace bodice and full net skirt ending in a train. Her fingertip veil fell from a halo edged with pearls and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her cousin, Mrs. Leonard Wallenstein, of Baltimore, was matron of honor, wearing blue moire made with a bustle and a large bow in her hair and carrying deep pink roses with delphinium. The Misses Jean Pelzman and Claire Korman were bridesmaids, dressed in Alpine rose taffeta with puffed sleeves and carrying bouquets like Mrs. Wallenstein's.

The bride attended George Washington University and her husband studied at Marshall College, Huntington.

Mrs. Harriman To Talk Tomorrow To Press Women

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman will be honor guest and speaker at the first of the season's weekly luncheons of the Women's National Press Club. The members will meet tomorrow at the Willard at 1 o'clock to hear the intrepid 70-year-old minister describe her experiences in Norway.

Now enjoying three months' accumulated leave, Mrs. Harriman is renewing old friendships here after more than a year's absence. She isn't definite yet about her plans for the winter.

The new president of the Press Club, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, will preside at the luncheon tomorrow.

Dr. Sutton Takes Bride

Dr. and Mrs. Guy Forrest Sutton, jr., who were married here Saturday, will make their home in Washington after a Northern honeymoon. The bridegroom is a member of the House staff at Doctors Hospital.

The bride is the former Miss Mabel Garth Montague, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woods Garth Montague, of Ashland, Ky. She attended Marshall College. Dr. Sutton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sutton, of Staunton, Va., received his medical degree from the University of Virginia. He is a member of Nu Sigma Nu and served his interneship at Emergency Hospital in Washington.

The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock in the chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church The Rev. Albert Evans officiated in a setting of white roses and cathedral candles. The bride wore a green suit trimmed with fox and a corsage of white orchids. Only relatives and close friends attended.

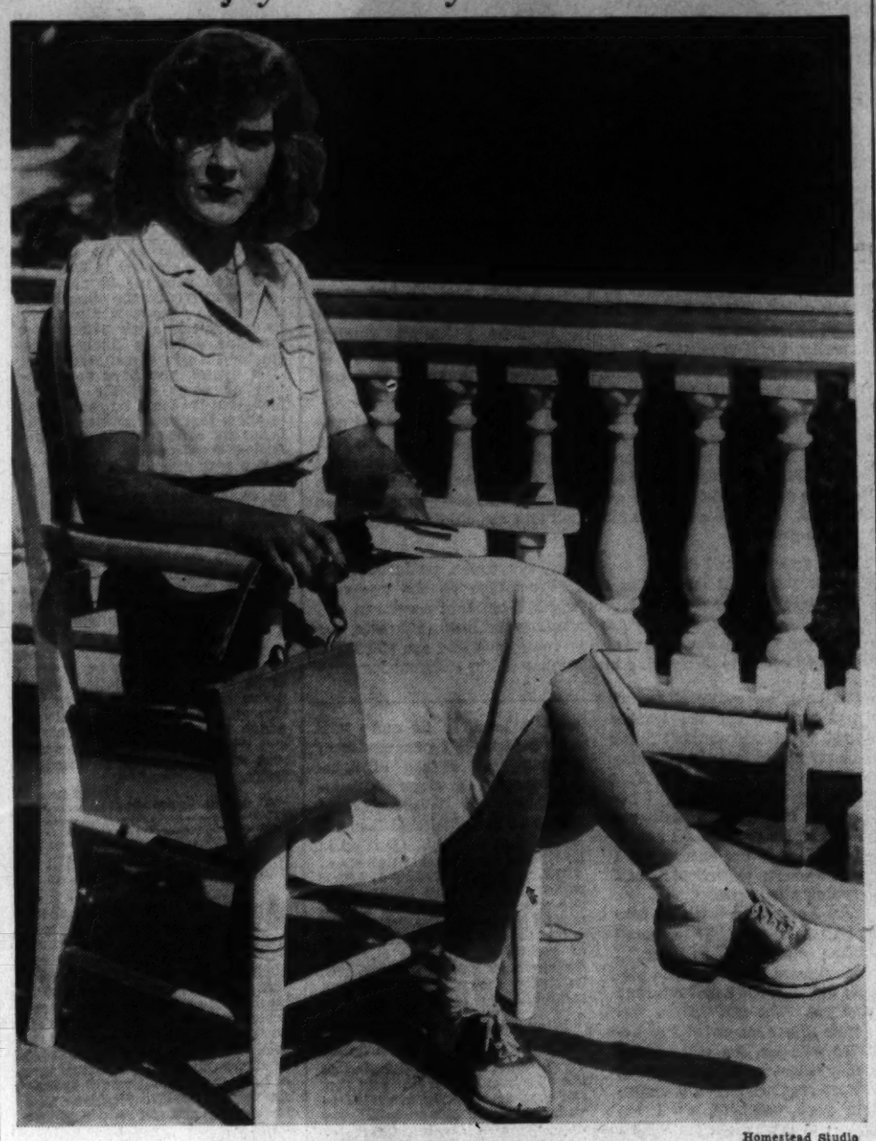
Enjoys Last Days of Summer



Homestead Studio

MISS LOUISE STILLWELL, one of the prettiest debutantes of the season, suns herself on the porch of the Homestead at Hot Springs, Va. She has been spending the summer there with her mother, Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, and is expected to return sometime this month

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

DIPLOMATS ARE the most tactful people. There is a legend that says an incoming ambassador never arrives at the embassy until his predecessor has left, even if they happen to be best friends. Therefore when new French Ambassador Gaston Henri-Haye arrived in New York a little ahead of schedule he thoughtfully planned to week-end on Long Island in order not to hurry the adieux of the very popular Count de Saint-Quentin. It prevents there being two heads of mission and two masters of the house, you know.

One of the last gatherings at which the retiring French Ambassador appeared as host was an informal men's luncheon, a very pleasant function enhanced by the famously good cuisine of the Embassy. One of the guests, who didn't seem to have his mind on the higher and more serious things of life, remarked that he "certainly hoped M. Henri-Haye succeeded in retaining the services of the Embassy chef."

The lovely, sunny day caused the guests to linger long over their coffee in the garden. Perhaps also they were reluctant to bid good-by to a friend who is returning to a home so changed as to be practically unrecognizable.

The Spanish Ambassador Juan de Cardenas was among those present, very happy indeed at the news that his lovely wife has just completed her arrangements to return to Washington from a visit to her mother in Rumania. Other guests were Assistant Secretary of State, Adolf Berle, jr., the Argentine Ambassador, the Minister of Yugoslavia, Ray Atherton and Herbert Feis, of the State Department; Jo Alsop and Jacques Truelle and Jacques Du-Maine of the Embassy staff.

THE FEMININE guests at the recent Bramwell-O'Donnell wedding breakfast became so charmed with the idea of second weddings that they all resolved to get married again very soon. Some of them declared for marrying the same men over again while others reserved decision pending the outcome of the fall wardrobe and I-need-a-new-fur-coat problem.

Mrs. Robert Pell has returned to Washington from Bermuda and she and Mr. Pell have taken an apartment on Massachusetts avenue for the winter months.

THE FIRST SECRETARY of the British Embassy and Mrs. Hoyer Millar are taking a motor trip and hope, with luck, to get as far as the Pacific Coast, seeing Hollywood, Taos and all the sights on the way. This is, of course, contingent on Washington's present rule of life, "work permitting."

Jose de Lasa of the Cuban Embassy has returned to Washington after a short vacation at Ashville, N. C. Part of his "rest" in the South consisted in climbing Mount Michel, one of the highest peaks east of the Rockies.

The Chase Donaldsons have sublet their house on R street to Patrick Hill, of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Hill. Mr. Donaldson will be in and out of Washington all winter on business but Mrs. Donaldson, who has been in poor health all summer, will seek a belated dose of sunshine in California.

CAPT. AND MRS. John P. Jackson have arrived in the Capital from Rehoboth, where they spent the month of August. They will shortly take possession of their house which was leased last winter to Mrs. Scudder Doeg.

In the meantime, Mrs. Jackson says she expects that rumors of a split in the family will circulate among their friends because Capt. Jackson is going to live at the Chevy Chase Club while she will take an apartment at Stoneleigh Court. The reason for the "split" is not one female but two, the Jackson's two tiny little dogs. Mrs. Jackson calls them "the girls" and feels that they are too small and helpless to be abandoned, even for a short time. You see the Chevy Chase Club doesn't allow dogs to take up residence.

I HEAR THAT Jules Henry, for many years Counselor of the French Embassy in Washington, or so many in fact that it was practically a record, is being transferred from Brazil to Turkey. His post in Brazill will, of course, be taken over by Count de Saint-Quentin.

Miss Reardan Plights Troth

Col. and Mrs. John D. Reardan, of The Presidio, San Francisco, formerly of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Wilson Reardan, to Judson C. Rhode, son of Dr. and Mrs. Solon L. Rhode, of Reading, Pa.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Holton-Arms School and attended Vassar College.

Mr. Rhode was an honor graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology last June. The wedding will take place in San Francisco in December. The couple will make their home in Boston.

Miss Brownlee Is Engaged

Of interest here is the announcement by Mrs. Harris Fenton Brownlee, of Danbury, Conn., of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Adelaide Brownlee, to Oliver Payne Bolton, son of the late Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Cleveland, and Representative Frances Bolton. The latter was elected in February to fill the unexpired term of her husband and is the first woman member of Congress from Ohio.

Miss Brownlee, daughter of the late Dr. Brownlee, attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and was graduated from Miss Hewitt's Classes in New York. She was presented to New York society several seasons ago.

Mr. Bolton attended Milton Academy and was graduated in 1939 from Harvard, where he was a member of Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770 and the Delphic Club. He is now studying at Western Reserve University Law School.

Lady Leslie, Back From Trip, Pours Tea for Friends

Lady Bradford Leslie, who has just returned to town and finished settling her new apartment at the Dresden, entertained for a few friends at tea there on Saturday afternoon.

For the past several months, Lady Leslie and a party of friends have been jaunting about the country and through New England, stopping off in Bar Harbor, where they were widely feted. Having been entranced by Vermont during their trip, Lady Leslie plans to return to that State for the winter season and the winter sports.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE HUNT COUNTRY is still talking about the successful dance which Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Watkins gave on Saturday for their debutante daughter, Miss Virginia Stuart Watkins.

The North Wales Club was beautifully decorated for the occasion with summer flowers, green ferns and garlands of Southern smylax. Miss Katkins, a tall, slender blonde, wore a frock of pale-blue tulle, with a tight-fitting bodice and narrow bands of the tulle across the shoulders. The full, floor-length skirt was ruffled and on one shoulder she wore a corsage of flowers just the color of her hair.

She received with her parents and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins, jr. Meyer Davis played and a buffet supper was served at midnight. Debs were present from Boston, Mass., to Birmingham, Ala., and from as far west as St. Louis. Miss Watkins' house guests for the occasion were Miss Anita Jones and Miss Eugenia Cheston, of Philadelphia.

FROM WASHINGTON came the Misses Elaine Darlington, Joan McKenna, Constance Anderson, Sheila Broderick, Peggy and Louise Burke, Beatrice Chew, Catherine Clement, Peggy Tuckerman and several others.

Miss Watkins is such an ardent horsewoman that she accompanied her father on an early cub hunt the morning of her party. Mr. Watkins is M. F. H. of Blue Ridge Hunt in Clarke County.

AMONG THE DEBS at the dance were the Misses Betty Lyon, of Purcellville, and Kitty Smith, of Baltimore, both of whom were presented at large dances in Virginia last week-end; Elizabeth Wilbur, of Warrenton, who gave a dinner for 60 guests beforehand; Sally Marshall, of Middleburg, who was honor guest at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, and Miss Betsy Roberts, of Philadelphia, who shared honors with Miss Watkins at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Graham Dougherty and Miss Mary Dougherty at Woodley, their home near Berryville.

MISS MURIEL MADDOX, who came out in Newport earlier in the summer, was at the dance. She spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wallach, jr., and attended Miss Wilbur's dinner.

Also present was Miss Irene Randolph, daughter of the Nathaniel Randolps, of St. Louis, who is spending some time at Millwood in Virginia with her thaniel Randolphs, of St. Louis, Birmingham, Ala.; the Misses Leslie Morgan, Dagmar Pierce and Cynthia Burrage, of Boston, and Isabel McCuffey, of North Grafton, Mass. The latter is a granddaughter of Harry Worcester Smith, whom she visited during the hunting season last year.

THE STAG LINE numbered from Washington John W. Brooks, jr., Randall Hagner, Frank Sterrett, Edgar Prochnik, Richard and Grant Wilmer, Marcy L. Sperry and Hewitt Wells.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer were there from the Capital, and other guests included Mr. and Mrs. William Standley Stokes, jr., of Philadelphia; the Misses Nancy and Barbara Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Beale and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Van Pelt.

5,500,000 Jobless Listed for Defense

Nation-Wide Census of Manpower by U. S. Board Hailed as First Step Toward Big-Scale Hiring by War Industries

Registration of 5,500,000 unemployed men in a Nation-wide inventory of idle manpower—the first completed step toward big-scale hiring by war industries—was announced last night by the National Defense Commission.

Commissioner Sidney Hillman, of its labor division, announced completion of the registration drive which has reached into every corner of the country to discover latent skills and labor reserves as the Nation's $14,000,000,000 rearmament effort emerges from its blueprint stage.

In another field of defense personnel activity, Bill Robb Wilson, president of the National Aeronautic Association, proposed creation of a civil air reserve of pilots to form a noncombatant auxiliary for air defense. These fliers, beyond the age of military fliers, would be valuable to provide information, transportation, observation patrol and disaster relief in the event of emergency, Wilson said in a statement.

At the same time Edward R. Stettinius, of the Defense Commission materials division, announced the following appointments to his staff:

D. C. Everest, president of Marathon Paper Mills Co., Rothschild, Wis., and former president of the American Paper and Pulp Association, as group executive of the pulp and paper section.

Charles W. Boyce, vice president of the Northwest Paper Co., Cloquet, Minn., as assistant group executive of the same section.

"Our first move is complete," Hillman said of the labor program. "It was accomplished through the 1,500 offices throughout the country affiliated with the United States Employment Service.

"The number of men available in any particular trade or skill has been compiled for each locality. This register will at all times be open to private employers. Large trade unions are making parallel inventories of their unemployed members."

Hillman's disclosure was made in connection with an intensive three-step labor supply program designed to assure the Nation of adequate manpower for the defense undertaking.

To Speed Training

The program calls also for speedy training of men by industry in its own plants, and for broadened vocational instruction in the country's thousands of schools and colleges.

Labor shortage "bottlenecks" in skilled crafts, and disproportionate growth of a few industrial firms by "cornering" the labor supply will be averted through exercise of the commission's plans, Hillman claimed.

In line with the awarding of defense contracts, estimates are being made of the number of men needed in each skilled classification, and when they will be needed. The Labor Division draws from these appraisals periodic estimates of the potential labor demand for each geographical area.

The commission's labor staff will also supervise industrial instruction, Hillman announced, by sending experts to demonstrate methods of employe training to managers of local plants.

Thousands Being Taught

Unskilled reserves, consisting of enrollees in vocational schools under supervision of the education office—embracing the NYA, CCC and WPA—are "being developed with great rapidity," Hillman added. More than 100,000 are enrolled in such schools, most of them taking "refresher" courses in specific trades.

While 63,000 are at part-time work in 3,636 NYA shops, 300,000 CCC youths are learning defense trades, and 25,000 WPA workers are enrolled in automobile, aviation, radio, electrical, metal work and drafting courses.

The United States Civil Service Commission is recruiting 100,000 skilled civilian workers for the navy yards, arsenals and other Government-operated defense establishments.

Technical schools and colleges, for their part, are preparing to train specially qualified engineers, draftsmen, airport engineers, meteorologists, naval architects and motor designers.

Navy Buys Yacht

Copyright, The New York Times.

New York, Sept. 8.—The 85-ton yacht Trouper, built last year by C. A. Tilt, motor manufacturer, of this city and Chicago, at a cost of $300,000, has been purchased by the Navy Department for half that amount and will be turned over to Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward in the navy yard, Brooklyn, tomorrow morning.

The slender craft attracted wide attention among cruiser enthusiasts when she was launched by Robert Jacob, Inc., at City Island, The Bronx, 15 months ago. She has the floor plan of a houseboat, with luxurious appointments, a sea-going hull and the power plant of a submarine chaser. Her top seed is about 22 miles an hour.

It was uncertain to what purpose the cruiser could be put, but patrol duty in the Caribbean is one possibility. A vessel of this type, when armed, could cope with submarines and small coastal traders, it was held.

U. S. Air Officers May Get Leave To Serve in R. A. F.

Copyright by New York Times

The fact that the American-Canadian joint defense board will hold its second meeting here today lent interest yesterday to a report by the Foreign Policy Association on the progress of the Canadian air training scheme which, if the war continues, "will become an important factor in the defense of the British Empire."

It also furnished the background for a report in foreign diplomatic circles that the United States might grant some of its air officers leave of absence to permit them to take a turn of service in the Royal Air Force in the same manner that German and Italian airmen aided Gen. Franco during the Spanish civil war.

A number of private American aviators with 200 hours of trainnig have already enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force. Some are acting as instructors. Under a relaxation of Canadian regulations they are not now being required to take an oath of allegiance to the King, thus retaining their American nationality.

To allow American air officers to serve with the R. A. F. in Britain would provide instructors with practical experience in modern air war. The British would have the valuable services of fliers having advanced military training while their own empire air training program was still coming to fruition.

It was admitted in diplomatic circles where the report originated that the Neutrality Act would probably bar such a step. But the report persisted. There was speculation whether the Canadian Air Force could be used as a backdoor into the R. A. F.

Alien School Visions Record Enrollment

Americanization Unit Helps Noncitizens On Registration

"I've been so busy taking care of my children, I haven't had time to go to school and learn what I needed for citizenship . . ."

That remark echoed among 150 aliens who went to the Americanization School, at Tenth and H streets northwest, in the past week for help in compiling information for their required registration.

Miss Maude E. Alton, administrative principal, yesterday told of a Greek mother who came in with her daughter. The daughter, who is a citizen and is entering a university this fall, was distressed because her mother hadn't taken the time to prepare for citizenship.

Aid to Newcomers

"But I had to do things for my children . . ." the mother said.

However, long before the present movement toward citizenship, the Americanization School faculty had been helping to show newcomers how to make time for classes, amid their family duties. A record enrollment is expected at the school this fall, partly as a natural growth of the adult education movement and partly because of the new appreciation of the value of American citizenship.

Meanwhile, teachers of the school are donating their services, spending hours at the building to clarify registration questions. Until the opening day of school, September 23, faculty members will be on duty for that purpose daily, in the mornings. With the aid of members of the Americanization School Association, the same service is offered on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings.

After talking over the questions and answers in the friendly atmosphere of the school, the aliens leave in a more reassured mood for the formal registration at the postoffice, Miss Alton reported.

Sometime ago, Miss Alton went before the summer classes at the Americanization School to explain why the registration would be taken and to allay doubts and fears.

Since aliens have until the latter part of December to register, Miss Alton is expecting a future heavier flow of inquiries at the school than during the past week.

COSMOS ROOM OPENS FRIDAY. Ben Young and his orchestra, prize discovery of Billy Rose, will grace the bandstand at the opening of the Carlton's new Cosmos Room next Friday. Headlined as "Young Ideas in Music," the Young band is noted for its 1940 sweet style music, favorite dance genre of this year's collegiates. Billy Rose discovered Ben and his orchestra while they were playing at the University of Texas, promptly placed them in his Fort Worth Centennial pageant, where they remained "for the duration." They come to Washington direct from a full season in Detroit's Grande Ballroom. Stars of the band include singer Virginia (Ginny) Braynard and the "Youngsters," a vocal trio . . . Decors of the new Cosmos Room are said to be astonishingly lovely, with the dawn and moon goddesses roaming among an assortment of comets and constellations.

Dee Tracy, the pretty one who used to dole out ciggies in the Mayflower Lounge, now a full-fledged professional singer, will open in the Robin Hood next Monday.

NEW "OLD NEW ORLEANS." The former Lido will reopen on September 25 as the Old New Orleans, under the aegis of Mrs. Jean Richards, former operator of the Stables up near Bull Run, a spot much favored by the Warrenton hunt set. The Old New Orleans will be several places in one. The Hunt Room, with cocktail and supper dancing, will occupy the former La Conga. The Continental Room will be on the first floor, Old New Orleans (with chef from New Orleans) on the second floor and private banquet rooms on the third floor. Sounds mah-velous, doesn't it?

ANSWERING TROIKA QUERIES. Yes, Vanya and Lola, those superb Russian dancers, will be right there at the Troika opening on Thursday in addition to Mrs. Helen Hamilton's big line-up of Mexican, Brazilian and gypsy stars . . . Baba, the dark-eyed ciggie lass, will be back, too, in a Brazilian costume from the World's Fair.

REVUES STARTING TODAY. Shoreham Terrace. Remaining are St. Clair and Day, also Harriet Smith's "Lovely Ladies" (who really are), but with new tricks in shining diversion. The Stanley Brothers, "funny bone ticklers" from Chicago, arrive today.

Lotus. With a change or two the "Coconut Grove Revue" starts into another week. Athletes Martin and Allen replace Goodrich and Nelson, who open today in New York's State Theater. Listen for the new streamlined music by Bill Strickland's band, replacing the Dixieland tempo. Joe Carnell, who's just joined the Stricklanders' is doing the new arrangements.

LINA D'ACOSTA,
famed Mexican singer of the new Troika revue, opening Thursday

Casino Royal. The new "Debutante Follies" opens today with the dancing Burnetts and clowning Bill Harris as the top specialty acts. Jack (Jive) Schaeffer continues to break up the show with uproarious songs.

Wardman's Metropolitan Room has been cram-jammed to the doors since its opening, with the new Grant Thompson music pronounced "smooth as silk," "simply gorgeous," and other flattering things . . . This reminds us that the Lounge Riviera is another place where it's hard to find a place to sit down, even on Monday nights.

NUMEROS MAGNIFICO. "Cecilia," as caroled by Russ Cullen in the Rainbow Room, with Drumsman Tony Gaudio tossing in some elegant hissing of "Siss-is-silia." But you won't be able to hear this one because Tony's going to the new Troika orchestra and Russ will soon be back in Pall Mall . . . The way "Curly" Fox treats "Margie" in the Neptune Room in conjunction with the frivolous-minded Three Star Trio . . . The sweety-pie touch that Al Oddone's orchestra gives to "Blueberry Hill" at the Gay Nineties.

BASHFUL YVONNE. Though Yvonne Logan stops the Maryland Gardens show with saucy ditties, she's really shy. When she and Virginia Newall started to do strolling music at M. G. the other night, Yvonne couldn't get up nerve enough to ask customers for request numbers.

WHERE THEY ARE. Xavier Cugat, famous exponent of Latin-American dance music, gave a thrill on Saturday night when he piled out of an Eastern Air Line transport for a few minutes before taking off for a Miami engagement . . . Cafe Caprice's Jack Kerr says that Marco Rosales, his C. C. partner of last season, is now at New York's La Conga, still very much the glamour boy . . . Between verses of her "Ice Skating Song," Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, told us that Penny Ford, so popular in Washington last year, is now singing at Baltimore's Summit Inn . . . Helen Forrest and Al Spiel, who graduated from the Madrillon to Benny Goodman's band, are now visiting in Washington.

Newest American citizen among our town's bandsmen is singer Tommy Lawrence, of the Nightingale. He's Canadian born, has just taken out his first papers as a citizen of these United States.

GIFT TO OSCAR. A big-hearted Hi Hat patron has given Oscar a lawn mower so the grass may be kept down around Oscar's new manse. Confidentially, we've found out that Oscar doesn't use the lawn mower. He gets his guests to cut the grass! . . . There'll be a new Manhattan musical unit in Hi Hat on September 16. New Jersey is calling the Cavaliers—with a contract closed last summer.

HOLLYWOOD ANGLES. Mayfair's "Mousey" Garner used to play pingpong with George Bancroft, wrestle with Phil Regan when he was in Hollywood. It went on until "Mousey" lost his reflexes—and too many bets.

MELODY THAT LURES. Harrington Tavern patrons are pleased as Punch about Jack Dalton, the singing cowboy, who is polishing off "Wagon Wheels," "Home on the Range," and other surefire Westerns with such gusto . . . And Dick's Grill reports a trebling in evening business since the installation of their new recorded music, with its choice of 500 favorite numbers.

Conferees Expected to Kill 60-Day Delay in Draft Bill ever, fixed September 25 as a possible date for ending the session and advocated sine die adjournment rather than the suggested recess.

Should the House conferees agree to abandon the conscription delay clause, little difficulty is anticipated in compromising other changes in the bill. While the Senate voted for registration of only men from 21 to 31 years of age, Senators last night indicated willingness to accept the House age limits, which would mean approximately doubling the number of expected registrants, from about 12,000,000 to about 24,000,000.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, said that while he had voted for the lower age limits he would not oppose acceptance of the House figures.

Connally declared that the House "ought" to recede from the Fish amendment. He said it would cause confusion and delay in the draft undertaking and would subject young men to the risk of being branded as "slackers" if they failed to volunteer and then were drafted.

Smith Plan Favored

There seemed little doubt that the Senate would accept the House version of the "industry draft" provision in place of the Russell-Overton amendment which it approved. Senators Russell, of Georgia, and Overton, of Louisiana, both Democrats, have announced they would accept the less drastic House amendment sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Connecticut.

The Russell-Overton plan would permit Government condemnation and permanent operation of an industrial plant in case of noncompliance with the defense program. The Smith amendment would require industry to accept defense orders and provide penalties and Government operation of the plants on a rental basis in case of failure to comply.

A compromise was reported agreed to yesterday at a conference of experts of the Treasury Department and the National Defense Advisory Commission on the controversial amortization provisions of the excess profits bill.

U. S. Approval Needed

While permitting manufacturers to amortize in five years the costs of expanding their plants to care for defense orders, the bill as written would prohibit disposing of the added facilities without approval of the Secretary of Navy or the Secretary of War.

Treasury experts contend the clause would improve the Government's position in dealing with industry, but defense commission members said it lessens the inducement for private capital's help.

Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, expressed hope his group would reach an agreement on the issue today.

60 Million Americans Find It Hard to Prove

Nearly Half Nation Might Find Nativity Hard to Establish

By Dillard Stokes.

While aliens by the thousand are rushing to obtain American citizenship, the native-born also are bestirring themselves to establish their political birthright.

They are, however, only a handful of the 60,000,000 to 65,000,000 who might experience some difficulty, and who risk greater difficulty the longer they delay checking up on their records.

Miss Mary Oursler, of the Census Bureau, said yesterday that 1,000 inquiries a day are being received from persons who wish to prove that they were born in the United States.

Birth certificates were rarely needed a few years ago; chiefly they were called for when persons wished to obtain passports to travel abroad. But times have changed, so that such certificates are essential today for scores of purposes.

Persons who wish to qualify for old-age pensions must have them. So must men who wish to join the military establishments. Applicants for many types of Government employment must prove their citizenship. So must those who seek the thousands of jobs opening up in the rearmament industries. Besides these industries, many private concerns lately have come to require birth certificates.

For about half the citizens of the country, proving citizenship is easy. All they have to do is to obtain an official copy of a birth certificate filed according to law. The trouble is that such registration was not compulsory in many States until recent years.

Before this registration system was set up, recording of birth was optional in some States, so that a person before the system was set up may, and in millions of cases may not, find the official record he needs.

Compulsory Registration

The years in which compulsory registration was set up by law in the States are:

Montana, 1907; Nebraska, 1927; Nevada, 1929; New Hampshire, 1891; New Jersey, 1920; New Mexico, 1929; New York, 1913; North Carolina, 1913; North Dakota, 1907; Ohio, 1908; Oklahoma, 1917; Oregon, 1915; Pennsylvania, 1905; Rhode Island, 1911; South Carolina, 1914; South Dakota, 1931; Tennessee, 1913; Texas, 1927; Utah, 1905; Vermont, 1906; Virginia, 1912; Washington, 1915; West Virginia, 1921; Wisconsin, 1907; Wyoming, 1907.

The next easiest course for a person unable to obtain an official birth certificate, is to obtain a certificate from the Census Bureau based on the decennial censuses since his birth. If he knows exactly where his parents were living when the census following his birth was taken, then he may be able to obtain a certificate which will be accepted as a proof of citizenship in most cases.

Secondary Evidence

Should a person be unable to get this certificate, or if it should prove inadequate, then he must assemble secondary evidence. The best and most often used secondary evidence is the physician's certificate of birth, taken from his records, or the transcript of the christening or baptism record of a church.

The church record will not be acceptable, however, if the person was baptised or christened a number of years after he was born.

Long ago, entries in the family Bible were accepted as sufficient evidence of birth and they still are accepted in some cases. But Bible entries are likely to be closely scrutinized, because authorities have found that nowadays Bible entries are seldom made at the time of the birth, but usually are inserted months, or years later, when somebody in the family decided to bring the Bible up to date. These later entries are considered doubtful evidence, as they could just as easily be made incorrectly, accidentally or on purpose.

Many persons find themselves unable to obtain these forms of secondary evidence. Physicians die, and lose their records. Churches are abandoned, or burn down, or otherwise lose their books. Beside this, a generation ago, relatively few persons were born in hospitals and many were not delivered by physicians.

Another Kind of Proof

Lacking these records, the native born citizen in search of proof, must fall back upon another kind of evidence, which is still more difficult to get. This is in the form of sworn statements from persons who have knowledge of the date and place of the birth. Most likely to be available are the affidavits of parents and near relatives. Failing these, friends and neighbors who know the facts can swear to the statements.

It is persons who must depend upon these statements who run the most risk by delaying to assemble proof of their birth. Those who delay too long may find that every person able to swear to the necessary facts is dead or cannot be located.

A number of the States have provided by law for the presentation of the various kinds of secondary evidence to the State Department in control of vital statistics, where a permanent record will be entered, if the birth is proved.

The citizen who does not find it necessary to assert his native birth may feel reasonably secure without any proof. Should any agency undertake to deny his citizenship, the burden of proof would be on the attacking agency. Even then, the citizen would be better off and would be spared much worry if he had the documents to refute such an attack.

But this security does not extend to the citizen who finds himself obliged to assert his citizenship. Then the burden of proof is upon him. And if he is in a hurry, the proof which he could have assembled cheaply at his leisure will be difficult and expensive to obtain.

The requirements of old-age legislation, alien registration and Government and private employment are making more and more numerous the occasions when a person must prove that he is a citizen.

The person who is unable to obtain sufficient evidence of any of the kinds that have been noted has a final resource, where all the evidence he has may be used at once for what it is worth. This is a court action for a declaratory judgment of his citizenship. To prevail in such a suit, he must have lawyers, witnesses and certifications from all the agencies which may be concerned.

Sometimes it looks like it would have saved a lot trouble all around not to have been born.

French Isles Debate Petain And De Gaulle

By the Associated Press

The question of whether the French islands in the West Indies will stand by the Petain government or join the "Continue the War" party is reported to be nearing a decision.

The decision may have an important bearing on hemisphere defense, which the United States is seeking to bolster by leasing a string of of naval and air bases of Great Britain in exchange for 50 over-age destroyers.

The principal islands are Martinique and Guadeloupe, where a clash between British and French warships apparently was averted in July.

British Islands Nearby

On either side are the British islands of Antigua and St. Lucia, which Britain has agreed to lease to the United States.

Should the people of these islands decide to join Gen. Charles de Gaulle's "Free France" party, their defense by the forces there, plus possible reinforcements, presumably could be counted upon.

A rigid censorship imposes over the news of French island activity but a few travelers who have visited Martinique in recent weeks have reported that the islands soon will decide their course.

Trade is stalemated; native products such as rum and sugar are stacked up on the docks with no takers; the economy of the islands is such that a showdown appears inevitable amid the stagnation created by the British blockade of the mother country.

Blockade Reported

Early in July, when the British fleet had suddenly attacked and defeated a large part of the French fleet in harbor on the North African coast, it was reported the British were blockading the islands.

The British were determined to provent the French aircraft carrier Bearn anchored there with 100 American-made planes aboard and other warships from reaching Germany. A store of $250,000,000 of French gold also was reported hidden there.

A clash in American waters was feared. But through the good offices of the United States State Department this was averted. Canadian aviators with the planes were sent home, and the French apparently agreed the planes would not reach Germany.

Plebiscite May Be Held

Some time later, a traveler returned from Martinique to Puerto Rico with the report that a plebiscite would be undertaken to decide between the De Gaulle and Petain forces.

The Canadian press reported from neighboring British Dominica that Guadeloupe was held for Petain's Vichy government only under the bayonets of sailors and marines from a French warship, and that 95 per cent of the population wanted to go along with De Gaulle. The island's governor, a De Gaulle sympathizer, was reported to have been relieved by the commander of the French Cruiser Jeanne D'Arc.

At a recent service in Guadeloupe cathedral, the Canadian press reported, the organist played "God Save the King" and the congregation cheered; whereupon an apology was demanded by the warship commander and Governor Pro Tempore.

Rumania Legation To Change Pictures

Portraits of King Mahai made when he was 6 years old may decorate the Rumanian Legation if war delays shipment of recent pictures of the new monarchy.

Members of the legation staff said yesterday that the photographs of King Carol II in the chancellery here would come down when official notification is received of Carol's abdication.

The 12-year-old pictures of the new king are all that they have on hand, the officials said.

Arrested Mutes 'Wouldn't Talk'

New York, Sept. 8 (INS).—A new problem for New York police was posed yesterday.

They had under arrest seven men who not only wouldn't talk, but couldn't. They are mutes, arrested and charged with robbing a clerk of $25.

The court adjourned a hearing in the case until a sign language expert "consults" the men. Meanwhile, all seven were held in $2,000 bail each.

Destroyer Deal Irks Nazi Agents in Brazil

Copyright by New York Times

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Sept. 8.—Belittling the offensive power of the 50 destroyers transferred by the United States to Great Britain and asserting that the British fleet is finished, German propagandists here are unable to hide their chagrin over what has happened.

At the moment they are trying to make capital of the utterances of certain American Senators, Congressmen and columnists to attack Britain and to abuse the United States. It is asserted, for example, that the entire United States has revolted against President Roosevelt who, disregarding international law, has transferred warships to a belligerent nation.

Hammering again at the old point that the United States is unable to defend Latin America, this Nazi propaganda here has unearthed the argument that the transfer of the Naval bases clashes with the Havana Conference agreement. At that time it was agreed that all the Latin-American countries should be consulted over any transfer of American possessions by non-American nations. "Latin America was ignored," says this propaganda.

The Nazis here apparently wish to create an atmosphere of confusion in Latin America and wish to foster distrust of the United States.

A survey undertaken by this writer among various classes of Brazilian society indicates that this effort is unsuccessful. Under present world conditions, Brazilians appear to believe, if America is fully armed, she will be respected. Thus the transfer of these bases for the use of aviation is a move to be applauded, if by that act America secures peace.

The move is realistic, the Brazilians declare, and indicates that the American nations are ready to place on it their seal of approval.

Much has been written about the air penetration of Latin America by non-American commercial planes, which might be readily converted into bombers in time of war. Whether or not this danger really exists is not known here, but there has been a tendency toward the systematic spread of non-American air lines overland. It is observed here that they seem to follow a well-studied plan, as if prearranged, and that most of them lead in the direction of the Panama Canal.

In Brazil it is now doubtful if the government will grant any further permission for these lines to fly over the Amazon forests. It is believed that the Army opposes this.

Observers here point out that United States air bases in British Guiana, Trinidad and the West Indies will fully protect not only the Panama Canal but also the greatest part of Central and South America. They should defeat the purposes of any air invasion by a non-American nation that might attempt to operate from clandestine air bases.

Official Brazil has placed the seal of approval on the bases deal. The foreign minister's declaration, even though couched in diplomatic verbiage, leaves no doubt as to its meaning concerning the "right of America to organize between the Atlantic and the Pacific."

The entire Brazilian independent press, mirroring the sentiments of the Brazilian democratic masses, applauds the trade of the destroyers for the bases to insure the safety of the Americas. The outspoken Diaro de Noticias affirms that the totalitarian nations have received the news with ill-concealed humor, but that both Rome and Berlin have acted wisely in declining to comment officially.

"Berlin left it to an unnamed spokesman and Rome to a news commentator," it says. "The fact that Chancellor Hitler avoided this issue in his recent speech is significant, because the arrogance of the totalitarian nations, always menacing the world, is public knowledge."

The fact is, the Diario concludes, that Herr Hitler preferred not to anger the United States. But in the meantime, German propaganda in South America is using the statements of American isolationists as its text book.

Nazis Stop 'Offensive' Film in Costa Rica

Copyright by New York Times

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 8.—The German goverment is exercising censorship over movies in Costa Rica and has prevented the showing here of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film "The Fatal Hour." The government prohibited exhibition of the picture at the instance of the German legation, which considers it offensive to Germans.

'Holiday' Fatal To Nazi Fliers

London, Sept. 8 (AP).—A veteran R. A. F. wing commander who is grounded for desk work took an aerial busman's holiday Friday and it cost the German air force two Junkers 87 dive-bombers.

The commander, who fought in the World War, sometimes likes to take to the air to look things over, but at 37, he is considered too old for fighting. Yesterday he climbed to 15,000 feet and was idling along when he spied eight German dive-bombers.

The commander dived and hit the formation as it flattened out after dropping its explosives. Two bombers crashed under his fire, one in flames.

Nazi Army Leader Thanks U. S. Bund

New York, Sept. 8. (INS).—Gen. Reinhardt, of the German army, in a broadcast from Germany, intercepted by Columbia Broadcasting Syster yesterday thanked the Kyffhauser Bund, an organization of German army veterans in the United States, for funds it has been sending to wounded Nazi soldiers.

Norwegians Defy Reich in Cabal Against Quisling

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 8.—In the face of a growing fear of formation of a government headed by the pro-Nazi Maj. Vidkun Quisling, the five Norwegian parties, controlling 149 of the 150 seats in the Storting (parliament), have forgotten their doctrinal differences and, braving German wrath, have united in an anti-Quisling front, it is reported here.

Members of the Conservative, Agrarian, Liberal, Labor and Christian People's parties met unhampered, but German authorities forbade any mention of their agreement in the press or any announcement by members. The deputies decided to cooperate in restoring democracy and freedom and to oppose by all means in their power formation of a government by Maj. Quisling.

That the Germans forsee the possibility of trouble is indicated by stringent censorship suddenly imposed in Norway Thursday.

Slovakia Speeds Anti-Semitic Laws

Copyright by New York Times

Bratislava, Slovakia, Sept. 8.—As a speed-up measure in the program of eliminating Jews from Slovak economic and social life, Parliament has given the government almost complete authority to issue "Aryanization" decrees at will.

The authority was contained in a law with the effect of a constitutional amendment for one year. It aims at the earliest possible transfer of the greatest possible amount of Jewish-owned properties to Christians.

'Lovers Lane' Holdups Charged to 2 Youths

Pair Questioned In Assault Case; Arraigned Today

Moving to break up a series of holdups which have recently terrorized couples parked on secluded roads, Washington police held two young colored men at Fourth Precinct Station yesterday and charged them with two of the robberies.

They were also questioned about two similar holdups in Alexandria's lover's lane last June, in one of which a young woman was criminally assaulted at the point of a gun by two colored men while her escort, helpless against the armed thugs, stood by.

Edward W. Green, 21, of 1418½ Alabama avenue southeast, and Robert H. Taylor, 20, of 1331 Eleventh street northwest, face arraignment in Police Court today for robberies last month on Hains Point.

Couple Robbed of $11

In one of them, Donald E. Bell, of Baltimore, and Julie Lawrenson, of 1936 Second street northeast, were robbed of $11 as they were parked beneath the highway bridge near Fourteenth street about 1 a. m.

The other occurred two nights later on Riverside drive near the rose garden, two blocks from the scene of the previous holdup. John Ebelston, of 1536 Seventeenth street northwest, and Helen Ulrey, of 1810 Connecticut avenue northwest, were robbed of $12.50.

Both of these couples, The Post learned last night, were taken before a line-up Friday at pplice headquarters and identified Taylor and Green as their assailants, according to police.

Viewed at Line-up

Alexandria police were called in the following night, it was learned, and a secret line-up at Fourth Precinct Station was viewed by the two couples held up in lover's lane.

One of the couples identified the prisoners "definitely," police said, but the woman who was assaulted and her escort identified them only "partially."

Green and Taylor were arrested last week by Detectives George Cooper, George Wilson and Frank Dodson, of Fourth Precinct, when they investigated a shooting at 915 New Jersey avenue southwest.

Youth Leader Asks U. S. to Create 400,000 Jobs

Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the American youth commission of the American Council on Education, last night challenged Congress, in a statement, to create 400,000 civilian jobs for youth.

Such a program is not only "vital for national security," he said, but would be just recompense for youth, whose classes, he said, apparently will be assuming the "burden of military service."

"This will not by any means meet all civilian needs," he said. "It is equally true, that the 400,000 to be enlisted or drafted will not meet all our military needs. But if it is feasible and practical to take as many as 400,000 young men immediately for military training, it would surely seem possible to expand civilian youth programs by a like amount."

Virginia to Expand Marker System

Richmond, Va., Sept. 8 (AP).—Virginia's system of placing markers along the highways to describe historic places in the State will be expanded to provide for a marker at the principal entrances to practically every town in the State.

3-Year-Old Stroller Object of Hunt

Three-year-old Barbara Howerton, blonde and blue-eyed, apparently prefers a Sunday morning stroll on the avenue to Sunday school.

At any rate, she slipped out of her beginners' class at the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest, while nobody was looking yesterday. This precipitated a three-hour search by family, friends and police when her mother, who lives at 1887 Ingleside terrace northwest, couldn't find her child on calling at the church after the class ended.

Policeman D. R. Eppard, of Thirteenth Precinct, finally sighted the little lady standing nonchalantly on the corner of Eighteenth and Swan streets northwest, eight blocks from the church.

Smoldering Ruins of Barracks Leveled at Fort Washington

Houseboat Skipper's Son Is Drowned

Six-year-old Roger Fabian was drowned in the Potomac River yesterday and the rivermen sorrowed, remembering how he stood so often in the stern of the houseboat Slyde to wave at everything that passed.

They watched the Rescue Squad try for 50 minutes to revive him, and recognized him as the waving boy, but didn't know his name. Everyone knew, though, that he had lived on the thin gray boat generally tied across stream from the Capital Yacht Club, at the foot of Eleventh street southwest.

Roger came to his death in what may have flashed through his mind as a lonely and forgotten way. The Harbor Police could not ascertain how he chanced to fall into the river. Vague police reports mentioned that someone from the river yelled to someone on shore who, in turn, called the police.

River craft were thick about where the Clyde lay anchored in the rain. But apparently no effort was made to have someone dive for the body. When the call came, the police arrived by boat in ten minutes. In another ten minutes they had raised the body to the surface on grappling hooks.

The policemen, W. E. Davis and H. S. Carrico, carried the body to the club. There the Rescue Squad, with Dr. S. Sestero, of Casualty Hospital, worked for 50 minutes futilely.

Roger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Fabian, were on the Clyde when the boy fell in the stream, but Mrs. Fabian, grief-stricken, was removed to another boat. The policemen went out and told her her son was dead.

The family, it was said by police, had lived on the boat all summer.

Fort Washington Damaged By Spectacular Night Fire

Barracks House Destroyed and Two Others Burned; Ten Companies Fight Flames That Shoot Hundreds of Feet Into Air

Flames that leaped hundreds of feet into the air, reddening the sky for miles around, raged through historic Fort Washington, Md., last night, destroying a two-story wooden barracks building and damaging two others. Ten fire companies from Washington and nearby Maryland towns, the District fireboat and ten CCC men stationed at Fort Hunt, Va., sped to the scene after a call for assistance from the Oxen Hill, Md., fire department.

Visible at great distances, the blaze stimulated more than 300 calls to the Alexandria fire department, 5 miles away, and an engine company was dispatched to the waterfront near Jones Point only to discover that the fire was across the river.

Hundreds of cars blocked the Mount Vernon boulevard as motorists halted to observe the spectacle. So many motorists crowded on Route 224, through Oxon Hill, to reach the fort, that several fire companies were delayed more than an hour.

Only three National Park Service guards, under Special Officer A. G. Skinner, were on duty at the huge, stone-walled outpost, which is located on a bluff above the Potomac, 14 miles south of Washington. The fort, containing about 80 buildings, was abandoned by the Army last year.

The nearest telephone was 2 miles away, and a Park Service guard was dispatched there by automobile when the fire was discovered. Telephones at the fort were disconnected August 31 when the last Army detachment, a caretaker's squad of 20, was withdrawn.

Meanwhile, the Oxen Hill Fire Department was notified by residents, miles away, who saw the great flames. An Oxen Hill volunteer fireman, C. F. Mastbrook, who reached the scene before the engines, helped the guards put out the blaze in one barracks with hand extinguishers.

Another Oxen Hill resident, William McNamara, arrived a few minutes later and, single-handed, wheeled an old fire cart from the fort firehouse to a second barracks 300 yards away, in time to save that building from destruction.

The building that was destroyed stood between the other two. It had been used to quarter the caretaker's squad until August 31. All three had been constructed during the World War.

Fire engines drained the fort's huge water tank through 80-year-old hydrants, and firemen were about to tap the river water when a sudden rainstorm completed their work.

The military history of the site, at the junction of the Potomac with the Piscataway Creek, runs back to 1645, when the Maryland Assembly established a garrison there.

Defense works were started in 1809, 16 years after President Washington picked the site for a fort to guard the sea approach to the Nation's Capital. Six years later, in August, 1814, a British fleet sailed up the Potomac toward Washington, and the fort's commander ordered the guns spiked and the fort blown up without firing a shot.

During the Civil War the fort was one of a chain of defenses for the District. Garrisoned and strengthened for the Spanish-American War, it was enlarged for training in the World War and its guns dismantled and shipped to France.

Baptist Youth Pray That U. S. Keep War Sufferers in Mind

By Robert Tate Allan

A prayer that America may not "spiritually isolate" itself from war sufferings of brothers overseas was heard yesterday by delegates to the annual conference and retreat of the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions. They met at Western Maryland College, Westminster.

On the day proclaimed by President Roosevelt as one of prayer for world peace, Howard Rees, secretary of the District Baptist Student Union, prayed in Baker Chapel that humanity should seek a spiritual solution of its problems.

His prayers were said at the early morning session of the conference. The delegates then scattered to rooms above the college dining hall for forum periods on B. Y. P. U. problems. Rees led a discussion on outside activities, at which participants described programs being conducted at Central Union Mission and other places.

Typewriter keys jangled in a nearby room, as members of a publicity discussion group, under the direction of William "Bill" Brown, of Metropolitan Baptist Church, wrote, edited and mimeographed a conference paper, "Retreat Forward." They distributed it at the dinner hour. Marguarette Marlowe, of Calvary Baptist Church, editor of Sparks, the federation publication; Morgan Harvey, of Grace Baptist Church, and Mrs. Brown aided them.

Thomas Wilson, of First Baptist Church, president of the Baptist Men's group of Washington, conducted the annual Court of Review at a late morning program in the chapel. He emphasized how the Court—comprising past and present Federation officials — encourages local unions' efficiency.

Wilson, past president of the federation, in an interview after dinner, described the founding work of the organization, which on September 17 will cut its twenty-first birthday cake at a party at Fifth Baptist Church.

It was in 1919, three years before Wilson came to Washington, that the federation was launched, largely through the efforts of John Ruthven, of First Baptist Church, second president of the federation, who years ago led a similar organization in Chicago.

The organization meeting, at which W. Dameron, of Fifth Baptist Church, was named first president, took place on September 19, 1919, at West Washington Baptist Church, Georgetown, with representatives from Fifth, First, Second, Clarendon and the host church attending. The present membership is more than 1,000.

Appointment of four regional directors of the federation was announced by John G. Mein of Calvary Church, vice president of the federation, at concluding sessions in the chapel. The directors, who will be available for consultation to B. Y. P. U. units, with churches of their area, are:

George Ruhl, Bethany (his own church), Calvary, Petworth, Takoma and Mount Rainier churches; Clyde Hospital, West Washington (own church), Wisconsin avenue; National Memorial; First, Temple (D. C.), and Temple (Alexandria) churches; Maurice Crawford, Metropolitan (own church); Grace, Congress Heights, Second, East Washington and Fountain Memorial churches; Edward Atkins, Kendall (own church); Fifth, Silver Spring, Leavell, Hyattsville and Wilson avenue (Colmar Manor) churches.

Miss Nellie Fike, federation president, presided over the chapel sessions.

Hit-and-Run Victim Near Death

Suspect Held; Four Others Hurt During Day In D. C. Traffic

A hit-run victim was near death at Casualty Hospital last night, while police held a colored youth they said confessed driving the car after he had reported it stolen. Four other persons were injured in District traffic.

The hit-run victim, struck late Saturday at Florida avenue and Eckington place northeast, was identified as William B. Betters, colored, 25, of 5509 Jay street northeast. He suffered a skull fracture, lacerations and a compound fracture of the leg.

Shortly afterward, the colored suspect reported to police that his automobile had been stolen. Early yesterday police found the car abandoned in the 100 block of Pierce street northeast, and later arrested the driver. He is being held on an open charge pending the outcome of Betters' condition, police said.

Woman Injured

Mrs. Hazel Payne, 35, of 1014 Florida avenue northeast, was injured early yesterday at Nineteenth and East Capitol streets northeast. At Gallinger Hospital, where she was treated for head injuries, her condition was listed as undetermined.

Hurt in an auto accident near Landover, Md., Clarence C. Marshall, 33, of 242 Eighth street southeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for injuries to the head and left knee.

Two motorcyclists were hurt yesterday in a collision with an automobile at Pine and Washington streets, Herndon, Va.

Autoists Unhurt

They were Ralph Thompson, 29, of Herndon, shoulder injury and multiple lacerations, and Frank J. Horsman, 21, of Vienna, Va., bruises. They were taken to George Washington Hospital by Walter A. Farr, chief of the Herndon Volunteer Resque Squad.

Police said the automobile was driven by Leonard L. Burger, of Herndon, who was taking his two children to Sunday school. None of them was hurt.

The condition of Eugene Elben, 31, of Drury, Md., yesterday was pronounced "fair" at Casualty Hospital, where he was taken with cuts on face and scalp after an accident Saturday night near Upper Marlboro.

Police at Waldorf said he was thrown against the windshield of the car which his brother, Leonard Elben, was driving, when it collided with a car driven by Frank Williams, of Capitol Heights, Md.

Rev. Snyder to Speak At Goodwill Chapel

The Rev. Gerrit Snyder, pastor, Irwin Memorial Presbyterian Church, Arlington, will speak at the Goodwill Industries Chapel services at 8:15 a. m. Wednesday in the auditorium at 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest. On Thursday at the same hour and place, the speaker will be the Rev. R. J. Plumb, of St. Mark's Episcopal Church.

Md. Police Group Meets Today

Chinese Find Much Cleverness In Drama Presented Here

CONFLICT—Moon Qwan, representing the old-fashioned school teacher, and Tso Yu Mon, the modern miss, are shown in a scene from the play presented last night in the Pythian Temple. New China triumphed over the old one in the play

Two Oriental Stars Wow Countrymen In Pythian Temple Play About New and Old Orders in Invasion

The "new" China triumphed over the indifference of the older generation in a drama presented by two of China's noted players before nearly 500 laughing, clapping fellow countrymen at the Pythian Temple last night.

Moon Qwan, Chinese motion picture actor and technical supervisor of numerous Hollywood productions, played the role of a country teacher who was moved from his books with difficulty to a realization of the Japanese invasion by Tso Yu Mon, playing the role of a modern student.

A typical Chinese drama, it had few properties, and the stage manager and members of the orchestra strolled across the stage when they weren't laughing at the puns of Moon Qwan. When Moon Qwan thought of a better line than was in the play, he used it. When Tso Yu Mon got tired of talking, she sang to the accompaniment of wailing strings and Oriental drums.

"Haven't you heard of the war?" demanded Tso Yu Mon.

"No," replied Moon Qwan, "the war of words is greater."

The players were forced to pause as their grave-faced audience burst into roars of laughter, and Westerners present sought vainly for the humor in the words.

Again the audience slapped one another on the back at the pun on the District of Columbia.

"Those who have money should give it. Those who can fight should fight," was the general English meaning of Tso Yu Mon's words.

"Oh, so you want my money!" cried Moon Qwan, pulling his face into a grimace that nearly threw one sad-eyed Chinese gentleman to the floor in a gust of laughter.

Tso Yu Mon chanted, and the pipes and strings took up the monotonous wail. At last, as in many a Western play, the woman convinced the man that she was right.

"Naturally," said a member of the audience in faultless English, "if she hadn't convinced him, it wouldn't have been a play."

Material and Spiritual Aid To Britain Urged by Pastor

'Battle of Britain Is Battle of America,' Dr. Harris Declares Upon Return To Foundry Methodist Pulpit

Material and spiritual aid to Britain was advocated yesterday by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, joining with other churchmen in the National Day of Prayer observance.

Addressing his Foundry Methodist congregation upon his return from a vacation, the clergyman warned that "The Battle of Britain is the battle of America," and lauded the former's heroism against "this hellish paganism of Naziism."

"I rejoice that, for democracy's sake, for humanity's sake, and for America's sake," he declared, "that we are speeding all possible and immediate help for England."

"Pacifistic preachers, though sincere, who advocate a neutral hands-off policy, blind as to any moral discriminations, do not represent the conscience and convictions of millions of American church members," Dr. Harris said later in his sermon.

May Save Soil, Lose Soul

"If America fails democracy in this crisis, fails to see clearly who is her neighbor, she may selfishly save her own soil, but will surely lose her own soul," was his contention.

Dr. Freeley Rohrer, stated clerk of the Washington City Presbytery, guest speaker yesterday morning at Eastern Presbyterian Church, said:

"If the nations believe and pray, if they seek peace through goodwill, justice, righteousness, love and mercy, and not by force and hatred, God will hear and answer.

"It may be too late for some things in crisis and emergency, but it is not too late to pray. If people of all faiths pray for peace, as the President requests, it will avail."

"Sixth Column" for Peace

"The people who believe in God, work righteousness, watch and pray, make up the sixth column that will bring peace to a troubled world."

"A nation is addled in its policy," asserted Dr. Harry W. Burgan at Hamline Methodist Church, "when it sells on the one hand destroyers to a nation fighting for the democratic principle against a totalitarian nation, and on the other hand has permitted the sale of scrap iron to a totalitarian nation in its war against a democratic-minded people."

Returning to his Calvary Baptist pulpit from a vacation, Dr. William S. Abernethy, president of the Washington Ministerial Association, strongly condemned the Government's attitude toward Japan, saying:

"For years the United States has been shipping scrap iron to Japan. Can we pray for peace while that is going on, while we are receiving blood money? Peace will come only when we are ready to pay for it."

Man Died Natural Death, Says Coroner

A certificate of natural death was issued last night by Acting Coroner Richard Rosenberg in the case of a man found unconscious in his parked car early yesterday at First and R streets northwest.

The man was identified by police as Maurice Lovett, 42, of Harrisonburg, Va. He was removed to Gallinger Hospital, where he died shortly afterward. Police notified a brother, William Lovett, of 2806 Norfolk avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Bill to Alter D.C. Setup Before House

Kennedy's Plan To Reorganize Government Due For Action Today

Buried since May 8 under a mass of defense legislation, the Kennedy bill to modernize Washington's governmental structure is expected to see light in the House today as Representatives turn their attention to District matters.

With the conscription bill out of the way, the semimonthly District Day, ignored previously because of more pressing national business, will bring the House to consideration of the reorganization bill and other local legislation.

Enactment before adjournment was predicted by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, for his measure to substitute 11 coordinated administrative departments for the present array of municipal agencies and bureaus.

The bill also eliminates the Budget Bureau's veto power of District finances, provides for appointment of an advisory administrative assistant to the Commissioners and substantially broadens the Commissioners' powers.

Kennedy estimates enactment of the bill would save Washington taxpayers $2,500,000 annually immediately and $5,000,000 a year ultimately.

This, according to Kennedy, would permit a 20-cent reduction in the real and personal property tax rate.

Another bill to provide for election of an assembly to govern the District, also sponsored by Kennedy, will be dropped, he said, because it is not likely to pass this session.

Capital News In Brief

Squirrel Holds Kitten Prisoner in Tree

Don't talk about squirrels to Blackie, Mrs. Charles C. Johnson's pet kitten. Especially mother squirrels, with a brood of young.

Blackie spent an uncomfortable 24 hours in the top of an old locust tree on Mrs. Johnson's lawn, at 510 River road northwest, as the prisoner of a mother squirrel zealously guarding her young ones in a nest just below the kitten's perch.

When the kitten attempted to descend, the squirrel drove her back, frequently taking a nip at her tail. Blackie was finally discovered and rescued yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and their 14-year-old son, Chris, who frightened the squirrel to a nearby tree with sticks and stones.

Purse-Snatcher Left Holding the Bag

A 17-year-old purse-snatcher was arrested yesterday after he had been lef' literally holding the bag by an accomplice in an automobile who drove on when passersby were attracted to the scene.

The arrest was made shortly after a purse was snatched from Florence Byer, 50, of 4112 Hayes street northeast, who was walking in the 500 block of Minnesota avenue northeast. Miss Byer screamed. Passersby rushed to her aid and called police, who arrived in time to catch the purse-snatcher after a two-block chase.

The youth's companion, who was waiting at the wheel of an auto nearby, is being sought by police.

Four Sunday Suicide Attempts Reported

It was a gloomy Sunday yesterday in Washington, and four persons attempted suicide.

A 23-year-old man, a 38-year-old woman, a 20-year-old girl and a 22-year-old colored woman took poison during the day. All were in serious condition at hospitals with the exception of the white girl, who was reached before the poison took effect.

King of the Hoboes Favors Drafting Tramps and Bums

Jeff Davis, king emperor of the world's hoboes, came in out of the rain yesterday with a couple of hours of talk about what's wrong with the country.

Jeff came to Washington by freight, while his wife, Mrs. Clara Davis, traveled by passenger train. They're here to try to talk with the Senate Committee on Military Affairs about conscription. The word conscription lets loose a flood of talk from Jeff.

"To begin with, there's a difference between hoboes and tramps and bums," said Jeff. "A hobo will work, a tramp won't and a bum couldn't. That's where the Government ought to take a hand. In this conscription business for instance.

"You ask me, Jeff, why don't they conscript the tramps and bums first? And I answer, why not? If opportunity knocked at those guys' doors, they'd sue it for damages. They're the ones that ought to be made to wash the Navy's clothes and clean the Army's guns."

Tramps and bums have made it hard for the regular hobo who aims to work for his living—although not in the same place for very long—Jeff said. Word has gone out from headquarters of the national hoboes' organization headquarters in Cincinnati to the 'bos having a tough time finding work to join the armed services of the country, he said.

"Bo's are necessary to the country," Jeff continued. "They do a lot of work that other people won't do. And there's more odd jobs than steady jobs in America."

He rubbed his bald domed head. "The bo's know there's work, and they know another thing. The boys on the road know there's a lot of people in this country think liberty is license. A lot of 'em ain't as patriotic as some of the aliens. You ask me, Jeff, why not register them too? And I says, why not?"

Jeff works for a living. The diamond crown and scepter clasp he wears on his tie entitles him to live on the glory of being king if he wanted to. But he'd rather sell razor blades and ride the freights or the blinds.

"But I get to know my men that way," said Jeff. "I get to know them and the whole country and what the people in it are thinking."

'Those in the Know' Vote Top Stars and Directors

Results Reflect Last 'Ten Best' Ballotting; Loew's Capitol to Open New Bills Thursdays; This, That and the Other About the Theater

BELL

Not content with harassing the drama desks with the annual task of determining the "ten best pictures of the year," which comes along sometime during the winter, Mr. Alicoate and his cohorts conceived the idea of polling the critics and motion picture exhibitors in the matter of the best individual acting performances and the best direction contributed to the cinema in the year, 1939-40. The results of the balloting now are at hand and coincide in rather more than casual degree with last season's appraisals of the "ten best pictures."

The best male performance is preponderantly voted to Robert Donat for his "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," with Spencer Tracy, the runner-up, for a considerable catalogue of superior performances before the cameras. The foremost feminine performance is attributed to Bette Davis, principally for her "Dark Victory," with Vivien Leigh's Scarlett O'Hara in second place. The juvenile actors are led by a mile by Mickey Rooney, with the Andy Hardy performance forming the backbone of his preeminence, with Bobs Watson approximately 1,000 votes behind for second rating. The juvenile actress catapulted into first place is Virginia Weidler, with Judy Garland a close second—almost too close for comfort to Miss Weidler. The foremost supporting actor was voted to be Thmas Mitchell—largely on the basis of his work in Walter Wanger's "Stagecoach"—and on the distaff side, Mattie McDaniel, the "Mammy" of "Gone With The Wind." These both reflect the judgment of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in their last voting. Brian Aherne and Judith Anderson were the respective occupants of the second notches in almost photographic finishes.

All this is pretty shrewd voting on the part of those supposed to have their fingers pressed most closely to the public pulse.

Among the 59 directors primarily involved in last year's productions, the 20 that came out on top—by such close margins that they practically are placed on a parity in critical and exhibitor esteem—are, in the order of their preferment, Frank Capra, John Ford, Alfred Hitchcock, Ernst Lubitsch, Sam Wood, William Dieterle, King Vidor, George Cukor, Victor Fleming, Michael Curtiz, Edmund Goulding, John Cromwell, Cecil B. DeMille, Norman Taurog, Henry King, Woody S. Van Dyke, 2nd; recent Washington visitor; Gregory LaCava, Lewis Milestone, Frank Borzage and Clarence Brown. Any objections? Or don't you pay much attention to the main titles that tell who directs what and whom?

Our old friend, Sammy Kaye, exponent extraordinary of "swing 'n' sway," sends along a wisp of a baton—about half the size and weight of others I have received from comparable sources—with the expressed hope that this desk will find it possible to lead one of his band's numbers on the stage of the Earle Theater this week. Why ruin everything for us both? Personally, we have a tough enough time trying to whistle "Yankee Doodle." Even at that, we did once lead a band, although there were some gracious enough to say that the success of the venture was that the band led us!

ᔓᔕ

Mr. Gerald G. Gross, of the staff of this journal, who, from time to time, through the years, has assumed the responsibility of this space in our absence, writes from Los Angeles, under date of September 3, that we were right. Jerry is on his first trip to the West Coast and what we had told him was that he didn't know anything about these United States until he had crossed the Mississippi. "You were right," says he, "everything west of the Mississippi is positively wonderful." But more important is that Jerry and Mrs. Gross are "having a wonderful time," seeing the Hollywood "lots." They have done M.-G.-M., where they ran into "Red" Skelton, elated over the importance of his role in "Flight Command," starring Robert Taylor, and also collided with Barrett Kiesling, a friend of this department of long standing. On the Warner lot they encountered, among others, Joan Brooke, 16-year-old, for whom Jerry prophesies great things; Humphrey Bogart, Errol Flynn, John Garfield, Jack LaRue, Brenda Marshall, Bonita Granville, Van Heflin and numerous others. One suspects that Washington has been sold to the West Coast by the Gross—and vice versa.

ᔓᔕ

Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning this Thursday and continuing for several weeks, will break out its new bills on Thursday, instead of Friday. The current bill—"Capt. Caution," on the screen, and the "Variety Hall—1910" revue, on the stage—will end its engagement on F street this Wednesday night. The change in booking plans is occasioned by the personal appearance tour of Mickey Rooney, already heralded here, long since, with some wonderment as to September 19 as his opening date. The Palace and Columbia will adhere to the usual Friday inaugurals. So now you know.

Destroyer-Bases Deal Holds First Place In News Coverage

There is one subject having to do with the present "unpleasant" situation that is foremost in the minds of every American. The transfer of 50 American destroyers to Great Britain in return for which the United States obtains certain naval bases from Newfoundland to Guiana. The Trans-Lux screen for the current week discloses an excellent pictoral story of the bases and the destroyers. Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States discusses the transfer, while, in England, we find King George reviewing the new French army as it joins the British.

Royal Air Force pilots are shown taking off for routine raids on Germany while in London a scrapheap is created from the wreckage of German planes. The metal is being melted to be used in the building of more British planes.

Schoolgirls will thrill at the display of military fashions for fall as the "Miss America" contest parade of floats moves down Atlantic City's famous boardwalk. In the world of sports Byron Nelson is shown winning the P. G. A. championship, some great shots for golf fans. Lew Lehr presents turkeys and pretties at Harrisonburg, Va., and the annual auto race to the top of Pikes Peak abounds with thrills. There is also a World Series analysis.

"Information Please" takes first place in the short section with Clarence Budington Kelland returning as guest expert.

"Historic Virginia," the travelog of the week, takes us on a camera tour of this historic State, including Mount Vernon, Monticello and the newly reconstructed Williamsburg. We learn that Thomas Jefferson was an inventor as well as a statesman, his home being filled with trick gadgets.

Isaac Walton followers will be interested in "Fishing in Hawaii." The color cartoon for the week, "The Bookworm Turns," has to do with the raven acquiring and losing a brain.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 8.

WHEN MARY MARTIN visited New York some months ago she dined in the upstairs room at the 21 Club with Sam and Bella Spewack, the playwrights who selected her for the ingenue role in their musical comedy, "Leave It to Me," her springboard to stardom . . . After dinner the Spewacks were anxious to hear Mary sing her newest tunes. They noticed a piano, and Oscar Levant sitting nearby. Sam asked Oscar to play in accompaniment to Miss Martin . . . "I certainly won't accompany her," Levant declared. "I'm not in the mood" . . . Shortly thereafter Paramount signed Mary Martin to appear in the Bing Crosby picture, "Rhythm on the Range." Her first assignment in that picture was to sing to the accompaniment of a pianist signed by the studio to portray a feature role. Mary greeted him —Oscar Levant, who, with a fat film contract in his pocket, acknowledged: "Now I'm in the mood."

MARY

LEVANT HAS BEEN the victim of unfortunate practice by columnists of crediting his name to old jokes, without his knowledge or consent. . . Oscar finally decided to put a stop to this, and after reading a 50-year-old anecdote credited to him, phoned the columnist who had been most flagrant in this abuse . . . "I hope," said the columnist, "this hasn't been keeping you awake nights" . . . I'm completely indifferent to publicity," Levant assured him. "With me, it's a sleeping pill one way or the other."

ᔓᔕ

CLARENCE BROWN, the veteran director, is working on a new M-G-M film concerning a refugee stranded in this country. Brown summoned his staff of aides, and outlined the story . . . "It's a simple, tragic tale," he began. "Now get the picture—this poor little Hungarian girl becomes a refugee. She arrives in this country, broke. Her father is dying and here she is in New York, without a job, without a dime—living in a lousy $200-a-month apartment."

ᔓᔕ

DIEGO RIVERA, the muralist who fled from Mexico in fear of the assassination which eventually came to Trotsky, has become completely reconciled to the fate of our civilization . . . "It's just the old law of Nature returning," Rivera tells friends. "The snake eats the bird which devoured the worm. Franco took Spain, which soon will be swallowed by Germany. Poland took part of Czecho-Slovakia, and then was devoured by the Nazis. The snake eats the bird which swallowed the worm . . . It's the law of Nature returning . . ."

ᔓᔕ

BILLY ROSE, who has become an important art collector, was invited to inspect, for purchase, some rare paintings stored in a warehouse for many years. The impoverished owner of these paintings owed $1,500 for storage, and the warehouse proprietors permitted him to bring prospective buyers there, but not to remove any of the masterpieces without first paying the $1,500 . . . Rose was aware of these factors which indicated probable bargains. He inspected two well-known portraits whose prices had been reduced to $12,000 and $7,000, respectively. Billy fixed upon them the stare of a true connoisseur. "They're both fakes," was his measured decree—but I'll give you $1,000 for each."

ᔓᔕ

NOEL COWARD saw Valentine Schley, the designer, who asked him to remain in San Francisco for a few days . . . "I can't," said Coward. "I'm going to Lake Tahoe and then to Reno" . . . "To Reno?" gasped Valentine. "But nobody goes to Reno, except for a divorce—and you've never been married" . . . "That's quite all right," Noel replied. "While I'm in Reno I'll sue myself for divorce—on the grounds of incompatibility—and give myself tremendous alimony."

ᔓᔕ

DICK POWELL has resumed his broadcast series. His wife, Joan Blondell, has been signed to broadcast for a rival product. . . . Lois Andrews, whose standards now are completely Hollywood, saw Lana Turner wearing a white-fox coat at Ciro's. "In a white fox," Lois sneered, "she looks just like any other girl." . . . B. P. Schulberg, the producer, complained to his son about a nightmare he had. "I knew I was dreaming," said Schulberg, "because I didn't like a single character in the dream." . . . Jim Tully assured a group of Young Frisco writers of his immortality in American letters. Tully said: "Just give me a century, and then you'll see. . . ."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 8 (INS).—Very quietly over the dinner table Jack Warner arranged to borrow Gary Cooper from Samuel Goldwyn for the title role in "Sergt. York." Warners have been eager to get Gary for this biography because he is so very like the tall, lanky York of 20 years ago, before age and comfortable diet gave the sergeant added poundage. Jack, however, wanted to be sure that Sergt. York himself, who is now here, was pleased with the idea of Gary.

PARSONS

Gary and York met and in five minutes the World-War hero was convinced that Cooper was the only one to play the young York. You can imagine there was a lot of dickering back and forth before Sam parted with his favorite star.

ᔓᔕ

The returns from "The Sea Hawk" are gratifying enough to Warners to start renewed interest in "The Sea Wolf," the movie in which the late Milton Sills and Hobart Bosworth starred in the silent days. Also the $400,000 worth of stages built for "The Sea Hawk" can be used again. At a hurried conference last week it was decided to star Edward Robinson in "The Sea Wolf" and give Anatole Litvak the directorial assignment.

ᔓᔕ

Chatter in Hollywood: Couldn't have been more surprised than to see Gloria Dickson and Perc Westmore sitting tete-a-tete at dinner. It looks to me as if there might be a reconciliation. Perc has lost 50 pounds since he and Gloria parted and looks as young as his brother Buddy. Gloria, too, has taken off weight and is much more attractive. Whether or not the two of them will get together remains to be seen, but they have had several visits and telephone calls and they have seven months to make up their minds before the divorce decree becomes final.

ᔓᔕ

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Hugh Herbert's niece, Flora Pam, of the Howard Lang office, and Jennings Lang, ditto, were married in Tia Juana Friday; Rita Hayworth and George Raft will do a rhumba together in "Charlot's Revue." Remember that George started as a dancer with Natacha Rambova, the late Rudy Valentino's second wife; Lana Turner and Victor Mature bought friendship bracelets at a Vine Street jewelry shop with very sentimental inscriptions; the sneak preview of "Philadelphia Story" at Pomona went over swell, according to our boy friends at Pomona College who send in reviews.

Ruth Hussey the latest movie star to take up flying; Margaret Roach and Garwood Van a two-some at the popular bar of music; Signe Hasso and Gustave Wally are renewing an old romance they had in Sweden. They dine together almost every night—mostly at the little bit of Sweden; Joan Brooks has been adopted by Jerry Wald and Dick Macaulay as their protegee for the Wampas baby star contest. They have written a special scene for her; Lester Mathews with Margaret McCrystal expecting the stork; Olympe Bradna and Andrew McLaglen (he is 6 feet and she is barely 5 feet) doing the fun house at Venice.

Vincent Price passed out so many cigars (and smoked so many himself) after the birth of his baby he had to go home and go to bed; Mrs. Warren Williams has sprained her ankle and doesn't know how or where she did it; Mrs. Mike Levee on her way back from Honolulu. She and Mike will then go to the Columbia River for salmon fishing; Greg Bautzer was at the plane to kiss Dottie Lamour goodbye when she went to New Orleans.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gayety

One of the professions' most most charming personalities, Amy Fong, is the featured attraction at the Gayety this week. As usual, she has in support a cast of fine entertainers, with particular emphasis on comedy.

Miss Fong, China's gift to burlesque, is a charming lass. Wearing a wardrobe native to the land of tea, Amy is seen to advantage in several colorful beauty parades.

With Jack Diamond and Billy Foster is the starring roles, comedy proves to be one of the predominating features of the bill. The boys offer many original and side-splitting numbers, while Ethel DeVeaux and Danny Jacobs prove invaluable assets in the numerous numbers in which they appear.

One of the finest things in the entire show turns out to be the dancing of Otto Eason. This sepian youth possesses a pair of educated pedals which perform some unique steps in a roller skate routine.

Appearing in support of Miss Fong are such beauties as Leonie Thurston, Cele Devine. Romayne and Shirley Paige. Romayne's agile limbs add much distinction to the ballet numbers, while Miss Paige's soft-shoe dance routines are better than average.

Completing a well-balanced bill is Ward Mason, offering harmonica selections, and a comely chorus that appears well-trained in their diversified routines.

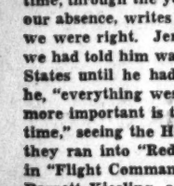
The settings and lighting effects of "Top Hat Reveue" hint of musical comedy magic, while the wardrobe and music of the entire company prove to be effective to the last word.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 8.

I traveled 3,000 miles to play a part in the Paramount picture, "I Wanted Wings," then never saw a camera. Scenes will be shot, I hope, at the studio. I'd hate to make another trip down there during the heat wave. It's a grand State—Texas. When I landed at Fort Worth airport, I thought I was right back in Hollywood, but a second look proved that what I saw in the airport wasn't our "oomphy Elsie," which I'd seen the day before I left, but a Texas long-horned steer, stuffed, and a present from Amon Carter.



HOPPER

ᔓᔕ

Rivalry between Fort Worth and Dallas is as amusing as a couple of motion-picture stars fighting over top billing. Each calls the other city a suburb.

ᔓᔕ

This trip reminded me of another I took years ago in the Yosemite, with Connie Bennett, who was at that time honeymooning with the Marquis de la Falaise. She seemed to resent delaying her honeymoon while we took scenes. So Bob Montgomery and the rest of us waited till Connie was in the mood. Now, years later, Connie's starting her motion picture career all over again.

When Paulette Goddard finishes "Second Chorus," she's going vacationing, because Charlie Chaplin insists she needs a rest. She'll probably visit Bermuda and hobnob with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, because she's had an invitation from the Vincent Astors down there.

ᔓᔕ

She had a plane all warmed up over the week-end to take her to the John Steinbecks, but Charlie decided to show his picture, "The Dictator," to the Lewis Milestones, Burgess Meredith, Anatole Litvak, and her plan was changed. The celebration after the picture went on into the night. They were all so emotional it took them hours to get back to normal and I missed it by one day—I was still in Texas.

ᔓᔕ

While George Murphy was looking out a front window of his house, you can imagine his surprise when a rubber-neck wagon stopped in front and he heard the driver tell the crowd that this was where Barbara Hutton lived. George looked under every bed—hasn't found her yet.

ᔓᔕ

And when Director Bill Seiter's six-year-old son was misbehaving, Bill said, "If you're not a good little boy, you'll never go to Heaven." The child looked up at him and said, "Well, in the last week I've been to the fights, the movies, and the circus, and I just guess I can't go every place."

For some time Eddie Arnold had been a contributor to the St. Brendan Boys' Choir, who sing in pictures. The other day the choir serenaded Eddie on "Christmas Eve" for "Meet John Doe." He was suppossd to hand each boy a dollar, but when they finished the scene, each boy had a fiver in his hand.

ᔓᔕ

Understand George Raft has hired two attorneys to investigate alleged Warner threat they would keep him off the screen unless he saw things their way. George is keeping out of everybody's way —'cause he won't talk. Nor is he talking about the beautiful silver he bought in New York. Hear Norma Shearer is using it, however.

ᔓᔕ

And here's a silly, but it's true. When Hedy and Gene Markey were married, Joan Bennett gave them some beautiful silver butterdishes, which Hedy wouldn't use until she had given Gene silver service plates for a Christmas present. When they separated, he wanted the plates, but discovered they had only been bought for the house.

ᔓᔕ

Walt and Lily Disney were rushing to get to the Beverly Hills Hotel the other night for their rhumba lesson when I caught up with them. "Come on, sit down—let's visit," I said.

They replied: "Can't you see, we're taking lessons with some millionaires."

"Well, so what? You're a millionaire."

Walt said, "Yes, but we're not real ones—we didn't use to have money."

A. L. Race Unchanged as Three Leaders Win

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Our old letter-writing friend, A. Fan, of Arlington, Va., has again deemed it worth 3 cents to speak his mind about the Washington ball club and opines as follows: "Dear Mr. Povich: Dutch Leonard, Sid Hudson and Ken Chase have been pitching better ball for the past two months than any three pitchers on any other club, but what has it added up to? Sixth place, that's what. As for the Washington team outside of the pitching, figure it out for yourself."

POVICH

Well, let's see. The Nats have, indeed, been getting superb pitching on at least five days a week, yet they aren't even out of the woods yet as far as seventh place is concerned. That would seem to indict the whole team with the exception of the pitching, and it is an indictment that is probably truly drawn.

There isn't any power on the Washington club, and the Nats' defense isn't the type to help their pitchers win a fair share of the close ones. Other clubs win ball games even when they get poor pitching, but the Nats aren't that kind of a club. Any time they don't get a decently pitched game from one of their own guys, they are a gone gang, as a rule, which this year has had few exceptions.

Dutch Leonard has lost eight games by one run, in none of which he allowed more then four runs. Sidney Hudson had to hold the Boston Red Sox to one run in 21 winnings to get away with his two recent victories over Lefty Grove. Stirring up runs for themselves in any quantity is one thing the Nats haven't been doing, and we need look no farther than the league's official figures for the proof.

The small type of the team batting figures shows that the Nats are the only team in the league which has not scored as many as 600 runs this year. And they have been shut out more times—eight—than any other club except the Athletics. The lack of batting power has been profaning what has been, for long stretches, the best pitching in the league.

It's an old complaint against Washington teams—this lack of power. They haven't had a power hitter since 1933 when Goose Goslin was traded to the Tigers. In effect, the Nats have been a National League team dumped into the high-powered American League races where hitting is an item as important as the pitching.

Oh, the Nats' team batting average is almost decent enough, a semi-respectable .275 that rates them fourth in team hitting, but the power is still not there. The Nats have hit only 45 home runs, 16 fewer than the team that rates seventh in homers, and 82 fewer than the Red Sox. They are sixth in triples and a poor last in runs slugged across the plate.

There isn't a guy in the line-up who is any threat to step up to the plate and rattle a fence or knock the ball out of the lot with any consistency. Cecil Travis, Washington's leading hitter, has collected only two homers all season. Washington's distant leftfield bleachers defeats Gerald Walker, the club's power man. Buddy Lewis has lost his extra-base swing, and the only other regular who has the muscle to ride the ball a long way is Jimmy Bloodworth who hasn't been intimidating any pitchers.

The acquisition of Jack Sanford may improve the situation a bit. He's not of the usual mold of Washington rookies, in that he's a big man with potential power. At best, he won't hit home runs, because he's a line-drive hitter, but if he attunes his swing to big league pitching he'll be a welcome extra-base knocker.

A Greenberg, or a York or even a Judnich with his 24 homers and .295 batting average would probably have lifted the Nats into the first division this season in the light of the pitching they have been getting. There is certain to be a concerted effort by Clark Griffith to get himself a muscle man in the winter trading.

He's certain to look in the direction of Detroit, which covets at least two of the Nats. The Tigers want Dutch Leonard, they want Buddy Myer and they want Buddy Lewis, whom they would station at third base to bolster their own decadent infield. They can't get Leonard, because Griffith doesn't trade or sell pitchers, but they can have Myer for a price and Lewis is no longer a sacred member of the Nats.

Griffith would hold out for York in any deal with the Tigers, and it may yet be made, particularly if Detroit fails to win the 1940 pennant, the loss of which could be easily blamed on its shaky infield.

It will be said, of course, that Griffith let Taft Wright get away from him in the Walker deal and it will be pointed out that Wright is hitting a hot .337 for the White Sox. But the Nats scarcely took a licking on that deal. Walker has driven in more runs than Wright, and you'll notice, perhaps, that the fat boy has been demoted to seventh place in the White Sox lineup.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 8.—This should be a historic, hysteric week in baseball. The Yanks, up from last place in the American League with one of the most amazing streaks anyone can remember, will play five games this week against the Tigers and Indians, two of these critical contests against an Indian club that is now leading the league by a single point.

CONSIDINE

The Yanks go West with the reputation of having their worst road club since Clark Griffith took the 1908 Yanks on a 21-game Western trip and came home without a victory or a job. And yet they now are definitely the team to beat in the first good American League race since 1929. Singularly enough, a pitcher who wasn't considered much more than a kid who might come through in the future, Marius Russo, and a kid no Yankee fan ever heard of, Ernie Bonham, are what make the champions tough on the eve of the week's play. Gomez, Pearson and, for all we know, Ruffing are gone.

Detroit has the better record against the Yanks. The Tigers, a crew more ancient than the Dodgers, have won 12 of 19 games against the champs. The Indian-Yankee record shows the Indians winner in nine of the 20 games played.

The Yanks swept through three straight victories against each of the clubs when they last played here, and they'll go into Briggs Stadium and the Cleveland Municipal Stadium convinced that they will do it again and sew up the race. If they get over these two boulders successfully they have a simple schedule from there in.

We suspect that the Tigers will give them more trouble. They fight harder and work closer together. With the Indians holding secret lodge meetings in hotel rooms without Manager Vitt, we suspect that it will be the Yanks and Tigers who will pull straws for the king's ransom that is the reward of a pennant winner.

The phoniest thing I've ever seen in sports was that fall of Bob Pastor's near the end of the ninth round of the Conn fight. Conn had won the round quite easily. Pastor, in a bald-faced effort to steal it, took a harried squint at the clock, rubbed up against Conn and went down, holding his groin. Referee Cavanagh started counting, but Pastor was shrewd enough not to go down until the round was within a few seconds of ending. He knew there wasn't time in which to count him out, and that he might possibly sway Cavanagh into giving him the round on a foul.

Snead, With 276, Wins Anthracite Open Golf

Four-Under-Par Total of 276 Brings $5,000 Victory Over P.G.A.-Conqueror Nelson; Len Worsham Finishes in the Money

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 8.—Shaving four strokes off par, Sam Snead, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., won the $5,000 Anthracite Open golf tournament today with a two-stroke lead over his P. G. A. conqueror, Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio.

Snead put together 68 and a par-70 on the last 36 holes for a 72-hole total of 276.

Nelson, who trimmed the former West Virginia hillbilly earlier in the week in Professional Golfers Association match play, warmed up with a 70 on the morning round, then shot a sizzling 66 to gain second spot.

Little Has 279.

One stroke behind was Lawson Little, Bretton Woods, N. H., who took a 69 and 70 for a 279 total.

Snead, a trifle erratic on the greens, offset this with booming tee shots and long woods.

The victory meant $1,200 for Snead, one of golfdom's ranking money winners since he started on the golden circuit a few years ago.

Nelson won $750 for his second-place play, while $525 went to Little.

Tied for fourth with 281's were Ed Dudley, Philadelphia pro, and Ed Oliver, Hornell, N. Y. They split $715. Oliver, tied with Snead for the lead at the half-way mark, slipped to a 74 during the morning round but shot a superb 69 during the afternoon to get back into the money. Dudley carded a record-equaling 65 and then took a 71.

Felix Serafin, the home pro who led the opening round with a 65, gained sixth and $250. His last two rounds were 71-72 for a 282 total.

Lewis Worsham, jr., professional at the Burning Tree Club in Washington, finished in the money with a 286 total, worth $115.25. Three strokes back of the coleaders at the half-way mark, Worsham added a morning 70 to move into contention but dropped back with a final round 75 for 286.

Al Houghton, of Washington, added a 73-76 to a previous 141 total for 290 while Buck Worsham, of the Chevy Chase Club, finished 78-76 for 298.

Dizzy Dean to Face Dodgers on Wednesday

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP).—Dizzy Dean, back with the Chicago Cubs after a three-month comeback test at Tulsa of the Texas League, will get his first starting assignment Wednesday against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Manager Gabby Hartnett announced Diz would start at Brooklyn while the Cubs are making their final swing through the Eastern half of the circuit. Dean rejoined his teammates today in time to appear in uniform at the Cincinnati game.

Courageous Fight Wins Final Berth

Riggs Survives Three-Hour Battle and Will Meet McNeill Today

By the Associated Press

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 8.—The hallmark of a champion is gameness and Bobby Riggs proved his right to bear the stamp today when he came from far behind to gain the final round of the National Tennis Singles Tournament with a 4—6, 6—3, 5—7, 6—3, 6—4 victory over Midshipman Joe Hunt, of Annapolis.

Stripped of his strokes by sickness, and with nothing left but courage to go on, the defending titleholder refused to yield to a savage hitting opponent who was at the peak of his game, and finally achieved a win after nearly three hours of play.

Riggs' opponent in the final round will be Don McNeill, the Oklahoma City internationalist and the country's third ranking player. McNeill gained the right to contest for the world's top tennis title, now that Wimbledon has been abandoned, with a 6—1, 5—7, 6—4 triumph over young Jack Kramer, of California.

Riggs started his battle against Hunt with the near-capacity crowd of 12,000 dead against him, but fewer winners ever got a bigger hand than he did when he scored the final point. Distressed by a cold and fever he sank wearily into the chair of the umpires' stand and buried his face in his hands. It was a full 5 minutes before he felt strong enough to walk off the court.

It was obvious in the first set that Riggs wasn't on his game. He was slow afoot, his drives lacked pace and depth, and his smashes were lady-like. Hunt, one of the greatest volleyers in the game, harassed the champion from the net and ran out the set by breaking through service in the tenth game.

Riggs sneezed and sniffled and took a brace of sinister appearing pills after this set and lifted his game a bit. He forced Hunt away from the net with passing shots and lobs and forced his weary body to the webbing. From this vantage point he showed to better advantage and cheered his few backers by winning the last two games with the loss of but four points.

Bobby kept the upper hand until he led 5-3 in the third set and was within two points of winning it in the ninth game. Then his game went to pieces. Quick to sense his opponent's floundering, Hunt surged

Nats Defeat A's, 7-6, Lose Nightcap, 3-0

Hudson Wins Opener; Second Is Called End of 5th, Darkness

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Four hours of intermittent baseball played between showers added up to an even break for the Nats and Athletics yesterday in a rain-drenched double-header at Griffith Stadium. The scores were 7 to 6 (Washington) and 4 to 0 (Philadelphia).

Sidney Hudson was credited in that first game with his fifteenth victory of the year, but he would prefer not to be questioned too closely about it. The lowly A's treated the Nats' prize rookie with great violence, and Joe Krakauskas saved the game for him in the last four innings.

The 6,000 customers watched the Nats attempt in vain to win the second game with virtually an all-rookie line-up. Clark Griffith, as advertised, staged his "parade of youth" in the final with rookies at every position except third base and leftfield, and they couldn't stir up a run in the five innings the umpires permitted the game to endure. It was called on account of darkness.

Beckman Wins

Pitcher Bill Beckman of the A's received credit for a soft shutout victory. He held the Nat rookies to three hits.

For four innings it was an inspiring scoreless duel between Beckman and young Arnold Anderson, late of the Nats' Springfield farm. With a makeshift infield behind him, comprised of Jack Sandford at first base, Morris Aderholt at second, Sherrard Robertson at shortstop and Jimmy Bloodworth at third, Anderson gave Beckman a battle of it until the fifth.

In that inning, Anderson, a large, red-necked citizen with a fair kind of fast ball, lost his effectiveness, his

Chicago Cardinals Tie Steelers, 7-7

Clark, Substitute Halfback, Making His Pro Debut, Sparks Mates to Deadlock With Pitt; Boots Tying Point

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 8.—Sparked by Beryl Clark, substitute halfback making his debut in the professional ranks, the Chicago Cardinals came from behind to tie the Pittsburgh Steelers, 7-7, in the National Pro Football League opener before 22,000 at Forbes Field today.

The 22-year-old former Oklahoma University star, who replaced the vaunted Marshall Goldberg, flipped a pass to John Hall in the third quarter to put Chicago back in the game after trailing since early in the second period. Hall galloped 35 yards to score. A moment later Clark booted the tying point from placement.

Clark, who led the Big Six Conference in scoring last year, was sent into the game late in the first period when Goldberg, former All-America at Pitt, was benched because of a bad leg. Clark promptly led the Cardinals on the longest advance of the game, a 66-yard drive that the steelers rallied to stop on their 27-yard stripe.

The Oklahoma boy was momentarily stopped early in the second period when he was twice tackled behind his line—Pittsburgh winning the ball on downs and forging ahead for its score.

Those two pretty tackles by Wilbur Stortet and Boyd Brumbaugh forced the Cardinals back 10 yards to the Pittsburgh 37-yard line.

Then Billy Patterson, dodging and spinning, slanted off right end for 12 yards and a first down. Brumbaugh plunger for 6 and the Cardinal reserves came in in a vain attempt to halt the Pittsburgh advance.

From the Chicago 45-yard line Patterson heaved a beautiful 27-yard spiral to George Platukis, who was practically in the clear and easily galloped the remaining 18 yards for a goal. Armand Niccolai's place-kick was good for the point.

In the final period both teams zigzagged back and forth although with one minute to go, Niccolai made a bold attempt to break the deadlock with a field goal and the 49-yard mark. It was short.

The Cards rang up nine first downs to the Steelers' three and completed nine of 21 passes attempted for 128 yards against Pittsburgh's 64 yards from four completed passes out of 13 tried.

Surging Yanks Slash Bosox's Pennant Hopes

Chandler Pitches Champions to a 9-4 Victory as Mates Slug

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 8.—The surging New York Yankees just about washed up Boston Red Sox pennant hopes and enhanced their own considerably today with a 9-to-4 triumph, which swept the two-game series between the clubs.

"Spud" Chandler held the Sox to eight scattered hits while his mates were splattering a parade of five Boston twirlers for 12 hits and 11 bases on balls. "Flash" Gordon hit for the cycle for the Yankees and collected a pair of walks for a perfect day at bat.

The flaming champions, still a game off the pace by virtue of Indian and Tiger victories, head for Cleveland to open another crucial series with the faltering league leaders on Tuesday.

Leadoff Man Gordon opened the hostilities today with his twenty-fifth home run of the season, belting one of Bill Fleming's offerings into the leftfield screen. Bobby Doerr duplicated in the second to tie up the game. Gordon connected for his single in the Yankee second, but was left stranded.

The champs picked up two more in the third. Joe DiMaggio walked, but was erased trying to reach third on Charlie Keller's single. Buddy Rosar singled to right and Keller reached third on Doc Cramer's poor throw to the infield. Rosar pulling up at second. Babe Dahlgren chased

Tigers Keep Virtual Tie For A.L. Lead

York's Homer in 8th Clinches Victory As Team Rallies Fourth Day in Row

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 8.—The fighting Detroit Tigers came from behind for the fourth straight time today for victory, conquering the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 4, to remain less than 2 percetnage points behind the Cleveland Indians, American League pace-setters.

Rudy York's twenty-sixth homer of the year with the bases empty in the eighth inning nailed down Detroit's eighteenth victory in 22 games against the luckless Brownies this year. The win, the Tigers' fifth straight, was scored before a crowd of 24,623.

The Tigers had to fight an uphill battle because of an unexpected four-run collapse by Pitcher Lynwood Rowe in the fourth inning.

Rowe Collapses

Rowe was relieved by Paul Trout, starting the sixth. The latter gave way to Tommy Bridges with two men gone and the bases jammed in the seventh. Bridges got out of the difficulty and made his first relief start of the season a winning one.

Johnny Niggeling, always a tough customer for the Tigers, went the route for St. Louis, yielding eight hits. Detroit did not score until the fifth, when a pinch triple by Barney McCosky, a single by Bruce Campbell, a walk to Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg's triple sent three runs across the plate.

The Tigers tied the score in the sixth on a single by George Stainback, an infield out and George Tebbett's one-base drive to left.

Bobby Feller, In Relief Role, Wins His 24th

Tribe Beats Chisox, 5-4, and Holds Slight Margin Over Tigers

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 8.—Bobby Feller, coming in to relieve Pitcher Al Milnar in the ninth inning with the score tied 4-all, won his twenty-fourth victory of the year as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 4, in ten innings today.

The victory—snapping a six-game losing streak—enabled the Indians to maintain a slight mathematical advantage over Detroit in the tie for first place.

Ray Mack drove in the winning run after Jeff Heath led off with a double and took third base on a passed ball.

Feller Allows One Hit

In the two innings Feller worked, he allowed one hit, one base on balls and struck out three. Milnar, who has not won a game since August 4, allowed 9 hits. Ted Lyons gave up 4 hits.

Catcher Frankie Pytlak went to rightfield in the tenth inning, replacing Clarence Campbell after Umpire William Summers benched the Cleveland gardener for a remark made from the bench.

Cleveland's big inning was the fourth—three runs. Jeff Heath singled and Ken Keltner followed with his fourteenth home run of the year. Rollie Hemsley was safe on Jimmy Webb's error and advanced to third on Milnar's single. Lou Boudreau produced a double to score Hemsley.

Chapman Scores

The Indians added one in the fifth on singles by Ben Chapman and Beau Bell, Chapman scoring on an infield out.

Chicago scored their first run in the second with doubles by Julius Solters and Mike Tresh. In the sixth, Joe Kuhel bunted and moved to third when Milnar overthrew first. Luke Appling then tripled, scoring Kuhel.

In the eighth Kreevich beat out a hit to deep short and Solters hit a home run.

Bill Talbert Beats Harris Everett for N. J. Tennis Title

By the Associated Press

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 8.—Billy Talbert, of Cincinnati, won the eastern New Jersey Clay Courts Tennis Championship today, defeating Harris Everett, of Jacksonville, Fla., 6—1, 6—3, 6—1.

Talbert, who eliminated Defending Champion Frank Bowden, of New York, in the semifinals, had little trouble downing Everett. Everett erred frequently and showed a decided reversal of the form which earned him a victory yesterday over top-seeded Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla.

In an exhibition doubles match, Mulloy and Everett defeated Talbert and J. Norman Anderson, of Hoboken, 6—3, 8—6.

Milwaukee Pros Rout Squabbling Gunners by 60-0

Royalty II Comes Back to Win Columbus Hunter Title

Big Bay Wins Victories on Closing Day

Roger S. Waters' Half-Breed Scores 31 Points; Second Is Candolette With 28

By Anne Hagner

Able to win only one blue ribbon at Saturday's opening of the two-day event, Roger S. Waters' Royalty II came forward with a rush yesterday to snatch three blue ribbons and the hunter championship of the annual Columbus Show at Meadowbrook Club.

Capably ridden by Charlie Lewis, Royalty won the model hunters, corinthian and $300 hunter stake classes. To cap his comeback drive to the championship the big half-breed also took the hunter championship preliminary, which assured him the tricolor over J. North Fletcher's Troop.

By his victory, Royalty enriched the trophy room of his owner by the $800 Bobby Roby Memorial Trophy, awarded to the horse winning the most points during the show. Roby, best known of all District horsemen, died early this year, and the trophy to his memory was donated by nearly 100 admirers and friends.

Waters' Ace amassed 31 points for the silver statue, barely outranking Eleanor Moffett's Candolette, from Asheville, N. C., with 28. The perfectly mannered chestnut, now finishing a four-month tour of the North with a horse show a week behind her, performed with customary ability in the preliminary event, but was pinned third to Royalty and Troop.

Miss Moffet's mare, however, was still the most versatile horse in the show as she won in both conformation and working events with equal ease. Her string of victories was spoiled by missing one fence on the outside course in the event for working hunters with amateur riders, which despite an otherwise perfect round, resulted in her disqualification. The class was won by Troop, with Alex Calvert up.

The jumper championship went to the Fort Myer Horse Show team's Smacko, in his first public appearance since early last spring. The bay son of McDonough was ridden by Capt. Charles B. McClelland.

Reserve among jumpers necessitated a jump-off between U. S. Randle's Randle's Way and Fenton Fadeley's Lacquer Lady, and the Randle-owned gelding finally triumphed and received the award.

The show, haunted as in previous years by intermittent showers that held down the crowd, nevertheless fared better than last year and attracted a brilliant list of entries.

Major come-on to exhibitors were the lucrative stake events, principally the class for open jumpers, which went to Gardner Hallman's Lad Jack after a series of jump-offs with Lacquer Lady.

Kehoe, Terp Track Ace, To Coach at Mt. Rainier

Will Handle Cinder, Basketball Teams And Teach History

KEHOE

James (Jimmy) Kehoe, Maryland track star, and 1940 graduate of the College of Education of that university, will teach American history and coach basketball and track at Mount Rainier High School this year, it was announced yesterday by Principal F. P. Blunt.

"Bashful Jimmy" will replace Perry Wilkinson, former coach and teacher at the school who has gone into business for himself. The Belair, Md., boy carries with him into the classroom a host of records which will probably remain unshattered for a good many semesters.

In 1939 Kehoe set a record of 1:57.5 for the 880 event at the indoor Penn A. C. Meet. Other marks he hung up in the same year include, Southern Conference indoors 880 at 1:56.8; outdoors, District of Columbia A. A. U. Meet 880 in 1:57; Southern Conference outdoors mile, 4:18:6. He also boasts of the South Atlantic A. A. U. records for the mile and 880 which set in 1939.

This year he broke his own indoor Southern Conference 880-yard dash record with a time of 1:55:1. At the Florida relays in cohorts with Tommy Fields, Mace Chronister and Alan Miller he was an integral part of the Maryland team which won both the 1-mile and 2-mile relays. At Blacksburg he broke the V. P. I. stadium mark for the 880 in 1:55. Kehoe came away from the Penn A. C. meet this year with three watches for being a member of the distance medley, 2-mile and 4-mile teams. In a dual meet with Army at Byrd Stadium in College Park this spring he broke the stadium mark with a time of 1:56:8 for the 880 run.

Last month he also added to his collection the Junior National record for the 880 sprint at the National A. A. U. meet in San Francisco, with a time of 1:55:2. He also set a new national record for his favorite number at Princeton Stadium in May.

As a member of the Washington A. C. team on September 1, Kehoe set a previously unreached time for the national 1,000-yard dash at the National Canadian Exposition in Toronto. In short he has beaten at one time or another every half-miler of any standing in the country including Woodruff and Beetham.

Rain Disrupts Gov't Tennis Net Program

Rain yesterday postponed all but three matches scheduled in the Government employes' tennis championships at Potomac Park courts.

Allie Ritzenberg reached the quarter-finals of the men's singles with a 6—3, 7—5 victory over Spencer Howell before showers interrupted the program.

Entries for women's doubles and mixed duobles are still open and may be made at the Tennis Shop, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest. The draw for the mixed doubles has been made, but in case of more entries, it will be with the provision that the four strongest teams already drawn will remain in their original places.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Bucs Win Pair From Cards To Take Third

St. Louis Defeated, 16-14, 5-4; Mize Blasts 3 Homers in Opener

By the Associated Press
By International News Service

St. Louis, Sept. 8.—The Pittsburgh Pirates moved into third place in the National League pennant race today by spanking the St. Louis Cardinals, 16 to 14 and 5 to 4, in an abbreviated twin bill.

Although Pittsburgh amassed 21 hits in the first game, Johnny Mize of the Cardinals stole the show as he belted three successive homers to boost his season's total to 41 and establish a new major league record. Mize is the first big leaguer ever to hit three home runs in each of four separate games.

The first game was a slugfest with six Cards working on the mound and Bill McGee charged with defeat. Dick Lanahan, second of five Pirate hurlers, was credited with the win. Debs Garms and Maurice Van Robays socked first inning homers for the Pirates, and Don Padgett and Ernie Koy also connected for the circuit for St. Louis.

The nightcap, called in the fifth because of darkness, was decided when Pittsburgh staged a three-run rally in their half of the final stanza. Singles by Pep Young, Garms and Arky Vaughan and a triple by Bob Elliott was responsible for victory. A crowd of 10,716 attended.

Riggs Rallies To Beat Hunt At Forest Hills

Irked by Sickness, Champion Beats Middie in Five Sets

to the attack and hitting off the ground and in the air with tremendous power, completely routed the champion to run off four games for the set. Hunt scored 22 placements in this set as his thundering shots banged into the corners and bit the sidelines.

The women's final will be between the world's No. 1 player, Alice Marble, and the girl she succeeded as queen of the courts, Helen Jacobs. Miss Marble, winner of 27 consecutive tournaments, beat Valerie Scott, of England, 6—3, 6—3, after Miss Jacobs, who was in the final round here as long ago as 1928, had turned back another English star, Mary Hardwick, 2—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Riggs Starts Fighting

Hunt, sensing the kill, came out swinging after the intermission and took a 3—1 lead in the fourth set and was one point away from a 4—1 advantage. Then Riggs dug in.

Summoning all of his strength he started fighting back. His delicate shots threaded needle's eye openings, and nothing Hunt hit was too far for him to retrieve and bang back. With the crowd cheering him now, he ran off five games for the set.

Riggs swept the first two games of the final set at love but Hunt took the next two. Riggs worked to 5—4 and then, putting all he had into his serve, won the tenth with the loss of but a point.

The McNeill Kramer battle ran true to form, with the more experienced and sharper hitting internationalist never in any danger of losing.

poise and the ball game. He pitched four hits to the Athletics and wild-pitched one run home. Singles by Siebert, Hayes and Gantenbein, and Moses' double, descended on Anderson.

Three times in the first five innings of the first game the Athletics handed over leads to young Porter Vaughan and Ed Heusser, but they were unable to hold them against the counter-attacks of the Nats. In the fifth, the Nats finally came from behind, to go in front, 6 to 5.

George Case contributed the big blow of that fifth inning. Jimmy Pofahl and Rick Ferrell led off with singles against Heusser, and the rally sagged when Buddy Myer, hitting for Hudson, bunted into a force play at third, but Case cracked a double down the leftfield line that scored Pofahl with the tying run, and Ferrell scored from third a bit later on Lewis' high bounder in front of the plate.

Krakauskas pitched a clever relief job to save the game for the Nats. He struck out four of the first five men to face him, and totaled seven strikeouts for his four-inning job. He was mixing up his nigh hard ball with a new-found curve to the dismay of the A's.

Hudson was no puzzle to the A's. They pounded him for four hits and two runs in the first inning. Dick Siebert's double scored both of the runs. In the second, they found him for two more hits and a run.

Nats Tie Score

The Nats tied the score by the end of the third, picking up a run in the first on Walker's double to left and Travis' single. In the second, young Vaughan lost control and walked four men, forcing over one run as the Nats deadlocked the game at 3-3.

The A's, who reached Hudson for at least two hits in every inning, came up with a run in the fourth on Fred Chapman's bunt and Moses' double to take a 5-4 lead. The Nats tied it right away on a walk to Walker and Bloodworth's double to left.

Bob Johnson put the A's in front again in the fifth with his twenty-sixth homer, a blast into the left-center seats, but Heusser couldn't hold his 5-4 lead. The Nats countered with two runs which were launched by Pofahl's single to right and Ferrell's single to center. Myer forced Profahl at third, but Case's double tied the score and the Nats had a 6-5 lead when Myer scored from third on Lewis' infield out.

Krakauskas took charge after that. The Nats upped his lead to 7-5 in the seventh with three hits off chubby Dean. Krakky gave up a run to the A's in the eighth and was in serious trouble for a time. He walked Wagner and pitched a double to McCoy before getting anybody out. When Travis fumbled F. Chapman's grounder, Wagner scored, but with the tying run on second and none out, Krakky bore down and restrained the next three A's to harmless blows.

Middies Lose Star Halfback; Ankle Sprained

Zeke Zechella Hurt In Freak Accident; Was Plebe Standout

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 8.—Further indicating the intensive program ahead of them in the limited time available to work into shape for the opening game with William and Mary, September 28, Navy's big football squad was put through two practice sessions again today.

During the morning the players worked out under near ideal weather conditions as was the case yesterday, but in the afternoon a heavy shower of rain came down just before the squad took the field. However, it was of short duration so that the terrain was not in bad condition, while on the other hand the elements were beneficial in that they furnished the opportunity of handling a wet ball.

Adversities have begun to hit the squad early, for it develops that Zeke Zechella, promising halfback candidate, sustained a severely sprained ankle in a fall yesterday. The accident was a queer one as Zachella was simply tossing the ball around with a fellow player when he suddenly fell. Zachella writhed in pain, and for a brief period was in an unconscious condition but even then it was not thought the injury was serious. It was necessary to remove him from the field on a litter and a later examination by physicians revealed that he will be out of play indefinitely, probably until late in the season. Zechella who is from Kentucky, starred on last year's plebe team.

Today's practice was of a business-like fashion, the players working at the defensive machines, body blocking for the linemen, passing and kicking, but probably more important of all was the extensive drill given the large group of backfield candidates in forward passing, with the several aspirants for the flank positions working on the defensive.

Weight Now Problem of Armstrong

Henry, Scaling 156, Must Get Down to 147 For Fight With Furr

Backers of Phil Furr, Washington contender for the world's welterweight championship, had reason to rejoice yesterday with a report seeping out of Greenwood Lake, N. J., that Henry Armstrong, the titleholder, was having great difficulty slicing down his weight for the 15-round championship match at Griffith Stadium, Monday, September 23.

Reached by phone yesterday at Greenwood Lake, Eddie Mead, manager of the champion, confirmed the report that Armstrong was at his heaviest weight—157—when he started training Saturday afternoon.

Yesterday Armstrong had another workout, and Mead admitted that Hurricane Henry had lost only a pound.

Naturally, fighting for the title he owns, Armstrong must scale in at 147 or less by 2 p. m. the day of the show, and some of the experts are inclined to believe he will suffer.

Furr has been training faithfully for the last few weeks, and sometime this week is due to trade his quarters at the little Huron gym on Eleventh street for an outdoor retreat. Carter Barron, Variety Club bigwig, is expecting to receive word today on the Griffith Farms site, where Freddy Steele trained for Hobo Williams.

Official approval by the Capital Parks for erecting a tent and ring at Brentwood Recreation Center has been given, and it is there that Armstrong is to train when he arrives late this week.

Career of Max Krause Hinges on Back X-Ray

Redskins' Fullback Fears Cracked Vertebra, Will Undergo Examination Here After Game At Boston; Former Gonzagan Hurt Sept. 22

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

En route to Boston with the Redskins, Sept. 8.—Max Krause, the Redskins' only surviving fullback, will undergo an X-ray examination of his back following Tuesday night's exhibition in Boston to determine the nature of an injury which threatens to bench him for another season and possibly for good.

Up to now, all the treatment Maxie has had consisted of ultra-violet rays, a few rubdowns and a couple of sympathetic looks. With that sort of thing to bolster him, he's whipped himself in shape to play when the Redskins try to do what the Eastern Division champion New York Giants couldn't—beat a collection of guys named Joe who call themselves the Eastern College All-Stars.

Krause was the first to fall victim to the injury jinx which has harried the Redskins since the Spokane, Wash., training sessions. And right now he's the only experienced fullback who can carry that ball, what with Andy Farkas out for ten weeks with a knee operation and Don Irwin on the inactive list as "coach" Irwin.

Back Not Improved

Maxie is in for a lot of ball-carrying this fall, but his back is giving him so much pain that he can't run at full steam. And he is inclined to believe that he has a cracked vertebra in his spine.

"This thing isn't getting a bit better, and I'm going to have it X-rayed as soon as we get back to Washington," Krause confided. "I can't run at full steam or make any sharp cutbacks without it hurting me. It feels like a cracked vertebra."

"Oh, I can run but this bothers me. I don't know whether I'm just getting old, or whether something really is wrong. Look how quick Wayne came around, and he couldn't even walk when he was first injured."

The Wayne in Maxie's conversation is Wayne Millner, veteran end who was knocked out with a sacroiliac back injury for a week.

Krause, 29 years old and now playing his eighth year of professional football, was injured in the Seattle exhibition August 22 when he got in the way of the knee of teammate Bo Russell, 218-pound tackle, as Bo was running full steam to make a block.

If his injury proves serious, it will be a severe blow to the Redskin running attack and will leave the fullback position wide open for rookie Bob Seymour, draftee from Oklahoma University. Jimmy Johnston, now nursing an ankle sprain, is expected to get a taste of heavy work at the fullback position, also.

At Gonzaga University, Krause was a fancy stepper and noted for his elusiveness as a ball-carrier. In pro football they made him a blocking back, but his heart has been in running with the ball. Now his big chance to run may be blocked.

"Just let me tote that ball—that's what I want to do," Krause sighed. "I can't sidestep as well now as I used to because I haven't done it in so long. But it'll come back—if nothing's wrong with my back."

The other two Redskin cripples—Johnston and Millner—are scheduled to see action Tuesday night in Boston's Fenway park, and Maxie is scheduled to be in the starting backfield along with Erny Pinckert, Ed Justice and Sammy Baugh.

Owner George Marshall, who rushed out of Boston with his bank books giving off a scarlet glare four years ago, will come back "home" tomorrow. The game in the Redskins former home town is being sponsored by the Boston American Legion for charity, and a crowd of around 20,000 is expected.

Phils Sweep Double Bill To End Slump

KIRBY HIGBE

Bees Beaten, 2-1, 3-1; Higbe Wins 12-Inning Opener Over Errickson

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—The Phillies snapped a seven-game losing streak today, taking both ends of a doubleheader from Boston, 2 to 1 and 3 to 1.

The first game went 12 innings before Philadelphia pushed across the winning marker and gave Kirby Higbe the nod over Dick Errickson in a pitchers' duel. The Phillies garnered 1 hits, including a homer by Danny Litwhiler, sensational Rookie recently recalled from the Eastern League. Higbe blanked the busy Bees in all but the seventh, when Boston scored its lone marker.

A three-run splurge in the third inning of the nightcap was all Si Johnson needed to annex a victory. Each team collected seven safeties, with Eddie Miller registering Boston's only run on a homer in the seventh. Jim Tobin was charged with the loss.

Ward's Tune-Up Warns Foes of Battle They Face in Amateur

Champion Posts a 68 In Practice

Breezes Around Course in 4 Under Par in Brush-up for National Event

By the Associated Press

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Marvin (Bud) Ward, defending titleholder in the National Amateur golf championship, tossed a bit of psychology as well as a lot of golf shots at his rivals today by shooting a four-under-par 68 in his final practice round over the Winged Foot G. C. West course.

This round, on which he holed out every putt, not only was equal to the competitive course record but also served due and definite notice that he's ready to lay his title on the line against any man who tries to take it away from him.

Ward, playing in a match with another golfer from Spokane—Bing Crosby—finally got rolling on Winged Foot's back nine. He went out in 37, one over regulation, but he started back 3-3-3-2, tacked on five straight 4's, for a five-under-par 31 for the homeward journey.

Crowd Out to See Bing

Ward, teamed with Billy Bob Coffey, of Fort Worth, Tex., against Crosby and Craig Wood, Winged Foot pro, was an incidental attraction when the foursome started out. The crowd was there chiefly to see Crosby.

But by the time Bing had shot the first nine in 43 and started out not much better on the back nine, the spotlight shifted. Ward's score for those holes was only one shot over the sensational 30 which Bobby Jones had for his 69 that led the first round of the 1929 United States Open here, and which set what then was the course record.

Ward, who had been "fighting" a lot of his shots the first four days, was hitting them well today.

He had his outgoing 37 only because he three-putted two holes. On the back nine he hit everything and knocked in 10 and 20 foot putts for birdies on the eleventh and thirteenth.

Tomorrow's first 18-hole qualifying round will start at 7 a. m., (E.S.T.). From then until 12:57 p. m., the 150 entrants will be teeing off in threesomes. There will be another 18-hole round Tuesday, and the 64 low scorers then go into match play, starting Wednesday and Thursday with two 18-hole rounds each day. They shift to the 36-hole route for the semifinals Friday and final Saturday.

Ward will play with Bruce McCormick, of Pasadena, Calif., and Edmund B. Overton, of Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Crosby is paired with Coffey and Pat Mucci, of West Orange, N. J. Some of the other leading threesomes are Jesse Sweetser, Ray Billows and Public Links Champion Bob Clark; Max Marston, Gus Moreland and 1939 Medalist Tommy Sheehan; Johnny Goodman, Bobby Walker and Frank Strafaci, and Johnny Fischer, Art Doering and Dick Chapman.

Doering, edged out in last year's semifinals by Ward, is rated about the strongest threat. Ward thinks 143 should win the medal, which would be four shots higher than last year.

Death-Defying Acts Carded For Field Day

A 45-minute exhibition of motorcycle riding and acrobatics will be supplied by a crack ten-man team led by Officer Tony Richitt during the Police-Firemen's benefit field day Saturday afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

Lieut. John J. Agnew, athletic chairman, announced that Richitt had rounded up the following motorcycle speed demons to provide thrills for an expected 20,000 persons: Capt. Milton D. Smith, Lee Hensley, Joe Osterman, Tony Kaskeski, Horace Carmichael, Walter Klein, Dick Meyer, Aubrey Yowaiski and Joseph Davis.

Agnew pointed out that the police motorcycle demons have been drilling for the last two weeks to perfect their stunts. One of the most difficult, he said, would be four men standing upon a single motorcycle with arms outstretched horizontally. Another when Officer Kaskeski jumps off a ramp at 50 miles an hour and clears a flock of men under him. A motorcycle at top speed will be unleashed through a blazing building to be erected at the ball park.

For their great exhibition at the field day last season, Richitt and his cops were given a free trip to the World's Fair.

The complete field day program will be announced in the next day or so by Lieut. Agnew. Athletic events will be mixed with entertainment, with a softball game opening the program at 11 a. m.

Tickets are priced at $1 and $2.

Don Miller Wins Medal at Kenwood With 72; Volney Burnett Paces Beaver Dam Medal Rounds; Roger Peacock, 2 Others Tied

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Club championship favorites at Capital and Argyle were soundly beaten in major first round upsets yesterday as the two clubs started match play rounds in the annual fall battles, while five other clubs started or finished qualifications. C. Henry Cohen, who has been playing the best golf of the Capital members of late, was a 3 and 2 victim of Ken Spencer. At Argyle John Holzberg was eliminated in the first round by Tony Willmett

CAPITAL

Cohen was the only upset victim among Capital's "big four." George Molloy parred the eighteenth hole to defeat Buster Mrstik, 1 up, as Defending Champion Frank White and former Champion Billy Houghton won by respective scores of 5 and 3 and 4 and 3. The second round will be played next Sunday.

While their big brother, Lewis Worsham, was finishing in the money in the Scranton Open, two young Capital caddies, Herman and Bobby Worsham, were battling in the Capital caddy championships. Bobby, 12 years old, defeated C. Raun, 5 and 4, in the third flight, and Herman lost to Dave Bissell, 2 and 1, in the second flight. Ken Shannon won the first flight over Jackie Bradshaw, 1 up.

Mrs. E. R. Ferguson, jr., is setting the pace thus far for the Capital Club women's championship qualifiers. The last day for medal play is next Saturday.

First round results in the Capital men's championship, six flights:

Championship Flight

Frank Durham defeated J. L. Pimper, 5 and 4; Ken Spencer defeated C. Henry Cohen, 3 and 2; Billy Houghton defeated John Phelan, 4 and 3; Frank X. White defeated William Alexander, 5 and 3; Frank Gradoville defeated C. P. Redick, 5 and 3; Pat Martino-S. S. Fletcher match postponed; Dave Shuck defeated Stanley Newlin, 4 and 3; George Molloy defeated Buster Mrstik, 1 up.

Second Flight

George Borsari defeated Pat Loughran, 6 and 4; M. B. Shaw defeated W. J. Samford, 1 up, 23 holes; G. C. Rittenhouse defeated W. Pendergast, 2 and 1; George Keene defeated Jack Ferguson, 1 up; Roy K. Aten defeated J. Mossburg, 2 up; Tony Martino won by default.

Third Flight

J. T. Burkett defeated C. L. Hillyer, 2 and 1; H. L. Hines defeated H. L. Gray, 1 up; S. E. Mullikin defeated T. G. Crawford, 5 and 4; T. G. Herbert defeated M. F. McDonald, 1 up; George Lindsay won by default; R. L. Burgdorf, jr., defeated Arthur Bowis, 5 and 3; W. H. Mylander defeated E. J. Crill, 4 and 2.

Fourth Flight

W. C. Whittle defeated C. H. Benidt, 3 and 1; Mark Chaconas defeated N. O. Wood, jr., 1 up, 19 holes; F. P. Miller defeated H. Strong, 1 up, 19 holes; R. N. Weisberg defeated G. E. Getty, 1 up; R. R. Britten defeated George MacDonald, 4 and 2; T. H. Brewer defeated Andy Miller, 5 and 4; W. E. Welch defeated Tom Hunter, 6 and 5.

Fifth Flight

Dr. Peter Brue defeated H. L. Dowling, 3 and 2; A. L. Miller defeated H. E. Davies, 1 up, 19 holes; J. A. Hayes, Ted Demeter, Frank Anderton, George Ward, Bob Biebold and Henry Bahr drew byes.

Sixth Flight

R. S. Simms defeated T. H. Waggaman, 5 and 4; E. Piper defeated H. L. Smith, 1 up; J. J. Lane defeated F. P. Pierdon, 2 and 1; Wayne Smith defeated Carter Gibson, 5 and 3.

WASHINGTON

Washington's high-handicapped members, 18 and over, qualified in the Birney Cup competition with H. G. Pratt, jr., and Frank Silver tying with net 65's. Pratt scored 87-22, 65, and Silver 95-30, 65. First round play is scheduled this week.

Birney Cup Pairings (with handicaps)

H. G. Pratt, jr. (22) vs. Ed Fay (26). Howard Sharpe (24) vs. Guy C. Chase (21). J. P. Skinner (31) vs. E. L. Duffies (18). Tom A. O'Halloran (16) vs. J. T. Pellon (18. Frank Silver (30) vs. W. E. ROCK CREEK

J. D. McCoy missed a hole in one by only 19 inches to win the ace play at the Rock Creek course. Keith Williams was second with a tee shot on the fifth hole of A course that stopped 3 feet 3 inches from the cup. The women's prize went to Miss Russ, 8 feet 5 inches, and Mrs. Gable, 9 feet 5 inches from the cup.

MANOR

Bobby Brownell's 2 over par 72 featured the Manor Country Club two-man team finals as the Duke U senior and M. W. Whittlessey successfully defended their title over J. S. McBryde and George Jones, former titleholders. Brownell dropped a half-dozen tellings putts and played fine golf for the entire round. Jones was in the middle 70s for the losers.

CONGRESSIONAL

V. P. Simmons and P. E. Hughes won the threes and fours class in the Congressional Club three-four-five tournament. Simmons had six treys, Hughes a dozen fours, while W. E. Trevett and T. B. Conlyn tied with seven fives each.

BELLE HAVEN

Play in the Belle Haven Club championship showed a let up as rain halted some play and Tommy Ryan led a team against the Staunton, Va., golfers over the latter's course.

ARGYLE

The luck of the draw pitted the two outstanding golfers at Argyle together as first round opponents and left John Holzberg a favorite over Tony Willmett. The latter went to work on his favored foe at the start, however, led 1 up, at the turn and after holding the lead he finally increased it to two on the seventeenth and the match was over.

Championship Flight

A. E. Willmett defeated John Holzberg, 2 and 1; Maurice Cooper defeated W. P. Barnes, 1 up; Serge Benson defeated D. L. Myers, 2 and 1; M. W. Whittlesey defeated F. E. Manning, 4 and 3; J. E. Duffy-Fred Murray match to be played later; Dick Mothershead defeated F. W. LeDuc, 4 and 3; W. S. Lephew-W. L. Moore match postponed; Nolan Gibson defeated W. H. Dickhaut, 4 and 3.

Feldman Ties Harris in Play At Woodmont

Each Scores 83 to Split Medal Honors In Club Tourney

Lou Harris and Cabot Feldman tied for medalist honors in the Woodmont Club championship qualifications yesterday as Howard Nordlinger, defending and seven-time title holder and an automatic qualifier, passed up the medal tests.

Harris and Feldman's scores were 83. The initial round of match play must be completed by Saturday night.

Feldman's 83-10, 73, earned a tie with Simon Eichberg in the Woodmont Handicap sweepstakes, the latter scoring 92-19, 73. Sam Bogdonoff was next with 89-14, 75, and H. E. Strasser fourth with 59-19, 76.

Welsh Beats Al Smith for Va. Net Title

Special Dispatch to The Star

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 8.—Barney Welsh, veteran Rockville, Md., netman and holder of the Middle Atlantic championship, dethroned C. Alphonso Smith, of Arlington, as Northern Virginia Open tennis titleholder in the finals of the annual tournament at the Mannsfield Hall Country Club here today. Welsh dropped the first set, 6—8, but came back to win the next three, 6—2, 6—0, 7—5. Smith had been champion for the past two years.

A heavy thundershower interrupted the doubles, in which Welsh and DeWitt Smith, of Washington, were paired against Alphonso Smith and Buddy Adair, also of Washington. Smith and Adair were leading, two sets to one, when the rain came. The match will be finished next Sunday. A crowd of 300 witnessed the matches.

Rain Washes Out CapitalCityLeague Baseball Program

Rain yesterday washed out all scheduled games in the Capital City Baseball League.

The play-off double-header between Miller Furniture and Klein's Tavern for the A unlimited championship was postponed until Sunday, as was the Plaza Tile-Capital Cafe contest to decide the B unlimited title. They will meet Sunday.

The Kneesi Cubs won a forfeit from Woodridge when the latter team could not field nine men and thereby finished in a tie with Famous Photos for the Junior League second-half crown. They will play one game Sunday to decide the issue.

Bears' Eleven Beats Newark Farm, 34-14

Newark, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP).—The Chicago Bears, of the National Professional Football League, easily defeated their farm team, the Newark Bears, 34-14, in an exhibition game tonight.

Newark, defending champion, in the American Pro Football Association, held Chicago scoreless for the first period but in the second stanza the parent club pushed across three touchdowns to hold a 21-7 edge at the half.

Chicago scored again in the third and fourth quarters while Newark tallied in the last period on Eddie Barlinski's 64-yard run, high spot of the fray.

Women of Six Clubs to Hold Tournaments

Congressional, W.G.C. Without Defending Champs This Week

A half-dozen of the women's golf committees will take advantage of the lull in the District Women's Golf Association schedule to stage club championships this week, all starting today with 18-hole medal rounds.

Congressional and Washington Golf and Country Club will be without defending champions as Mrs. Myron Davy, of the former, will pass up a title defense for her trip to the National Women's in Del Monte, Calif., starting September 23, while Sally Whipple, of Washington, was a recent bride and has moved from the city.

Army and Navy, with Mrs. David Clark defending; Columbia, where Mrs. J. F. Gross is champion; Kenwood, where Mrs. E. C. Lupton won the title in an upset last year, and Manor will also start today with the liveliest battle expected at the latter club where State Champion Mrs. Walter R. Stokes and Mrs. L. G. Pray, winner last year, are co-favored.

The Woodmont women's event is set for the week of September 16, while the Chevy Chase play is scheduled September 16-20.

Qualifying at Capital has been extended through next Saturday while at Beaver Dam and Argyle the first round of match play is the next step. All three are events with one match a week on the schedule. Belle Haven and Indian Spring also plan week-end tourneys.

New champions will be crowned at Indian Spring, where Mrs. Betty Meckley is no longer a member, and Capital, where Mrs. Leo Walper will not compete.

INDIAN SPRING

Defending Champion Roger Peacock was locked in a three-way tie for medal honors with Dick Melvin and Arthur Urban in the Indian Spring club championship qualifications. Peacock and Melvin played the nines in 38-37, each while Urban was 39-36.

Three more of the Four Corners' club top-notch players were only a stroke back in second place, former Champion Buddy Sharkey, Jock Olmsted and Lou Harrison, all with 76.

Pairings will be announced this week for next Sunday's first round of match play.

Arthur Urban	75	Bill Brownrigg, jr.	81
Dick Melvin	78	Eddie Ault	81
Roger Peacock	73	Charles Wells	82
Jock Olmsted	76	Lloyd Farmer	82
Buddy Sharkey	76	Bill Lord	82
Lou Harrison	76	Boyd Jaeger	82
J. D. Roger	78	A. B. Norrod	83
Jim Hunt	80

BEAVER DAM

Volney G. Burnett, who owns one of the best medal play records among the local amateurs over a stretch of years, added to his medalist performances with a 74 in the Beaver Dam club's championship qualifications that looks like a cinch for low-scoring honors with four days of play remaining.

Forrest Thompson, a veteran of many Beaver Dam club championships, is next with a 76. Jim Gipe is the only other 80-breaker with a 79. First-round matches will be played next Sunday and players have until Friday to complete qualifying rounds.

Beaver Dam members are planning a big day for October 5, with golf tournaments all day, followed by a dinner dance. The party is to derive funds for a new practice putting green.

Kracher Resumes Manager's Post at Manor Country Club

Freddie Bolton Seeks Assistant Pro Job; Fellow Pros Criticize Picard's Lack Of Interest in P. G. A. Play

Victor Kracher has returned as manager of Manor Country Club, where he served for nine years . . . Kracher was manager of Congressional for four years and after leaving Manor took over at Beaver Dam for two years . . . Plans for Freddie Bolton, the Maryland junior champion, to attend the University of Illinois, have fallen through and the slim youngster is looking for an assistant pro job; he has been practicing from three to four hours daily for the past few weeks . . . The story is out that a good many of the golf pros didn't like the idea of Henry Picard giving a lesson during the P. G. A. finals last Monday, they thought the defending champion and Hershey Club pro should have been interested enough to see the finals . . . One of the nationally known pros and leading money winners was asked what he thought of the U. S. G. A. barring Jim Ferrier, Australian champ, from the National Amateur, he replied, "Well, I can't play, can I?" . . . Jimmy Gipe, Beaver Dam's Government champion who won the Fairacre Bowl Invitation tournament last week at Hot Springs, brought $200 in the calcutta pool and netted his ticker holder nearly $2,000 for the victory . . . Wiffy Cox wasn't in favor of the local boys going to the National Amateur five days ahead of time to practice. . . . The Congressional pro's advice is to play the course once or twice at the most, just to know where the holes are . . . You get to know the trouble too well otherwise . . . Another suggestion is to play for fun, and no bets, during practice rounds, as betting tends to hurt concentration for future rounds. . . . Bad news for District amateurs —Bobby Brownell has definitely decided to stay up and play in the city tournament over his home course. He's been beating par there for weeks.—M. W. W.

150 Entered In Women Golf Play at Seattle

Marion Miley Among Favorites in Western Amateur Tourney

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Sept. 8.—Most of the big-name women golfers were on the ground today testing the tough par 76 Seattle Golf Club course where they begin firing for the Women's Western Amateur Golf Championship tomorrow.

A new champion is certain to be crowned as Edith Estabrooks, who won last year, will not defend her title.

Among favorites for the winner's cup were Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., two-time former winner; 19-year-old Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., who won the Women's Western 72-Hole Medal Derby the last two years, and Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., the national champion.

Other contenders are Beatrice "Bea" Barrett and Jane Goodsill, of Minneapolis, and Ellamae Williams, the Chicago city and Illinois State champion, and Marion McDougall, of Portland, Oreg., and even 16-year-old Jeanne Cline, Bloomington, Ill., prodigy who has been playing big-time golf since she was 13.

An 18-hole qualifying round will be held tomorrow by the expected 150 entries.

Havre de Grace Opens Major Season Hereabouts Saturday

2-Year-Olds Vie in First Day Feature

Three Other Stakes Booked for Meeting; Only Four Programs Remain at Timonium

By Walter Haight

Maryland's half-mile season, from a standpoint of crowds and wagering, far and away the best ever enjoyed by the smaller tracks, ends with the running of the eighth race at Timonium on Thursday. Friday will be an off day for the bangtails, but on Saturday, Havre de Grace will swing into action as the first stop on the major track parade which will carry the sport from there to Laurel, Pimlico and Bowie. And lest we forget, Charles Town will close out the year's turf activities with its December meeting.

From Charles Town to Timonium, the summer has brought new records all along the line. Hagerstown, Cumberland and Marlboro, along with the others, reached new peaks in enthusiasm for the sport. From other points in the country, there come reports of a general increase in attendance and betting. There is every reason to believe this will be the case on Maryland's bigtime.

Generous Staks

As usual Havre de Grace offers a generous line-up of stakes. The opening day attraction is the $10,000 Eastern Shore Handicap. This is a sprint of 6 furlongs for 2-year-olds. In addition, there's the Potomac, the Chesapeake and the Havre de Grace Handicap, the last-named the farewell feature.

One of the best of these stakes is the Potomac Handicap, scheduled for the second Saturday of the meeting. Nominations for the 3-year-old test include Charles S. Howard's Mioland; William Woodward's Fenelon; W. L. Brann's Pictor and Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' greatly improved Jacomar.

Big Distribution

While Havre de Grace has not fallen in line with the $1,200 minimum purses announced by the Bowie management, the lowest purses will be $1,000 with midweek race of $1,800, $2,000 and $2,500. In all, more than $600,000 will be distributed to the horsemen during the fall season in Maryland.

Turf Notes—Here's the official release on the bribing case at Wheeling: "Jockey R. (Buddy) Root, one of the leading half-mile track riders, today was under a suspension of 60 days for offering a bribe to another jockey, stewards at Wheeling Downs revealed. The bribe, according to the stewards, was proposed in the fifth race last Saturday when Root was astride Disraeli, the winner, and M. Bletzacker was aboard Kin Mag, who ran second. Bletzacker said in an affidavit that Root had offered him a bribe to pull his horse. There was considerable rough riding in the race and Bletzacker and N. Godfrey were fined. Bletzacker claimed a foul, but it was not allowed. Root's suspension began immediately." From Wheeling also comes the word that Stand By, the 14-year-old campaigner, has been retired by Owner E. H. Titmus, jr. Stand By's last appearance on the track was a splendid winning effort, too . . . Jockeys Willie Dufford and R. McDonald will ride out their engagements today at Timonium and then will be out for the remainder of the meeting . . . Both were suspended last Saturday for rough riding . . . Ty Shea and Eddie Brennan have been two of the busiest men on the half-milers this season . . . Jockey Sammy Palumbo has been taking few mounts lately, but his winning percentage is still tops . . . Jockey George Rose is leading the Timonium riders . . . Jockey Leon Garrett has come to life . . . Won three in less than a week with Chilly Ebbie.

Young Corbett 3d Quits Ring After 21 Years

Fresno, Calif., Sept. 8 (INS).—Young Corbett 3d, former world's welterweight champion, today announced his permanent retirement from the ring.

Corbett, now 35, retired twice before but returned to fight and conquer the present class of the fighters, whom he declared "aren't so hot."

"This time I have quit for good," he declared.

His career covered a span of 21 years. It included 185 battles—with only 7 defeats.

Huggins Is Named Hockey Club Head

Kansas City, Sept. 8 (AP).—William L. Huggins, jr., has been named president of the American Hockey Association's Kansas City club, recently acquired by a syndicate.

Huggins said today the group was "determined and adequately financed to give Kansas City a contending team." He added that several player deals were in the making and that the management was seeking a new player-manager.

Joseph C. Fennelly, city councilman, is vice president and Robert D. Mudd, St. Louis, secretary.

Selections at Timonium

Dear Al:

With a battery case, a controversy over the condition of a horse, jockey suspensions and a disqualification, the half-milers still can come up with a good crack now and then. One of the jockeys showed up with a new haircut. A friend, looking over the barber's work, remarked, "That haircut makes your head look like a half-mile track with banked turns." Last week track detectives stumbled into some men warming up a horse with a battery. I wonder how many similar situations nobody stumbled upon? Who was responsible for that spill at the first turn last week Has that guy got a charmed life or something? The tote went a bit screwy last Saturday, but the boys got her going O. K. after one race. Jockey Big Head can't ride himself out of a paper bag these days. Is there a reason? From Wheeling comes word that a jockey has been suspended for trying to "fix" a horse. What about the "forty thieves?" I'm still trying to figure out how that camera showed Wale Signal the winner over Reigh Tetrarch last week. I called Reigh Tetrarch by a neck and then changed it to a head. Was my face red when Wale Signal's number went up The following afternoon, when at least 2,000 more people showed up than on the previous day, one of the press box wits said, "After the way the customers howled yesterday, I didn't think there would be a soul here today." It costs 20 cents to see the biggest horse in the world at the Timonium fare. And a buck-ten, plus plenty, to see the ordinary horses. I find it hard to believe that one about somebody rattling a can full of stones at the head of the stretch and making a horse in front run out. My Dalmation dog, Charles Town, is a bit deaf, so I'm making him sleep in the middle of the room. If a burglar comes in he may trip over the dog and break his neck. See you on the rail.

BILL

First race—Mayfern turned in a good try last week and the possibility of an off track enhances her chances. In the money 11 times in 13 starts, she deserves the call. Nitanot has plenty of speed and the abbreviated route should help. Fall Hazard is a threat.

Second race—Cotillion, though still a maiden, should have won her last. She raced on the outside fence entering the stretch and was beaten only a neck. With better racing luck she will take care of these. Scarlet Flame is fairly consistent. Nanci's Best was off poorly last out and ran a winning race after getting under way.

Third race—The chief contention in this steeplechase is at the bottom of the reserve list. If Scurry Along and Forest Charm see action I will take them in the order named. Another Boy, recent second at Aqueduct, seems best of the others. I still have some faith in King Dominant, despite that recent poor try.

Fourth race—Blue Prelude has honest form and will be ready for the best regardless of track conditions. Deserves the call in this field. In Boulderdam, I believe I have a long shot that's going to do a lot of running. Beacon Queen has been rested since Bel Air and is a threat.

Fifth race—All Gennaro needs is a ride in this event. Downed some of the best around last out and gets an ordinary weight assignment. Bibiaze ran all over the track last out and previous to that beat Miss Maker. Colored Post is better than generally rated.

Sixth race—Miss Maker has been the No. 1 hard luck horse of the half-mile season. She should whip this kind, barring poor racing luck again. Navigation was almost stood on her ear when bumped leaving the gate last out. He can do a lot better than the face shows. Satin Royce, in with a feather assignment, could be dangerous.

Seventh race—Wale Signal defeated fair ones at a mile at Bel Air which indicates she will go this route. Came from behind to win her last and I'm going to string along. Huppy has been knocking at the door and deserves attention. Accidental barely failed to stay in that outing last week.

Eighth race—Best Policy appears to be a standout in the day's final. The chief contention, if such is to come, is far down the list in the persons of Last Scamp and America First.

Best bet—Gennaro.

Dodgers Take Giants Twice, 7-2 and 4-2

Tight Pitching and Timely Hitting Gives Flock Two Victories

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—The rivalry of the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants lured 53,623 fans to the Polo Grounds today and the Dodgers cleaned up, 7 to 2 and 4 to 2, in 11 innings.

Curt Davis' six-hit hurling and a three-run homer by Dolph Camilli in the fifth inning made Brooklyn's task easy in the first game. The Dodgers accumulated a dozen hits off four Giant pitchers including Carl Hubbell, whom they routed in the fifth.

One-hit relief pitching for five and one-third innings by Hugh Casey and timely hitting by Jim Wasdell decided the second game. Wasdell homered in the fourth and singled another run across in the eleventh when he came to bat with two on. Pete Coscarart followed with another single and the fourth run.

The Giants got all their runs and drove Luke Hamlin from the mound by bunching four hits in the sixth.

Brewers Win Again at Birmingham

Fort Wayne Bows, 6-2, in Tournament

Heurich Nine Comes Through 2d Round Easily Behind Laesy

Special Dispatch to The Post

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 8.—The Heurich Brewers from Washington came through the second round of the National Amateur Baseball Federation's tournament here today, defeating Fort Wayne, 6 to 2.

The Brewers were impressive afield and remain one of the favorites in the tourney.

Lacey was tight all the way to hold Fort Wayne in check, getting better as the game progressed, and pitching shut-out ball after the fourth inning, when a three-run splurge put the Brewers in the lead.

Posnak opened the winning rally with a single to right. Stahl shot a single into left, Posnak stopping at second. Cabell's hard hit single to center scored both men when the ball got through the Fort Wayne centerfielder. Cabell then scored what proved to be the winning run on a passed ball.

Knight started the fifth with a triple to center and Kaufman followed with a double to left. Barry sacrificed and Kaufman counted on Murphy's infield out.

Cabell singled in the sixth, went to third on a passed ball, and scored on Hershberger's wallop into right.

Teams eliminated by second defeats today were Atlanta, Empire, Ala.; Youngstown, Ohio; Chicago and Baltimore.

Seven games will be played tomorrow, narrowing the field again. A team drops out on the second loss. Pairings for tomorrow:

Royal Oak, Mich. vs. Dearborn, Mich.
Waterbury, Conn. vs. Washington.
Frostburg, Md. vs. Pittsburgh.
New York vs. Barberton, Ohio.
Detroit vs. Cleveland.
Dayton, Ohio vs. Fort Wayne, Ind.
Birmingham vs. Memphis, Tenn.

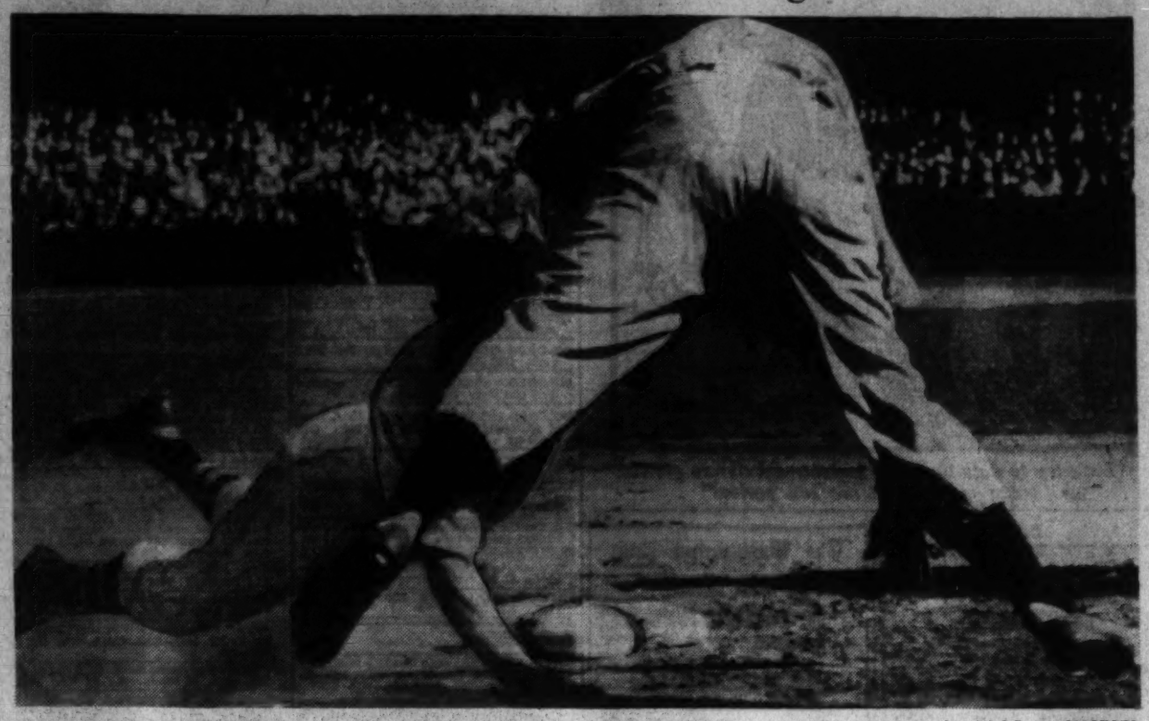
Acrobatics at Third Base as DiMag Is Retired



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

There was much dodging and jumping about third base in third inning of Yank-Bosox game at Boston yesterday when Joe DiMaggio (back to camera) tried to reach that bag from first on Charlie Keller's single. Charley Gelbert (left), covering third for the Red Sox, dived in to spear jumping Joe while he was still clear in the air

Dave Burrows Named Head Of Pin Group

Barnard and McAlwee Also Chosen Officers At W.C.D.A. Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Washington City Duckpin Association yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel, 39 league representatives elected Dave Burrows, president; Charles (Chilly) Barnard, vice president, Ben McAlwee, secretary, and Wesley Miltner, treasurer. All are new officers with the exception of Miltner, who has served in several capacities for 12 years.

Burrows, elevated from the vice presidency, succeeded Perce Ellett, who resigned after serving as head of the local bowling organization for five terms. Barnard, long identified with the game at the Government Printing Office, like Burrows, was a unanimous choice.

In a contested election with Joe Pricci, president of the Building Associations League, McAlwee won by a vote of 21 to 16. Pricci, long a leading bowler of the city and noted for his all-time city record three-game set of 497, asked that the election of McAlwee be read into the minutes of the meeting as unanimous. The delegates voted this request. McAlwee replaces Arville Ebersole, who had served in his important post for 14 years. Ebersole resigned to carry on his new duties as secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress.

John Roner, of the Rosslyn Independent League, and Leonard Pearce, of the Elks League, were voted new members of the executive committee. Oliver Green, of Silver Spring; Perce Wolfe, of Prince Georges County, and Harry Brown, of Southeast, retained their posts on the committee.

Before getting down to the business of the meeting, the assembly stood with bowed heads for one minute in memory of George L. Isemann, late secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress and at one time president of the city association.

The delegates set October 27 as the date for the Howard Campbell tournament, one of the Capital's standout bowling classics.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Joe Krakauskas was the standout performer for the Nats yesterday despite his failure to win credit for a victory. He draws down the chief award of points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Krakauskas, eight points, because he pitched one hit ball in a four-inning relief job in the first game, striking out seven Athletics and protecting a 1-0 lead he inherited, besides making a hit.

To George Case, five points, because he made two hits in the first game, including the double that tied the score and put the winning run in position to score in the fifth inning.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, three points, because he made three hits in the twin bill, driving in an important run with a double in the first game.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he drove in two runs in the first game.

To Rick Ferrell, four points, because he made three important hits in the first game.

To Jimmy Pofahl, three points, because he made an important single in the first game and played a brilliant game in the field.

To Jack Sanford, two points, because his catch of S. Chapman's line drive in the first game was the fielding feature of the day. The totals:

Gee Walker	25	Jimmy Pofahl	15
Jimmy Bloodworth	23	George Case	14
Sid Hudson	22	Jack Sanford	12
Dutch Leonard	22	Jimmy Pofahl	12
Buddy Lewis	20	Cecil Travis	12
Joe Krakauskas	18	Rick Ferrell	9
Ken Chase	17	Walter Masterson	5

Regatta Group To Meet Today

The last luncheon meeting of the season for committeemen and members of the President's Cup Regatta will be held this afternoon at 12:30 at the Harrington Hotel.

President John A. Remon, leader of the Regatta Association, will hear reports from various chairmen relative to the big events this month, the first of which opens Saturday afternoon with the sailing races off Hains Point.

Reports will be made by R. Aubrey Bogley, motor boat race chairman; Arthur H. Clephane, sailing chairman; A. Earl Weeks, swimming chairman; George Hernan, rowing; Dusty Rhodes, canoeing, and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., promotion chairman.

Bosox Buy Newsome, San Diego Mound Ace

Boston, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—The Boston Red Sox announced tonight the purchase of right-handed pitcher H. H. (Dick) Newsome from the San Diego (Calif.) Padres for an unnamed cash sum.

The 26-year-old Pacific Coast League player will report at spring training. This season he won 21 games and lost 10. Six of his victories were shutouts. In 235 innings pitched, Newsome gave 226 hits, struck out 119 batters and issued 48 bases on balls.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 8.—A Democratic rally will be held at North Beach, Calvert County, September 14, at 8 p. m. Speakers will include United States Senator George L. Radcliffe, Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, State Comptroller Millard E. Tawes and Preston Lane.

Lynchburg Takes Lead in Cup Play

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 8 (A.P.).—Lynchburg took a 2-to-1 edge in the President's Cup Virginia League series this afternoon by trouncing Harrisonburg, 10 to 8, before a crowd of 1,750.

Hard hitting marked the contest, Lynchburg putting on a winning rally in the sixth to score four times off Wilson Frances and take the lead for keeps.

Eddie Haswell was reached for 12 blows by the Turks, but staggered by until the ninth, when he walked the first man. He was relieved by Ed Galasso, who got Red Brandes to hit into a double play and then retired the side.

Wilburn Beattie, who relieved Everett Fagan in the fourth, was spiked by Crawford Howard while covering first to retire the side and had to leave the game.

Cedar Rapids Captures Three Eye League Flag

Chicago, Sept. 8 (A.P.).—Cedar Rapids, closing with a double victory over Evansville, won the Three-Eye League penant tonight in one of the closest races in many years.

The Raiders defeated Evansville, 7 to 1 and 5 to 2, while Springfield lost to Clinton, 3 to 0. Cedar Rapids and Springfield were tied for the top after Saturday's games.

them in with a sharp single to center.

The Sox equalized in the same inning when Cramer singled and came home on a Jimmy Foxx double, the Sox catcher counting on Doerr's single. The Yanks went ahead for good in the fourth when Gordon tripled and scored on Red Rolfe's double. George Selkirk singled to send Rolfe home. Gordon completed his cycle with a fifth-inning double.

In the eighth, the Sox pitching came apart at the seams and the Yankees picked up four tallies on only two hits. Four bases on balls and a wild pitch contributed to the scoring cluster.

Colonials, Eagles To Start Football Practice Today

Last of the local college elevens to start fall practice, George Washington and American universities will go into action today, the Colonials at the Polo Field at 9 a. m. and 3:30 p. m., and the Eagles on their own campus at 3 p. m.

Two drills daily until the opening of school September 23 is the schedule in store for G. W.'s gridders, Coach Bill Reinhart announced. Calisthenics and light conditioning will be the rule for the first few days, followed by blocking practice later in the week.

Scrimmages will begin either Saturday or at the start of next week. The morning drills will be utilized for conditioning purposes, while the afternoon work will be employed for contact work.

Morgan Schools Will Open Today

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sept. 8.—Schools of Morgan County—opening a week later than in other eastern West Virginia areas—will open tomorrow.

Faculty changes were announced as follows:

Miss Ruth Yost named to fill the seventh-grade teaching vacancy created by the resignation of E. Paul Michael.

Miss Helen Strange, of Richmond, Va., a graduate of William and Mary College, named instructor of girls' physical education classes at the high school.

An additional commercial teacher was named to the high school faculty, C. H. Printz of Charles Town, W. Va. A county-wide music teacher has been appointed. She is Miss Louella Lewis, of Morgantown, W. Va. Vocational agriculture has been added to the high school curriculum, to be taught by N. K. Speicher.

Business Only 'So-So'

By Roger W. Babson

Babson's View After U. S. Tour

Let me pass on to you a bird's-eye view of the United States. This is based upon the trip from which I have just returned. It was a great trip—4,000 miles by automobile from Boston to San Francisco, returning by train from Los Angeles. I covered 25 States, addressed 18 Chambers of Commerce and other big gatherings, gave radio broadcasts, and—most important of all—talked with the publishers of scores of important papers.

Speaking frankly, business is "so-so" about everywhere. It is what farmers would say—"neither hay nor grass." Retail trade is holding up well and manufacturers are hopeful; but peace industries are playing safe while the war industries have only partly got under way. I believe, however, that December 31 will justify my favorable forecast for the second six months and—in fact—my forecast for the entire year 1940.

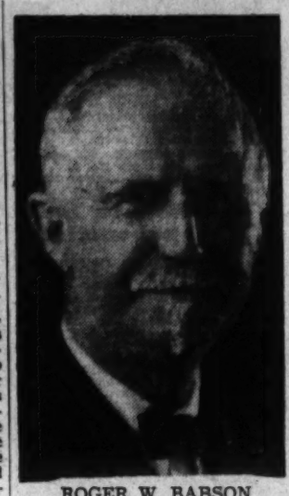
I was especially interested in visiting the airplane factories. Notwithstanding all the newspaper talk, I understand that the United States and Canada combined are now sending only about 10 airplanes a day to Great Britain. Perhaps only one or two of these will be bombers. Guns and ammunition are being manufactured in quantitites, but the "heavy armaments" are still in the blueprint stage. Very few people realize the many months required in planning and tooling for assembly line production of a ship or tank, or for almost anything else.

I have heard of very little labor unrest. It looks as if labor troubles had seen their peak for this cycle. Apparently neither of the two major political parties want the support of John L. Lewis. They both look upon him as a possible liability rather than as an asset. Neither labor leaders nor wage-workers want to be classed as "Fifth Columnists." Employers also are being more reasonable. As younger employers take the place of the old "die-hards," a better relation between capital and labor is very noticeable.

It is evident that employers, executives and foremen are attending to business more this summer than for many years. This has reacted upon the tourist industry. Everywhere were complaints that people are taking shorter vacations this summer. Yet, the managers of both the New York and San Francisco fairs and the national parks say that attendance is greater than they expected and appear much pleased. This means that the masses are taking vacations this year—more people, but less money spent.

I will not say that investors have the jitters; but they surely have some disease—perhaps sleeping sickness! Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange one day recently dropped to 130,000 shares, the lowest for nearly 25 years. Brokers show how the London Stock Exchange—even while being bombed—is steadier and more active than ours. They, however, do not tell you that the London exchange may be pegged by the government and—if the war continues long enough—the British government will have bought a majority of the shares of most of the English corporations.

Of course, the New York Stock Exchange figures do not tell the whole story. A vast amount of "over-the-counter" and private sale business is being carried on. Every day the United States and Canadian public are becoming more and more the owners of America's industries. Besides, as a rule, when New York



ROGER W. BABSON

Stock Exchange transactions are very low it is a good time to buy securities, commodities and land. I am returning from my trip bullish on carefully selected stocks and productive Canadian real estate, whoever is elected in November.

Well, I must tell you the truth about my attitude toward war. In all my addresses I would at some point insist that the United States should not let England be destroyed. I explained that the British navy would never desert the island. Hence, if we should let Hitler overrun England, we would lose the British navy, upon which our safety depends. Hence, for selfish reasons—to say nothing of moral reasons—we should come to the rescue of Great Britain on November 6 at the very latest.

When I made the above statement in New England, the audience applauded before I got it out of my mouth. When I was in Chicago and Kansas City I got some voluntary applause. In San Francisco and Los Angeles, however, I had to ask for applause. They were all for going over and licking Japan. Some group—whether politicians or military men, I do not know—had told these people that on account of Germany's careful advance preparations and vastly superior air force, England is beyond help. They forget that while airplanes may win battles, character wins wars! The English have vastly superior character—and we should not forget the ultimate power of the blockade.

This brings me to the thing that bothered me most about the trip. It was this: Too many people talk only money, crops, wages, profits and other things of temporary value. In fact, by the time I was at Los Angeles ready to take the train home, I was very unhappy and wondering how it all would end. But that last night something happened. I was taken to a most wonderful pageant of the life of Christ called "The Pilgrimage Play." This answered all my questioning and removed all my doubts. It seems as if God led me to see this on my last night of a long and solemn trip.

Peace Group To Intensify CampaignHere

2,500 More Adherents Expected to Arrive In D. C. This Week

Delegates of the American Peace Mobilization prepared last night for the arrival this week of 2,500 adherents from all over the country for a last-minute fight against conscription.

Undaunted by House adoption of the draft bill, the delegates, many of them in the candle-lighted headquarters at 1116 Vermont avenue northwest, scribbled hasty letters home calling for reinforcements and urging continued protest.

"The fight is far from lost," they were told by 31-year-old Oliver Haskell, a former social worker, now field work director of the A. P. M., at a meeting to plan this week's lobbying strategy.

Haskell, whose home is in Seattle, Wash., said that 2,500 delegates were here last week and that 2,500 others would arrive by car, bus, train and "thumb" this week. Only 150 of the first detachment were left yesterday.

"We came here for a two-day stand after the emergency peace mobilization in Chicago," Haskell said, "but the situation demanded that we remain all week, and now it demands that we continue the battle this week."

The make-shift headquarters rented Saturday on Vermont avenue were bare yesterday. Electricity had not yet been turned on, and candles were used for last night's meeting.

Haskell, a former supervisor of research for the WPA in Seattle, told the delegates that A. P. M. leaders would confer today with Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Representative Marcantonio (American Labor Party), of New York, on lobbying tactics.

Three national officers are expected to arrive today. They are the Rev. John B. Thompson, of Norman, Okla., chairman; Marion Briggs, of the Grand Rapids, Mich., Y. W. C. A., administrative secretary, and Frederick Field, of the Institute of Pacific Relations in San Francisco, executive secretary.

Haskell, the son of a Congregationalist missionary, said that last week's delegates, who were forced off Capitol grounds by police Thursday, came here spontaneously.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "I was sent here for a week's rest before an organizational tour of the country. But so many delegates came that we revised our plans completely."

Meanwhile, attorneys for the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties drafted a petition for an injunction to restrain police from prohibiting mass meetings in front of the Capitol.

The petition, it was said, would complain about "police brutality" in the Thursday affray.

Prince Georges Scouts To Be Md. U. Guests

Prince Georges County (Md.) Division of the Boy Scouts of America will be guest of the University of Maryland September 28. The day's activities will begin at 9 a. m. in the agriculture auditorium and will end with the football game between Maryland and Hampden-Sydney.

The Scouts will hear an address by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, at 9:45 and will pass in review before Dr. Byrd and members of the faculty. The Scouts will have a special reserved section set aside for them in the stadium.

U. S. Seeking Citizenship Rolls Purge

Requirements May Be Tightened To Combat Treason

By the Associated Press

Classing it as urgently needed to aid the drive on Fifth Columnists, the Administration is seeking quick passage of legislation to purge citizen rolls of many "doubtful" Americans and generally tighten citizenship requirements.

Under the stress of world conditions, Congressional right-of-way has been gained for a long-standing project to revise and codify existing nationality laws. It is expected to come up this week in the house where it has been pending since June.

Thousands of persons said by officials to be American citizens in name only would lose their citizenship, as would those serving in any foreign army, if the measure is enacted.

Under present law, Americans serving in a foreign army retain their citizenship unless they swear allegiance to a foreign sovereign.

The proposed change would affect many American volunteers in British military services—mainly the Canadian Expedionary Forces—who were not required to swear allegiance to King George VI.

More important, however, officials say, is the need for establishing stricter requirements regarding persons who have inherited citizenship but through long residence and political attachments abroad are alien to American principles.

Clarification of existing laws also is needed, officials contend, to eliminate difficulties in establishing whether some persons are citizens and thus entitled to United States protection abroad.

One provision would make loss of citizenship the penalty for voting in a political election in a foreign state.

Another, recommended by the War Department to check Fifth Column activities, would withdraw citizenship from persons born in any incorporated territory—Alaska and Hawaii—after six months residence in a foreign country of which either of their parents had been nationals. Government officials are seeking an amendment to make this applicable also to persons born anywhere in the United States.

Other important provisions would: Remove American nationality from naturalized citizens for protracted residence abroad.

Require longer periods of residence in the United States for a person to transmit citizenship to a child born abroad.

Establish stricter rules for acquiring citizenship both by naturalization and inheritance.

Officials said they had not calculated the number of persons who would lose their citizenship under the measure but it would run into many thousands.

Under existing laws, officials said that many persons with doubtful claim to citizenship have a right to enter this country, regardless of their character, political views or criminal record.

Ann Raborg Plans Saturday Wedding To E. N. Cory, Jr.

Miss Ann Lee Raborg, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Raborg, has selected Saturday for the date of her wedding to Ernest N. Cory, jr. Mr. Cory is the son of Dr. and Mrs. E. N. Cory, sr. Dr. Cory is a member of the staff of the Univeristy of Maryland and is State entomologist of that State. The bridegroom-elect is connected with the health department of Prince Georges County.

The wedding will take place at 4:30 p. m. at St. Philip's Church, Laurel, Md. Following the ceremony there will be a reception for the families and close friends at the Rossborough Inn, which, though newly restored, has been a famous hostelry since colonial days when its guest register included the names of the Marquis de Lafayette and George Washington.

Miss Rae Rubin Is Married Here To David Goldberg

The wedding of Miss Rae Rubin, daughter of Mrs. Rebecca Rubin, of Washington, to David Goldberg, of this city, took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at 1758 Hobart street, home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Morris Stirman. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Stirman, dispensed with attendants. She wore an aqua blue velveteen dress with a matching turban and a corsage of orchids.

A reception followed the ceremony. Later the couple left for a motor trip to Miami, the bride wearing a navy blue suit trimmed in white accessories to match. The couple will make their home at 412 Ingraham street.

Mr. Goldberg is the son of Mrs. Jane Goldberg and Charles Goldberg.

Dr. Harry Sacks To Wed Miss Boaz

Of interest to their friends in Washington and throughout the South is the announcement by Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Boaz, of Atlanta, Ga., of the engagement of their daughter, Isabell, to Dr. Harry Sacks, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. sacks, of Washington.

Miss Boaz received her education in Atlanta, and has traveled extensively both in this country and abroad.

Dr. Sacks is a graduate of the George Washington University School of Medicine, having received his hospital training in Boston, Mass., and Detroit, Mich. He is now engaged in the private practice of medicine in Washington, where the young couple will reside.

The wedding will take place in the near future.

SUPERMAN — What—No Skeleton? — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

CLARK KENT, LOIS LANE AND A NEW REPORTER, JOK TERRILL, ARE INVESTIGATING A SERIES OF MYSTERIOUS ACCIDENTS TO UTILITIES. WHEN LOIS AND JOK VENTURE WITHIN A FLAMING ELECTRIC PLANT, SUPERMAN LEAPS IN TO SAVE LOIS FROM THE FLAMES....BUT STUMBLES! REGAINING HIS BALANCE...
LET'S MOVE!
I'D BE BURIED UNDER THOSE RAFTERS—IF IT WEREN'T FOR YOU!
AND I'D BE MILES AWAY IN AN ARMCHAIR—IF IT WEREN'T FOR YOU!
A GROAN—FROM WITHIN THAT CLOSET!
WE'LL SEE WHO IT IS!
JOK TERRILL!
I REMEMBER A TERRIFIC BLOW ON THE BACK OF MY HEAD—THEN EVERYTHING WENT BLACK!
LET'S GET OUT OF HERE, BEFORE THINGS GET BLACK FOR YOU AGAIN—PERMANENTLY!

ARE YOU REALLY GOIN' TO GO BEFORE THE COURT WITH WALSH'S CASE?
I'LL HAVE TO. HE HASN'T A CHANCE OR SOME OTHER LAWYER WOULD HAVE TAKEN THE CASE BUT I'VE GOT TO GO TO COURT
YEAH THAT'S TRUE. YOU'VE GOT TO MAKE A SHOW. WE'RE BARELY ABLE TO PRACTISE NOW AND WE MIGHT GET DISBARRED.
THOSE HIGH AND MIGHTY BAR ASSOCIATION GUYS ARE ALWAYS STICKING THEIR NOSES AROUND LOOKING FOR PHONEYS LIKE US.
HOW MUCH WAS THE ACTUAL AMOUNT TIED UP?
WALSH'S SHARE OF THE FIGHT WAS $5,620 AND THE ATTACHMENT FROM RENO IS $12,300.
DON'T YOU THINK WE'D BETTER GET ANOTHER SMALL RETAINER WHILE THE GETTING'S GOOD?
I HARDLY NEED YOUR COUNSEL IN THAT RESPECT. I WAS HANDLING SUCKERS BEFORE YOU WERE BORN.

WINNIE WINKLE — Cupid's Messengers — BY BRANNER

I'LL BE WAITING RIGHT HERE! YOU TWO KNOW WHAT TO DO! MY FATE IS IN YOUR HANDS!!
YOU CAN RELY ON US, BOB!
WE'LL BRING HER BACK ALIVE!
IT'S ONLY A HALF-HOUR'S RUN OVER TO DOLDRUM!
GOOD NIGHT! THIS PLACE IS JUST CRAWLING WITH DETECTIVES!
I SUPPOSE THEY'RE WAITING TO GRAB BOB IN CASE HE CALLS TO SEE HIS PRISCILLA!
HOTEL
WELL, HERE WE ARE!
YES, AND BE DARN CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY—

MR. AND MRS. — The Name Escaped Her — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

WHY, VI!
WHY—ELSIE!
SO GLAD TO SEE YOU! YOU HAVEN'T CHANGED A BIT
NEITHER HAVE YOU. YOU'RE JUST THE SAME
I SUPPOSE YOU'RE STILL LIVING IN THE OLD NEIGHBORHOOD?
OH, YES. SORT OF A FIXTURE, I GUESS
WHY IN TIME DIDN'T YOU INTRODUCE ME?
WHY, I COULDN'T REMEMBER HER MARRIED NAME AND I THINK SHE'S BEEN DIVORCED

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

MY VIKING BLOOD IS STIRRED WHEN I SEE A SHIP LIKE THAT, STRANGER. TO A LANDSMAN A SHIP IS JUST A SHIP, BUT TO ME IT'S A LIVING THING. LOOK AT 'ER! 675 FEET OVER ALL, SPEED 23 KNOTS, 35,000 TONS! MAN, HOW'D YOU LIKE TO BE CAPTAIN OF THAT?

JANE ARDEN — Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. — She Won't Talk — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

I SEE IT ALL—THIS GIRL WAS HERE TO IDENTIFY US—
WITH HER OUT OF THE WAY, THEY'D HAVE A TOUGH TIME PROVING ANYTHING—LET ME HANDLE THIS, BOSS!
NOT HERE—TOO RISKY—WE'LL DO THIS MY WAY—
HELLO—MORLAND HOSPITAL—SEND AN AMBULANCE TO 703 EXCHANGE BUILDING—AN EMERGENCY CASE—
ARE YOU CRAZY, BOSS? WE DON'T WANT ANYONE INTERFERING HERE!
NOT WHEN I FINISH WITH HER—SHE'LL BE ASLEEP—LIKE THIS—THIS DAME WILL HOLLER HER HEAD OFF!

"Radio Theater," directed by Cecil B. DeMille, which year after year, ever since its creation in 1934, has won all the dramatic popularity polls in radio, returns over WJSV and the Columbia network tonight at 8 o'clock after its summer vacation.

Hollywood's dramatic team of teams—William Powell and Myrna Loy—with Don Ameche as a costar, will ring up the curtain for its 1940-1941 season in the stirring Arthur Caesar play, "Manhattan Melodrama." Perhaps you remember it from the movie version of not long ago, when Powell and Loy were in the same roles they'll reenact tonight.

It's the story of two boys from the slums, one of whom rises to be Governor—that's Powell—while the other works his way up to the top, too, but of the underworld. The paths of the boyhood pals come together again when the gangster is convicted of murder and the Governor is faced with the alternative of allowing his old friend to be electrocuted or of commuting his sentence. You can see it has all the ingredients for a very superior melodrama. Incidentally, if Miss Loy can be called incidental, she plays the part of the gal who knew them both. Whether we should tell you, I don't know, but it seems she eventually falls in love with the good boy—that's Mr. Powell again. And I hope Mr. Caesar approves of the way this has been summed up.

WALK WARILY

Suggestions from an Overworked Guardian Angel

ALERT-ALIVE. Two-thirds of all persons killed in city traffic are pedestrians, yet they can stop, look and turn much quicker than drivers. Why rely on the motorist for personal safety? Walk as warily today as your forefathers did when dodging Indians.

Canal Spies?

Vichy 'Envoys' Viewed Askance at Panama

Copyright by New York Times

Panama, Sept. 8.—The fact that the Petain government in France has recently assigned both military and naval attaches to the French Legation here raises several questions discussed by the Panama-American columnist, "Eduardo," today.

He points to the record of the present French government's subservience to the Nazis, and says that any work done by attaches here would be available for the Nazis who are bound for world conquest.

After citing the fact that Panama has no army or navy, he suggests that the only duties the military and naval attaches here could have would be in connection with the defense forces of the Panama Canal, to which, as far as is known, they are not accredited.

"If it was not necessary for the free France of Daladier to have military and naval attaches here, virtually on the banks of the Panama Canal," he asks, "what possible need can the defeated and Nazi-dominated France of Petain have for representatives at this nerve center of the United States defense system?

"The duty of a military attache is to procure information of military value to his country. If Hitler wants any information that these attaches may pick up in Panama, all he has to do is to tell the proper person in Vichy to deliver it."

The French Legation here has a charge d'affaires only, and has never had either military or naval attaches.

650 to Attend New Parochial School Today

The St. Francis Xavier School on Pennsylvania avenue extended will open its doors for the first time today as nearly 15,000 children return for the opening of 27 parochial schools in the District.

The new parochial school, conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, will register approximately 650 pupils in grades from first to sixth. A new grade will be added each year to the school, it was announced. The school was dedicated last March.

More than 11,000 of the group are entering for the first time or returning to elementary grades, while the remainder are of high school age.

U. S. Will Get 80% Of His $592,719, Barlow Claims

Baltimore, Sept. 8 (AP).—Inventor Lester P Barlow, who has been voted $592,719.21 by Congress for World War bomb patents, said today that 80 per cent of the money would go back to the Government in income taxes.

President Roosevelt signed a bill yesterday awarding Barlow the money, ending a legal battle that began in 1919.

"I may have to go into bankruptcy if I accept it," Barlow declared, "for with the 80 per cent income tax, lawyers' fees and debts I'll probably be in debt by the time this thing is finally settled."

Barlow said he sued the Government for $592,719 because the United States Army had used 592,719 aerial bombs during the World War, in violation of the inventor's patent rights.

Roof-Climber Fatally Hurt In 25-Foot Fall

A 42-year-old man who fell 25 feet to a concrete areway while attempting to climb the roof of an apartment building early yesterday morning, died last night.

The fall victim is Isadore Sandler, of 808 H street northwest. Police said he was trying to get to the roof about 3:40 a. m. yesterday by climbing out of a third-story apartment at the rear of 711 G street northwest.

Taken to Casualty Hospital, Sandler was treated for a broken neck, fractured pelvis and lacerations.

Many Felons Flee Devil's Island

San Juan, P. R., Sept. 8 (AP).—A shortage of food and medicines and a general demoralization prevail in the French penal colony of Guiana, according to reports reaching here. Devil's Island is the most notorious prison in the colony.

Jailers have relaxed their watch on the prisoners, these reports said, and many of the convicts are escaping. Twenty-two reached the Islands of Vieques, off Puerto Rico, yesterday.

PattersonBacks House 'Draft Industry' Plan

Senate's Plan Ignored By Assistant Secretary Of War in Speech

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War, declared today he could see "no valid objection" to the Smith "draft industry" amendment to the general conscription bill passed by the House.

"It is merely a provision for the exercise of eminent domain, the taking of property for public use with payment of fair value to the owner," he told the Junior Bar Conference, which assembled a day in advance of the annual meeting of the American Bar Association.

Six thousand lawyers are expected for the 4-day meeting, which will be keyed to the lawyer's place in the Nation's defense program.

Patterson did not mention the Overton-Russell proposal for industrial conscription which the Senate passed in its version of the Conscription Act. That would provide for Government condemnation of plants if they refused defense orders.

Stipulates Smith Plan

He spoke only of a measure "pending in the House" which would permit the Government to take over the plants, operating them on a rental basis. It also contains penalties for refusal to cooperate. An aide said later Patterson specifically meant the Smith amendment.

Differences between the two versions of the general Conscription Act, including the "draft industry" sections, now must be settled between the House and Senate.

"The same obligation that takes the soldier into the field for training takes industry into the production of military equipment," Patterson asserted.

He spoke of "wholehearted and thorough" cooperation of industry in the defense program and expressed the belief that any industrial conscription act "would be rarely, if ever, put into operation."

He declared there still are two major legislative problems to be solved before industry "can go full speed ahead" toward defense objectives—amortization of industrial expansion and profit limitations.

Biddle to Speak

Of the first, he said, the War Department is confident Congress will find a "satisfactory solution."

Of the second, he declared that "a fair tax on excess profits, applicable to business enterprises that do not deal with the Government, as well as those that do, distributes the cost of the armament program evenly, and dispenses with any need of profit limitations."

Others who will speak during the meeting include Solicitor General Francis Biddle, Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge, and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, chairman of the American-Canadian Defense Board.

Charles Town Man Bids Low for County Work

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 8.—Fred Propps, Charles Town contractor, was low bidder on the upper floors of Jefferson County's office building being erected at the corner of George and Congress streets, and was awarded the contract yesterday afternoon when bids were opened by the county court. Propps' bid was $28,485.

The contract was awarded for two floors of the building above the basement. The basement floor was offered separately on contract several months ago and is completed.

Bishop Leonard Consecrates New McKendree Church Plant

Led by Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, new resident prelate of the Washington area, Methodist Church, consecration exercises for the new $125,000 McKendree Methodist Church and educational building were held yesterday morning.

Packing the Gothic-styled structure at South Dakota and Rhode Island avenues northeast, more than 600 men, women and children watched the formal presentation of the church to the congregation by George A. Simonds, president of the board of trustees.

The Rev. Samuel E. Rose, pastor, formally accepted the building and then joined with the congregation in speaking the sacred words of consecration. Later in the day he baptized a group of children.

Earlier in the service, Dr. H. H. Rowland, patsor of the old Langdon Methodist Episcopal Church, which merged with McKendree in 1938, led responsive readings, and Dr. Edgar C. Beery, superintendent of the East Washington District of the Methodist Church, Baltimore Conference, offered a prayer.

Bishop Leonard, noted leader of religious education in the Methodist Church, stressed the need of religious foundations in secular education today in his sermon, which climaxed the service. Dr. Beery conducted a building fund offering.

Dedication of the organ, with Stanley Bell in charge, drew another throng to the church last night. Dr. Beery brought the principal address, and the Rev. W. Clark Main, former Langdon pastor and now minister of the Memorial Methodist Church of Hyattsville, Md., the prayer.

The building committee of the new edifice includes Charles A. Sutton, Roy I. Green, G. F. Johnson, Stanley Bell, H. S. Miller, Wiley Copeland, the Rev. Mr. Rose, George A. Simonds, S. H. Casey, Henry W. Evans, Mrs. John E. Thompson, E. J. Robb, Philip Ayers, Mrs. Simonds, and George B. Sammons.

Since holding last services at its old site in the 900 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest on April 3, 1938, the McKendree group has been worshiping in the Masonic Hall in Woodbridge. Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Bishop Leonard's predecessor, laid the new structure's cornerstone last October 1.

Clear Today Forecast After Rainy Sunday

Heavy showers that yesterday rained Washingtonians out of most nearby beaches and amusement resorts will pass today, the Weather Bureau said last night.

It was a stay-at-home Sunday for most. The Zoo and other favorite outing spots had unusually few guests, officials reported.

Old Daladier Decree Leads To His Arrest

Law He Authored Invoked to Hold Him, Reynaud and Gamelin

By the Associated Press

Riom, France, Sept. 8.—Three deposed top leaders of old France held in the "war blame" cases—Former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud and Former Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin—were taken into custody under a decree authored by Daladier himself, it was disclosed today.

The three former officials, arrested yesterday, are being held in strict "administrative internment" at Chateau Chazeron, a feudal stronghold near Chatelguyon, five miles from this seat of the war guilt trials.

Their detention was ordered under authority of a decree law enacted by Daladier after war broke out September 3, 1939, providing for internment of persons considered dangerous to the national defense and public security.

The authoritarian Petain government issued a supplementary decree last Tuesday stating the Daladier law remains in force until a peace treaty is signed and that persons under its provisions could be placed in special administrative internment.

Thus, while no definite charges have been placed against the officials as yet, it was possible to put them under guard. The supreme court is conducting an investigation of those responsible for France's unpreparedness and entry into the war and on the results of its findings will depend the charges and eventual trials.

The only persons against whom definite charges have been placed are former Air Ministers Pierre Cot and Guy La Chambre, who are understood to be in the United States.

Former Interior Minister Georges Mandel, accused of plotting against the security of the state, faces charges before a military tribunal and it is believed he might also be brought before the Riom Court. He is in custody at Meknes.

If his case is merged with the general war blame cases and switched to the Supreme Court, he would be transferred here.

Jean Zay, another former interior minister, is being tried on a purely military charge of desertion at Clermont-Ferrand and it was not considered likely that he would have to face the supreme court.

Just how many persons eventually will be brought to trial at Riom is unknown. A large number are being questioned and it would not be contrary to general belief if many more temporary detentions are ordered.

The inquiry covers a broad field running from military responsibilities to political, financial, diplomatic and even economic and social aspects of the situation preceding and accompanying the war.

Events and administrations running back at least ten years before the war are being studied closely.

Rites to Be Held At Chevy Chase For Mrs. Woodson

Following a long illness, Mrs. Cecelia A. Woodson, 76, widow of Walter Nelson Woodson, died Friday at the home of her son, Albert P. Woodson, 6708 Meadow lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

The funeral will take place at 1 p .m. today from All Saints Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, rector of the church, will conduct the services and burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Woodson, who was formerly a Miss Parker, of Washington, is survived by a daughter, Mrs. William K. Karsunky, Washington, and two sons, Pendleton N. Woodson, Washington, and Albert P. Woodson.

Contract Bridge

There have been a good many "grape" stories concerning the nonexistent fifth suit that professional card interests tried so hard to sell to bridge players a year or so ago The "grape" stories usually involve inebriated gentlemen and are almost invariably funny, but this one concerns a New York tournament player during a national championship and we have it from an unimpeachable source that it is absolutely true.

East must have been in a gay mood, or perhaps he was a little giddy from seven days' strenuous bridge, but his opponents were not in the least equipped to enjoy his humor. They were stern, set and determined to win a match point in any fashion within the law. The bidding proceeded at this inharmonious table like this:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	4 Grapes

Maybe East was just tired of passing or maybe the grimness of the adversaries annoyed him. At any rate his bid of four grapes, uttered blandly and without expression, was like a firecracker exploding under his opponents. They promptly called the tournament director and reported that their rights had been abused.

The director, when he heard the complaint, could scarcely restrain a smile. He ruled that playful East had not named a suit, and, therefore, it must be considered as a facetious remark and should be ignored as far as the auction was concerned.

But this did not satisfy North and South, who continued to demand a penalty, insisting the bid of four grapes was insufficient. Surprisingly, East readily agreed, and immediately bid five grapes.
